U. S. Officials Keep Vigil As Invasion Tale Pours In

'This Is the Night,' Envoy at Brussels Telephoned to State Department Here

BULLETIN

A conference of leaders in the State, War and Navy departments has been called for 10:30 a. m. today at the White House by President Roosevelt, "to consider pressing problems on neutrality." The President early today telephoned Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and ordered him to act before the markets open this morning to impound credits and cash balances held by the countries invaded last night.

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt was told about 9 o'clock last night by the Ambassador to Belgium, John Cudahy, that a German invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg was expected during the night.

Ambassador Cudahy telephoned the President that the Belgian cabinet was in session and that high officials in Belgium felt that "this was the night." He said officials in Brussels were "standing by."

At 10:50 p. m. Cudahy telephoned Secretary Hull at the Secretary's home and said he had been informed by one high Belgian official that one German and one Luxembourg citizen had been reported killed in Luxembourg. He said heavy German air forces at that moment were over Luxembourg, that German planes were flying over Belgium, and were reported flying over Holland.

Expected at Dawn

There had been large concentrations of armed forces on all frontiers of Luxembourg, Belgium, and Holland, and officials were expecting land forces to attack on each of the three fronts at any time, probably at daybreak, Cudahy said. The government had left Luxembourg, except for the foreign minister (but Cudahy did not say to where).

Secretary Hull was driven to the State Department shortly before midnight.

In his office in the southwest corner of the gloomy old building when he arrived were several assistants who had been summond from their homes.

These were Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State; James Dunn, State Department political adviser; Jay Pierrepont Moffat, chief of the division of European affairs; Breckenridge Long, special assistant to Hull, and Michael McDermott, chief of the division of current information.

President Roosevelt was constantly on the telephone in his study on the second floor of the White House.

House Passes Farm Boost

$297,000,000 Added By Senate Approved; Grain Bloc Wins Most

By John B. Oakes

Economy forces proved no match for the farm bloc yesterday when the House approved Senate amendments adding $297,000,000 to the 1941 agriculture appropriation bill.

When the House adjourned after 7 p. m. without completing action on the agriculture conference report, it had already written into the farm measure the unbudgeted sum of $212,000,000 for farm parity payments and $85,000,000—of which $13,000,000 was unbudgeted—for the food stamp plan and other means of disposing of surplus commodities.

Total of the bill neared $1,000,000,000, with several proposed additions, including $50,000,000 for farm tenant loans, still to come.

The bitterly disputed farm parity appropriation, which the House failed to approve when the original bill was considered in February, was passed by a bipartisan vote of 207 to 176.

But after indorsement of this $212,000,000 grant to the farmers, a warm debate broke out over division of the spoils. Cotton State Representatives tangled sharply with wheat Representatives on an amendment which would have the effect of reducing total payments for cotton in order to benefit wheat and corn farmers.

A debate which focussed principally on the bald question of how much each side would get out of the parity fund resulted in victory for the grain bloc on a voice vote.

Even at that, cotton growers are expected to receive $78,600,000 in parity payments. Wheat farmers will get an estimated $54,000,000, and corn farmers, $61,000,000. Tobacco growers will get $6,400,000 and rice planters, $2,000,000.

Hopson Faces Fraud Charges

U. S. Jury Indicts Founder of Utility Empire, 3 Aides

By the Associated Press

New York, May 9.—Howard C. Hopson, master financier who ran an investment of a few thousand dollars up to control of a billion dollar utility empire, was indicted by a Federal grand jury today on charges of taking illegal profits of more than $20,000,000.

Indicted with him were two lawyers and a former investment banker for his now bankrupt Associated Gas and Electric system, charged with assisting him in his operations. The indictment accuses the four men of fraudulent use of the mails on 18 counts, and of conspiracy.

Prosecutors said this was the first time lawyers and bankers charged with having prepared the setup for a "gigantic mail fraud" had ever been indicted along with the principal defendant.

The lawyers named are Charles M. Travis and Garrett A. Brownback, and the former banker, Frederick S. Burroughs, once with the now defunct investment firm of Harris Forbes & Co.

The indictment of 58-year-old Hopson, one of the most spectacular of public utility titans during the rapid growth of superpower corporations during the 20's, brings to a climax a series of conflicts with the Government. He was "missing" from August until September of 1933, when Ferdinand Pecora sought to question him in the Senate stock market investigation.

Committees of both houses of Congress sought to question him in 1935 about public utility propaganda and lobbying activities, and after much scurrying about to serve a subpoena on him, he was finally subjected to a withering examination by Senators headed by Hugo L. Black.

Grass Gestapo

Ickes Tells Park Cops to Snitch On Workers Trampling Lawns

Secretary Ickes' keep-off-the-grass campaign approached the snitching stage yesterday.

Determined to keep the city's park areas inviolate against shortcutting pedestrians, the Interior Department head ordered the names of Government workers who have been caught redfooted, as it were, divulged to their various chief clerks.

At Ickes' instigation, Francis F. Gillen, acting superintendent of National Capital Parks, dispatched a form letter to administrative officers of 30 departments and agencies. Attached to each copy was a list of names of employes who have been warned by Park Police about short cuts across lawn areas.

"Park lawns are maintained out of public funds for the purpose of contributing to the beauty of the National Capital," the warning said. "Shortcutting to save a few steps is destructive of their appearance.

"It will be greatly appreciated if you will bring this matter to the attention of the employes listed, impressing upon them the fact that by their thoughtlessness they are destroying Government property and requesting that they refrain from repetitions of the offense."

Park Police have made no arrests so far, but, the letter warned, they'll have to begin handing out tickets if the shortcutters don't mend their ways. The offense is punishable by a fine.

Danish Island Assured English Will Stay Only Till Peril Ends

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), May 10.—A British force has landed in Iceland, it was announced officially today. The announcement said the Icelandic government was given explicit guarantees that the force had been landed to insure the security of Iceland against a German invasion.

The force will be withdrawn upon the conclusion of hostilities.

The British government made it plain it has no intention or desire to interfere with the existing administration and that it is prepared to negotiate at once with the Icelandic government an agreement on trade matters which will bring material advantages.

British Explain Action

The foreign office issued the following announcement:

"Since the German seizure of Denmark it has become necessary to reckon with the possibility of a sudden German descent upon Iceland.

"It is clear that in the face of an attack on Iceland even on a very small scale, the Icelandic government would be unable to prevent their country falling completely into German hands.

"His majesty's government have accordingly decided to preclude this possibility which would deprive Iceland of her independence by themselves landing a force in Iceland and this operation was carried out this morning.

"His majesty's government have given explicit guarantees to the Icelandic government that this force has been landed to insure the security of Iceland against a German invasion and that any further measures that may have to be taken will be designed for that purpose. This force will be withdrawn upon the conclusion of hostilities.

No "Interference" Intended

"His majesty's government have made it plain that they have no intention or desire to interfere with the existing administration of the island; further, that they are prepared at once to negotiate with the Icelandic government an agreement on trade matters which, it is anticipated, will bring material advantages to the inhabitants."

The only defense force at the disposal of the authorities of Iceland, sister kingdom of Denmark, consists of about 70 police.

Brussels Citizens Stand in Streets To Watch Shells Smash at Planes

BULLETIN

Paris (Friday), May 10 (U.P.).—The War Office plan prepared in advance to protect Belgium if invaded by Germany has been put into operation, it was announced today.

By the Associated Press

Brussels, May 10.—Belgium was invaded by German planes today about 5 a. m. (11 p. m. Eastern Standard Time Thursday).

Belgians stood in the streets of Brussels in their night clothes watching blobs of antiaircraft fire in the sky as military cars and motorcycles dashed through the streets.

Troop recall posters were posted throughout the city.

The Belgian Foreign Ministry said the invasion was launched by bombardment of the Brussels airport.

Great clouds of smoke could be seen rising from the airport while antiaircraft batteries kept up a continual pounding against the invaders.

"Many houses were wrecked and a number of persons killed and others wounded in the German bombing of Brussels," Exchange Telegraph said.

"German aircraft were heard over Brussels early this morning and air raid sirens were sounded. Antiaircraft batteries began firing. Within a few minutes a shower of bombs fell on and near the Brussels airport."

The Belgian cabinet heard that large concentrations of German troops were on the Belgian frontier.

The Defense Ministry immediately declared a "state of alarm" throughout the nation which in the World War learned the tragic cost of a German invasion.

Reports said that the neighboring Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, wedged between the warring powers, also had been invaded by parachute troops which landed at Hassels.

The Belgian cabinet went into emergency session as soon as the first news came through that the Netherlands was invaded.

Antwerp airport also was bombed. Artillery fighting was begun on the Belgian-French frontier.

(From London came a Reuters (British news agency) dispatch from Paris saying that Belgium had asked assistance from France and Britain.)

[London later announced officially that the British-French Allies would give Belgium and the Netherlands full help against Germany.]

Several houses around the Brussels airport were destroyed.

Air Raid Alarm Sounds in Paris

Paris, May 10 (AP).—The second longest air raid alarm of the war, one hour and 48 minutes, roused Paris early this morning. Antiaircraft fire was heard above the sound of wailing sirens.

The alarm first sounded at 4:48 a. m. (11:48 p. m. E. S. T.) and ended at 6:36 a. m. (1:36 a. m. E. S. T.). It was the first alarm in Paris since February 27, and the tenth of the war. Alarms also were sounded in northern France.

Lowlands Bases 125 Miles From England

Germans Declare They Took Step to 'Get There First'

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 10.—Germany launched military operations today against the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg to "safeguard" their "neutrality."

The official explanation for the sweeping campaign was that the British and French allies were planning to attack Germany through the territories of the three.

"In order to ward off the impending attack, German troops received orders to safeguard the neutrality of "Belgium and the Netherlands," said an announcement by DNB, official German news agency.

"Since the offensive decided upon by France and England shall also include Luxembourg, the Reich government sees itself forced to expand the military operations under way for staving off attack also to include Luxembourg territory."

That was the way DNB concluded the announcement which had been anticipated by Dutch correspondents already listening to their homeland radio broadcasts that German parachute troops had landed and were fighting in numerous places.

At the outset of the brief announcement DNB said that Germany had submitted to the Belgian and Netherlands governments memoranda claiming evidence that the British and French were planning immediate attack on the Reich through territories of the two neutrals.

German Propaganda Minister Dr. Joseph Goebbels said in a radiocast that Germany knows about the plans of England and France to extend the war to other fronts.

Germany frustrated those plans in Scandinavia, Goebbels said.

Therefore, he added, Germany has taken action against Belgium and the Netherlands.

"We have proof of the British attempts."

He said Belgium and the Netherlands have plotted against the German government, and have fostered a German revolution. He further charged that the low countries fortified their frontiers only against Germany.

Therefore, he said, they are enemies and early this morning German troops were ordered to move against them.

He demanded that the governments of Belgium and Holland order their troops not to resist, adding that any resistance would be broken.

Chamberlain Offer to Resign Reported After Laborites Balk

By Raymond Daniell.

London, May 9.—The consensus of informed political opinion here tonight was that the end of the Chamberlain government could not be long delayed.

The two questions uppermost were how soon it would take place and who would succeed Chamberlain at No. 10 Downing street.

The betting was it would be sooner than later, and that Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax would be the next prime minister, with First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill serving as spokesman in the House of Commons, where traditionally the present foreign secretary, as a peer, is barred from the floor.

The troubles of the 71-year-old premier, who struggled vainly to maintain Europe's peace by appeasement and who was accused yesterday of bungling the business of making war, increased rather than diminished during the day as the House, despite the gravity of the internal crisis and the perils abroad, decided to take the usual 12-day Whitsuntide holiday, subject to recall in the event of major developments.

Chamberlain's efforts to broaden the base of his cabinet by bringing in members of the opposition, it was learned tonight, brought a blunt

Hitler's Air Force Bombs Holland Airports, Main Field Set Afire

Amsterdam (Friday), May 10 (U.P.).—Germany invaded Holland early today, land troops being preceded by a blitzkrieg air attack on Dutch airdromes and the landing of parachute troops at a number of points.

The Dutch resisted to the limit of their strength, antiaircraft batteries and fighter planes engaging swarms of Nazi aircraft when they appeared simultaneously over a score of Dutch cities.

The Government Press Service announced officially that Holland was at war with Germany.

The proclamation added: "Since 3 a. m. German troops have crossed the Dutch frontier and German planes have tried to attack airports. Inundations are effective, according to plans. The army antiaircraft batteries were found prepared. So far as is known six German planes have been shot down."

Queen Wilhelmina's Statement

Queen Wilhelmina said in a statement early today that "I and my government will do our duty." Her proclamation follows:

"After our country, with scrupulous conscientiousness, had observed strict neutrality during all these months, and while Holland had no other plan than to maintain strictly this attitude, Germany, last night, made a sudden attack on our territory without any warning.

"This was done notwithstanding a solemn promise that the neutrality of our country would be respected so long as we ourselves maintained that neutrality.

"I herewith direct a flaming protest against this unprecedented violation of good faith and violation of all that is decent in relations between cultured states.

"I and my government now will do our duty.

"Do your duty everywhere and under all circumstances. And let everyone go to the post to which he has been appointed and, with the utmost vigilance and with that inner calm and serenity which comes from a clear conscience, do his work."

The proclamation was addressed "To My People."

At 6:20 a. m. armored cars and motorcycle brigades were speeding from Amsterdam toward the Schiphol Airport.

Troops Moving In

German troops were first reported crossing the Dutch frontier near Roermond, 8 miles north of the Belgian frontier. German planes landed troops by parachute at strategic points near Rotterdam, The Hague, Amsterdam and other large cities.

A responsible source in The Hague told the United Press by telephone that "we have not yet established contact with the military authori-

WILLKIE THE DARK HORSE

II—"Thoroughly Presidential?"

If Wendell Willkie were nominated and elected President, he would be apt to offer the post of Secretary of State to "a man like" Owen D. Young. He can't be quoted on this, but there is little doubt that he has mentioned Mr. Young's name in this connection.

Harlan Miller

But Owen Young happens to be a Democrat, and Mr. Willkie is so definitely not an isolationist, either in the present crisis or as a matter of long range policy, that some think he might even offer the post to "a man like" Henry R. Luce, the 42-year old publisher of Time, Fortune and Life magazines, who is much less an isolationist than Mr. Young.

• • • •

It was Luce who really gave the Willkie boom its big boost, with a long article by Willkie in the April issue of Fortune, and a long editorial about him in the same issue which concluded "Mr. Willkie certainly deserves the respect and attention of his countrymen." And Time magazine has called him "thoroughly presidential."

• • • •

Willkie's struggles with the New Deal and specifically with the SEC have been titanic. But he has asserted that if the next administration (some one else's, not Willkie's) tried to abolish the SEC he would take the stump against that. He wants it narrowed and altered, not abolished.

That seems to be his attitude toward most of the New Deal.

Now one of Luce's most brilliant editors, Russell Davenport, has left the magazine, first on a three months' furlough and now by a resignation which seems to be temporary, to devote his whole time to nurturing the Willkie boom.

There can be no doubt that Luce is behind Willkie.

Also, Willkie has thought of Tom Dewey as his Attorney General and of John Cowles, the Minneapolis publisher, for his Cabinet; the latter for Agriculture.

The average age of Dewey, Cowles and Luce is under 41, which would make it a very young cabinet indeed, so far.

It is characteristic that Willkie first got acquainted with Luce after complaining about something that had appeared about him in Luce's magazines.

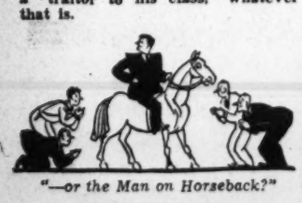
• • • •

It is part of the American folklore that once a man has been a part of big business, no matter how democratic his origins, his loyalty remains with big business to the end of the trail.

This leads some "liberals" to suspect that Willkie, despite his liberal views, might as President become the "man on horseback" to save the Republic for rugged individualism, the old-fashioned kind.

• • • •

But Willkie admirers point out that George Washington was the richest man of his time; that Herbert Hoover, probably the wealthiest President of modern times, was far from popular with big business; and that Franklin Roosevelt was called a "traitor to his class," whatever that is.



"—or the Man on Horseback?"

Some who have looked him over at close range are convinced that he is more likely to be, as President, a "traitor to his class"—that is, that his sympathies for the masses would outweigh his sympathies for harassed big business, if it came to a showdown. Certainly he is no Roosevelt hater.

Certainly the broad responsibilities of the Presidency, they say, tend to make a President forget Groton and Harvard, or Commonweath & Southern and the financial district, and to think of the people as a whole.

• • • •

That, I should judge, would be true of Willkie, as it probably would be true of Tom Dewey, who has even heavier money behind his candidacy than Willkie. After all, he was a Democrat until two years ago, and still thinks of himself as an Indianian, and as an out-of-towner in New York. He would, of course, never be unsympathetic to the dilemmas of business.

• • • •

Willkie doubts that any miracle of budget balancing can be accomplished overnight. Taft to the contrary; he expects a moderate inflation; he favors tax revision, abolition of tax exempt bonds, opposes the capital gains tax.

And as he sits at 20 Pine street amid the skyscrapers, he talks about these things much as if he were sitting next to a cracker barrel on the Main street of his Indiana youth.

U. S. to Sell Surplus Corn To Britain

20,000,000 Bushels To Be Shipped Under Subsidy Program

By the Associated Press

The sale of 20,000,000 bushels of surplus American corn to the United Kingdom was announced yesterday by the Agriculture Department under a newly inaugurated export subsidy program.

The corn will be shipped by private exporters. It will be taken from Government-owned stocks which total about 86,000,000 bushels. Officials withheld other details of the transaction until all arrangements for shipment were completed.

With American agricultural exports affected adversely by the war, the department yesterday extended its export subsidy program to include corn in an effort to regain foreign markets and reduce mounting surpluses.

The department has been subsidizing exports of wheat during the past two years and cotton during the past season.

Higher Than Competitors

Inasmuch as American corn now is being quoted in foreign markets from 20 to 25 cents a bushel above Argentine and other competitive grain, little of the feed crop has been moving abroad. The Government price-supporting loan program has held the American price above world levels.

At Chicago the announcement produced a rally in corn prices that established new highs for almost three years.

After an advance of almost 2 cents, due to reports that the subsidy program was under consideration, the market developed a reactionary tone early but then rallied about a cent after announcement of inauguration of the plan. July corn sold around 68 cents compared with about 52 a year ago. Corn was quoted at 45 cents the day before the European war broke out.

Sales at Low Prices

Officials said that at current prices, the Government would sell the grain to exporters at between 20 and 25 cents a bushel below what it has invested in the grain. The losses would be taken from funds appropriated for disposal of agricultural surpluses.

There was no indication how much corn the department expects to sell. Officials said they were considering deals involving immediate shipment of about 30,000,000 bushels.

Announcement of the subsidy program came when officials were forecasting that the carry-over of old corn next October 1 would be at least 675,000,000 bushels by far the largest of record.

Neutrality Act Hampers Finn Use of Credits

Hjalmar Procope, Finnish Minister to the United States, said yesterday that Neutrality Act restrictions on shipping were hampering Finnish use of their $30,000,000 Export-Import Bank credits.

He estimated that abodt $16,000,000 of the credits were still unused. The Finns have asked to take this in cash. Jesse Jones, Federal Loan administrator, indicated approval but wants Congress to pass on the question.

Under the neutrality restrictions American ships are forbidden to go to Finland. Thus, while Finland may buy goods here with the Export-Import Bank credits, she faces heavy transportation difficulties.

The Gallup Poll

Aid to Allies Is Popular With Public, But Sentiment Opposes U. S. Entering War

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., May 9.—With public sentiment overwhelmingly against American entrance into the war, it is almost certain that both political parties will take a vigorous stand to keep the country at peace. On this issue there is likely to be little debate or controversy. The real issue which is almost certain to be debated in the campaign is the extent to which the United States can, or should, help England and France short of going to war herself.

DR. GALLUP

Many G. O. P. leaders are trying to assess isolationist sentiment in their party and in the country. Is the public mood after eight months of war predominantly for giving no more help than at present to the Allies, or is it for furnishing all the help the Allies need except sending our Army or Navy?

To get some indication of sentiment on this vital issue, the American Institute of Public Opinion put the following question before the voters in all areas of the country. The question is necessarily hypothetical; no one can anticipate the turn of events which might cause opinion to shift. The results are therefore to be regarded merely as an indication of present attitude.

"If you were voting for President, which type of candidate do you think you would be more likely to vote for?

"1. A candidate who promises to keep us out of war and refuses to give more help to England and France than we are now giving them, even if they are being defeated by Germany.

"2. A candidate who promises to keep us out of war, but who is willing to give England and France all the help they want, except sending our Army and Navy."

Each voter was handed a ballot containing these two alternatives and asked to study them carefully and give his response. The vote of those expressing a choice was:

Candidate Favoring Greater Help for England and France if Needed.....66%
Candidate Opposing Additional Help for England and France 34

Approximately one voter in every 10 (9 per cent) expressed no opinion.

The chief significance of the survey lies in the vote by political parties. Although many Republican leaders have been attempting to make the G. O. P. appear to be the party of peace and isolation and to paint the Democrats as a party of intervention and war-mindedness, the study today finds virtually no difference in viewpoint among the rank and file of voters in the two parties.

Both Republicans and Democrats, by majorities of about two to one, say they favor a candidate who is willing to give all help to England and France, in the event they need such help, short of actually going to war.

On virtually all issues dealing with foreign policy such similarity of rank and file sentiment in the two parties has been found.

Today's comparison is as follows:

	Democrats Prefer	Republicans Prefer
Candidate Favoring Greater Help for England and France if Needed	68%	64%
Candidate Opposing Further Help for England and France	32	36

One interesting sidelight is that isolationist sentiment is higher among the low-income groups than among the upper. The higher the economic status of the voter, the more he is inclined to favor aid for England and France.

	Favoring Help	Opposing Further Help
Upper Income Voters	72%	28%
Middle Income Voters	66	34
Lower Income Voters	63	37

House Returns Transport Bill To Conference

Measure Regarded As Virtually Dead For This Session

By the Associated Press

The House yesterday virtually killed, so far as this session of Congress is concerned, a general transportation bill designed, among other things, to bring water carriers under the regulation of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

By a vote of 209 to 182, the members sent the measure back to a Senate-House Conference Committee with instructions to reinsert provisions protecting water carriers, railroad labor and agriculture.

Majority Leader Rayburn of Texas expressed doubt that the legislation would be considered before adjournment of this session of Congress, although Representatives Lea (Democrat), of California, and Crosser (Democrat), of Ohio, two House conferees, said there still was a possibility that an agreement might be reached.

The legislation's rejection by the House resulted primarily from the decision of Senate and House conferees to strike out three amendments written in on the House floor last summer.

One, sponsored by Representative Harrington (Democrat), of Iowa, would require the I. C. C. to obtain assurances, before approving a consolidation of carriers, that no jobs would be eliminated.

Another, by Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, would permit water lines to reduce their rates to meet rail competition as long as the charges were compensatory.

The third, offered by Chairman Jones (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, would guarantee that farm products moving to seaports for export would enjoy the same low transportation charges applicable to manufactured products destined for export.

District Man Pleads Guilty In Slaying

2 Other Defendants From D. C. to Make Their Pleas Later

John A. Lagana, 37, Washington produce dealer, pleaded guilty yesterday in Philadelphia to charges of homicide in the strangulation five years ago of an elderly Philadelphia housekeeper who refused to disclose the hiding place of valuables in her employer's apartment.

Pleading guilty with Lagana was Santo Ruggerio, 31, of Astoria, N. Y.

Two other Washingtonians, Joseph Guida, 48, and his wife, Mrs. Helen Maurine Guida, 38, of 4801 Wisconsin avenue northwest; also charged with murder, appeared before three judges of Quarter Sessions Court in Philadelphia. They were permitted to hear Lagana and Ruggerio, and to make their own pleas later.

Mrs. Effie H. Smith, 59, of 3530 New Hampshire avenue northwest, operator of a cafeteria near the White House, is a fifth defendant in the robbery of 61-year-old Miss Winifred Flannery. She did not appear at the arraignment.

Lagana and his wife, Mrs. Angela Lagana, 35, were arrested at their home, 1322 Forty-fifth place southeast, March 22 at the request of Philadelphia police. Guida and his wife were arrested on the same day. Mrs. Smith was taken to Philadelphia March 25 to answer charges that she gave information leading to the slaying.

Detective Capt. William C. Engle, of Philadelphia, was quoted by the Associated Press in March as saying that Mrs. Smith ran a tearoom on Rittenhouse Square, Philadelphia, where she met John Slater Morrison, retired Army officer. It was in Morrison's twelfth-floor apartment that Miss Flannery, Morrison's housekeeper, was slain on May 16, 1939.

Subcommittee Refuses Federal Theater Funds

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt's request for authority to spend $975,000,000 for WPA in eight months instead of a year, if necessary, won approval of a House Appropriations subcommittee, members said yesterday, but the group rejected an Administration request for revival of the Federal Theater projects.

Over objections of the Republican members of the subcommittee agreed to the President's request and tentatively arranged to present the relief bill, which also carries funds for the Farm Security Administration, to the House for consideration next Thursday.

Several legislators predicted bitter and prolonged debate would be provoked. They contended the plan is tantamount to boosting the total for relief for the next fiscal year to $1,500,000,000.

Ellis L. Chapman Is Granted Divorce

In the Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., Judge Stedman Prescott signed a decree granting to Ellis Leroy Chapman, of Rockville, an absolute divorce from Mrs. Hazelle Chapman.

It was charged that the plaintiff was deserted in June, 1926. The couple were married at Fort Wayne, Ind., January 21, 1920, and have no children.

U. S. Bars Ex-Dancer Who Seeks Treatment By Doctor Who Saved Him From Insanity

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

By Charles S. Foltz, Jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Zurich, May 9.—Vaslav Nijinsky, renowned dancer who knew the heights of world acclaim before mental disorders blighted his career two decades ago, was blocked by the United States Consulate today from visiting the United States.

Despite a Labor Department ruling that the dancer should not be barred because of insanity—a state from which he is emerging gradually—the consulate refused Nijinsky a six months visitor's visa on the grounds that spread of the war might prevent his return to Europe.

To his wife, Mme. Romola Nijinsky, it was a bitter setback in a two-year fight to take the great dancer to the United States for further treatment by a Viennese physician.

Weeping in her hotel room, Mme. Nijinsky cried "Vasalav's life depends on America!

"Why does America give me hope and then dash it? The Labor Department cabled April 22 that my husband should not be refused on grounds of insanity, but now——

Insulin shock treatments administered by the Viennese physician, Dr. Manfred Sakel, already have brought Nijinsky back from the twilight of schizophrenia, enabling him to leave the sanitarium where he had been confined since 1919. Sakel has gone to the United States and the Nijinskys wish to follow him for more treatments.

Consulate officials declined to discuss the case, but Mme. Nijinsky said she had been told the visa was refused on the grounds that although Nijinsky has both Swiss and Hungarian return permits, the war might spread to those countries and prevent his coming back.

Roosevelt's Speech At Science Parley May Touch on War

President Roosevelt continued his close study of latest European developments yesterday, talking with Secretary of State Hull and Undersecretary Welles at a luncheon conference at the White House. They conferred for an hour and a half.

No word of what was discussed was made public, but the White House made more specific the denial of reports that Mr. Roosevelt had renewed peace overtures to Mussolini. Stephen T. Early, press secretary, said that Wednesday night's denial was categorical.

Eager interest continued meanwhile in the address Mr. Roosevelt is to deliver tonight at the Eighth American Scientific Congress, and there was speculation on the extent to which he might discuss the European war from the standpoint of the Americas.

D. C. Woman, 20, Is Attacked And Beaten Near Greenbelt

Prince Georges County police last night were investigating an alleged criminal assault on a 20-year-old beauty parlor employe, of Washington, who said she had been attacked and beaten yesterday outside of Greenbelt, Md.

The young woman was taken to Sibley Hospital by three University of Maryland students, returning to the campus from the Greenbelt Theater, who found her at Edmonston and Branchville roads, badly beaten and with cuts about the face.

According to the story told police the woman said she had been bicycle riding in Potomac Park, where she met a man she described as about 25 and whom she believed was a guard at the Department of Commerce. The man offered to drive her home, and she accepted, it was stated.

The students who took the injured woman to the hospital are Hammond Rau, William Shoenharr, and John Lane, all members of Phi Sigma Kappa. Hospital officials said that her condition was not serious.

Davidsonville, Md., May 9 (AP).—Fresh possemen were sent out into the woods of Anne Arundel County tonight to relieve a score of tired officers and farmers searching for an escaped colored convict who is accused of beating a 22-year-old woman.

An all-day hunt brought no results, but authorities, expressing belief the man has been cornered in the woods, are centering their efforts between Davidsonville and Galesville.

The woman, mother of three children, said the man entered her home, and, after throwing her to the floor, beat her and dragged her into the nearby woods.

Her clothing torn, the hysterical woman entered the home of a neighbor about 4 p. m. yesterday and asked that police be called.

Warden J. Leroy Wright of the House of Corrections said the man had been serving a three-month sentence for assaulting and striking a woman.

Joe Adonis Surrenders, Denies Guilt

Brooklyn Suspect Faces Kidnaping, Extortion Charges

By the Associated Press

New York, May 9.—Joe Adonis, a round-shouldered, silent little gangster to whom the authorities have attributed a long and shadowy power in the Brooklyn underworld, surrendered today, two hours after a world-wide search for him had started.

He walked into the office of Special Assistant Attorney General John Harlan Amen in Brooklyn and—with his attorney doing all the talking—made a categorical denial of the charges existing against him—kidnaping, extortion and felonious assault.

Then, he climbed into a police limousine which took him to headquarters for the routine fingerprinting and photographing. He uttered no word, but merely made inquiry through gestures as to what he was to do next. He was booked by his real name, Joseph A. Doto.

He is accused specifically, along with Sam Gasberg, 50, a former aide, with abducting Isadore Wapinsky, 50, in 1932, and of holding him for two days until the payment of $5,000 ransom. Wapinsky died about a month after he had been restored to his family—officially of heart disease, but Amen says the victim was given a beating during his confinement.

The exact nature of Wapinsky's association with Adonis—who was by repute the heir of gang overlordship from Johnny Torrio and Frankie Yale—has not been disclosed.

Amen has said, however, that the three—Wapinsky, Adonis and Gasberg—were interested together in a "business deal" involving a money-making machine which didn't work.

Three-Dimension Camera Film Tested for U. S. Military Use

Uncle Sam's armed forces will soon have the benefits of three-dimension cameras with which to size up enemy territory at a glance, if experiments with a new trivision film work out.

The new film will be an invaluable asset to the national defense program according to its inventor, Douglas F. Winnek of Mamoroneck, N. Y., who is explaining the new process to Army engineers.

Winnek spoke yesterday to a Commerce Department gathering and showed samples of his ridged or lenticular film, which gives pictures depth as if seen through the old-fashioned stereopticon. By specially marked gauges on the film Winnek says Army aerial photographers can take pictures which will instantly reveal accurate heights and distances.

The inventor said he prepares his film through a process of softening and embosses bead-like lenses on the back, which enables the eye to see around pictures on several planes.

Although his invention is considered a step toward tridimension movies, Winnek sees obstacles in the form of technical problems it will take years to solve.

THEY SAY THIS ABOUT Mary...

The price Mary paid

She was Queen of Scotland yet few women have endured as much as she did. She wrote: "I have suffered injuries, calumnies, captivity, hunger, cold, heat—flying without knowing whither—four-score and twelve miles across the country, without once pausing to alight, and then lay on the hard ground, having only sour milk to drink and oatmeal to eat..."

Yet the priceless gift of making friends was the dominant note in the life of Mary. This led the makers of Highland Queen years ago to name their whisky for her. It is an appealing whisky, light and delicate, yet it retains rare flavor and bouquet.

Guatemalan Urges Britain Pay Old Debt

Price of Land Ceded In 1859 Overdue, Dr. Matos Recalls

Great Britain, as if she didn't have troubles enough, has a little matter to settle with tiny Guatemala, it seems.

MATOS

The issue, practically unheard of in the United States outside the State Department and all but forgotten by war-worried Britain, was put forward yesterday by Guatemala's most distinguished international lawyer, Dr. Jose Matos. In Washington to address the eighth American Scientific Congress next week, Dr. Matos described the problem as one involving his country's cession of territory to Great Britain in 1859 without, contrary to England's alleged promise, receiving anything in return.

"Great Britain says she is fighting for right and justice," said the spirited Guatemalan, who presided over the Council of the League of Nations for nearly five months in 1932. "Well, then, we hope she will accord the same to us."

It is 81 years, he explained, since British Honduras, as the territory is now known, was ceded to Great Britain—for a consideration. But the price was never paid, according to Dr. Matos, and Guatemala feels quite put out about it.

Three years ago both sides agreed to arbitrate but discussions are still going on as to whom the arbiters shall be, he said. One will represent Guatemala, another Great Britain and the neutral third, he believes, will be selected by the President of the United States.

Dr. Matos is one of the few delegates to the Eighth American Scientific Congress who attended the second, held here in 1915. Now, as then, his trip to Washington is by invitation of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Small and wiry, with a Latin sense of humor, Dr. Matos has served his country as Minister in London, Paris, Rome, Madrid and other capitals. He was a member of the League Council from 1930 to 1933, the period coinciding with his diplomatic incumbency in Paris.

He comes to Washington hailing President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy in Latin-American relations and singing the praise of his own president, Jorge Ubico, for reducing the national debt and at the same time promoting a vast—for Guatemala—road and school building program.

Roosevelt Gets 3d-Term Backing Of More States

Democratic State delegations yesterday continued to beat a third term track to the President's White House door, but received no commitments from him.

Following "draft Roosevelt" pledges here Wednesday by Georgia and North Carolina party leaders, a Michigan Democratic delegation yesterday told the President he could have that State's 38 convention votes for the asking.

Gov. Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina told reporters here that the South Carolina Democratic convention next Wednesday will instruct its 16 national convention delegates to vote for Roosevelt for President and Senator Byrnes for Vice President.

Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, co-manager of the "favorite son" campaign for Speaker Bankhead, predicted President Roosevelt will be nominated by acclamation at the Chicago convention.

Scientists To Inaugurate Sessions Today

Roosevelt to Open Congress of Delegates From Both Americas

President Roosevelt will open the eighth American Scientific Congress tonight, launching on its 12-day course one of the most elaborate and unusual meetings to which the Capital has been host.

The inaugural session will be held in Constitution Hall at 9 o'clock, with the cream of the Americas' scientists in attendance. All 20 Latin-American republics will be represented, as well as the United States Government and scores of universities and research organizations.

Upward of 2,500 scholars in the natural and social sciences, their names comprising a formidable Who's Who, are expected to attend the all-American Conference, first of its kind to be held in Washington since 1915. Registration is under way at the Pan American Building, where credentials and tickets for tonight's meeting are being issued.

Scientific sessions will be divided into 11 sections. Anthropology, biology, geology, agriculture and conservation, public health and medicine, physical and chemical sciences, statistics, history and geography, international law, public law and jurisprudence, economics and sociology and education.

Tomorrow will be devoted to organization, a Mount Vernon sightseeing trip and an official reception by Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull at the Pan-American Building.

The Congress will get down to business at 11 a. m. Monday with its first plenary session at the Pan American Union Building. Secretary Hull will extend the official United States welcome.

Dr. Albert Einstein will address a special session at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday in the south Interior Building auditorium on "Considerations Concerning the Fundamentals of Theoretical Physics."

Chile, Colombia Loans Increased

Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, announced yesterday the Export-Import Bank had increased loan commitments to Chile from $5,000,000 to $12,000,000 and to Colombia from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000. The original loan to Chile was made last September, and the loan to Colombia about 60 days ago. Jones said neither country had yet started using the funds.

Jones said all of the money would be used to finance imports from this country and that these would consist chiefly of industrial supplies.

SANITARY 30th JUBILEE!
CELEBRATING 30 YEARS OF FOOD LEADERSHIP WITH OUTSTANDING VALUES

Jubilee VALUES

This week Sanitary celebrates its 30th Anniversary in the food business in Washington. Many changes have been made during these 30 years. That idea is to cut down waste and in-between expenses—to make quality foods easily available in clean, convenient neighborhood stores.

SANITARY'S GUARANTEED VEAL

Guaranteed Meats is one of the most recent innovations introduced by Sanitary during its 30 years of existence. With it housewives no longer need to gamble on their meat purchases. Unless every cut satisfies 100% full purchase price is refunded. The result has been that thousands have turned to Guaranteed Meats as a sure way to successful meals.

Parran Calls Poor Housing Health Menace

U. S. Surgeon General Addresses Parley of National Experts Here

The Nation's Public Health officers, assembled here, were reminded yesterday that substandard housing, where disease breeds rapidly, is as much their problem as it is the social workers.

Surgeon General Thomas Parran, addressing the thirty-eighth annual conference of State and Territorial health officers, urged the members to recognize the tremendous stake" they have in slum clearance projects under way throughout the country.

"The new bacteriology of air suggests many possibilities for the control of respiratory infections," he declared. "Heating, lighting and ventilation have always been regarded as essential elements of industrial hygiene, but these measures now have wider application and should present new interests to health officers since comfort and well being are included in the new concept of health."

The one-day meeting, held in the Public Health Service Building Auditorium, also heard Dr. Parran recommend ceaseless vigilapce against possible outbreaks of yellow fever, smallpox, typhus and other plagues; review gains made against pneumonia and meningitis with the use of sulfanilamide, and cited increasing Congressional support of public health improvement projects.

This morning, the State and Provincial Health Authorities of North America, most of whose members are affiliated with the group that convened yesterday, will meet in the Public Health Service Auditorium to hear Dr. Haven Emerson, Columbia University public health expert, and discuss reports on drug addiction, Indian affairs, housing, shellfish and accidents.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District of Columbia Health Officer, will present the housing committee report.

Russia Warns Allies and Axis On Balkans

By the Associated Press

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, May 9.—Yugoslavia and Russia have agreed to work at top speed on plans for far-reaching political and military cooperation, it was reported authoritatively today.

The Yugoslav military mission headed by Gen. Vojin Maximovic, inspector of national defense, now is expected to leave for Moscow at the end of next week.

Concrete Soviet proposals will be brought here by the Yugoslav trade delegation which is in the Soviet capital. This delegation is expected to leave Moscow next Monday and arrive here three days later.

Simultaneously it was reported in Sofia that Russian diplomats had conveyed to Britain, France, Germany and Italy the desire of the U. S. S. R. to see no Balkan adventure by any of them.

[Foreign reports that Russia has adopted a policy of Pan-Slavism and proceeding from this was encouraging Rumania to help Yugoslavia if the latter were attacked by Italy, were declared "ridiculous" in Moscow, according to the Associated Press.

[A statement by Tass, Soviet official news agency, said "in the opinion of responsible Soviet quarters Pan-Slavism in general, and in the sphere of foreign policy in particular, is a thoroughly reactionary trend incompatible with the policy of the Soviet state."—Editor's note.]

In other southeastern European capitals the active entry of Russia into the Balkan picture was seen as a possible guarantee of peace, at least for the time being.

Officials in Ankara declared Turkey—ally of Britain and France—would consider favorably conclusion of military and political agreements between Yugoslavia and the Soviet.

Balloons Blamed In Brush Fires

Montgomery County police are investigating the possibility that a number of brush fires in the vicinity of Halpine, Md., were caused by fire balloons loosed by children in the neighborhood.

One balloon was found by a passerby, who extinguished the brush where the balloon landed. The balloon was turned over to county police.

Committee to Aid Finn Orphans Is Organized at Procope Home

Underwood & Underwood

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon Made Chairman; Group to Raise Funds, Enlist Foster Parents To Assist Youthful Victims of Invasion

The American Committee for Finnish War Orphans was organized by 35 Washington women yesterday at the home of Hjalmar J. Procope, Minister of Finland, to raise funds for relief of 20,000 to 30,000 children orphaned by the Russian invasion.

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon was elected chairman; Mrs. Emil Hurja, vice chairman, and Mme. Procope a member of the eecutive committee. National organization was scheduled to proceed at once with cooperation of existing Finnish relief units.

The method of relief would be by foster parents, either individuals or organizations, each undertaking to care for one orphan for a year or until the child is educated and able to care for itself. Contacts between children and foster parents would be through letters arranged by a special committee in Helsinki. Photographs would be sent to the foster parents as the child progressed.

"A local subcommittee," said a cable from Mrs. Robert Maverick, American representative for relief work in Finland, read at yesterday's meeting, "chooses from the Mannerheim Welfare Division's list. This list is of 25,000 children of war dead or war crippled which, with those of evacuees and others requiring at least some degree of assistance, number 60,000 . . . Funds go monthly from the Mannerheim League to trained welfare workers . . . Estimates of the cost of care . . . cover laundry, medicine, toilet articles, doctors' care, recreation and school expenses."

At yesterday's meeting were Mrs. Bacon, Mrs. Hurja, Mme. Procope, Mrs. Frederick Brooke, Mrs. Milton M. Brown, Mrs. Warren Barbour, Mrs. Hugh Cumming, Mrs. R. M. Evans, Mrs. W. B. Gillmore, Mrs. Newbold Noyes, Mrs. August Nikula, Mrs. George Pettingill, Mrs. William Prescott, Mms. Risot Solanko, Mrs. Oscar Underwood, Mrs. Aldace Walker, Miss Josephine Kauka, Mrs. Frank H. Pietila, Mrs. John H. Savolaine and Mrs. Charles Buck and Mrs. Landryde Frenense, of New Orleans.

Power Commission Decides It Has Right to Cut Red Tape

The Federal Power Commission ruled yesterday that under a "common sense construction" of the power act, it has authority to cut red tape and order utilities operating in interstate commerce to change their rates if a municipality petitions the FPC and the latetr finds that rate discrimination exists.

This was the commission's first major rate-discrimination case and its opinion was considered of far-reaching importance to municipalities desiring "expeditious relief from undue disadvantages and prejudices" in electric rates. The commission's action was taken in the proceeding involving Otter Tail Power Co.

"Prejudice and Disadvantage"

"For the purpose of removing a discrimination we interpret the statute to mean that the reasonable wholesale rate for any class of customers be not higher than the lowest rate charged by vendor utility to any customer for the same class of service under the same or substantially similar conditions," the order said.

"If a complete 'rate case' is to be conducted before the patent discrimination existing in the instant case is to be removed, such would obviously place a strained construction on the act and render it ineffective for the expeditious removal of unjust discriminations."

The commission found that Otter Tail Power is "unlawfully subjecting to undue prejudice and disadvantage" a number of villages in Minnesota, and the Minnesota Utilities Co., is "unlawfully granting undue preference and advantage to the city of Fergus Falls, Minn.

Firm's Contention Rejected

The Power Commission then ordered Otter Tail Power to cease and desist from collecting from these other communities and companies any higher electric rates than those now charged the City of Fergus Falls.

Rejecting the company's contention that the commission has no authority over wholesale rates charged to municipalities, the commission in a majority opinion, concurred in by Chairman Leland Olds, Commissioners John W. Scott and Clyde L. Seavey, declares:

"The practical effect of this argument would be that a utility may not discriminate in rates charged private persons or corporations, but is at complete and unfettered liberty to indulge in the rankest discrimination as between municipalities, or as between private customers and municipalities, receiving the same service."

Commissioner Basil Manly filed a dissenting opinion.

The Federal Diary

Woman Tells Senate Unit About U. S. Office Feuds

By Edward Ryan

Stories of employe feuds in the Navy Department and of a woman's attempt to take her own life after a dispute with the supervisor were spread yesterday across the record of a five-hour hearing before the Ellender Committee investigating the civil service.

A 40-year-old stenographer told the committee how "I cut my throat," after 11 years without a pay raise and frequent transfers which she blamed on the fact that typing made her nervous.

Her last job, before her suicide attempt last August, she said, was given to her because the man who held it "had too much college education to do the work without mistakes."

Senator Allen Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, chairman of the committee and only member present yesterday, gathered a score of Navy employes and officials around a conference table in the Senate Office Building.

He will renew the hearings this morning at 10 o'clock with a "round table" discussion by Government personnel chiefs. About 20 were called yesterday and agreed to be there. Senator Ellender said he wanted to know what they think of an independent board to hear employe grievances.

The stenographer said that the trouble which ended in her suicide attempt began nine years ago when she came back after a vacation to find she had been transferred from Naval Reserve work to a new job.

Edward Henkel, chief clerk of the Bureau of Navigation, said that the change had been made because she was subject to "extreme nervousness and apparent difficulty in hearing."

"That's the first time I ever heard the reason," she said.

Her story told of a series of transfers. Henkel told the committee that with one exception there had been complaints in every section she worked.

"Who initiated them " asked Ellender.

Henkel said they had come from the officers in charge, and remarked that "we don't take complaints from other employes."

The woman said that she had not wanted the last job because the "people that caused me trouble could still do it," and "I was afraid they were trying to push me off."

She named, as one, J. F. Carlson, chief of the detail division in the office of personnel. Carlson told Ellender he had made steady efforts to "spare" her. He said she had complained about window shades, about fans, and on one occasion he arranged to give her a separate room.

Her last supervisor was Mrs. Louise Freeman, in charge of keeping up the roster of officers. Mrs. Freeman said that from the first day the woman came to work in her office, "she always spoke terrible about Mr. Carlson."

"She said she had a knife that long," said Mrs. Freeman, measuring with her hands," and she was going to kill Mr. Carlson. It was everyday conversation."

The final battle came on a payday, Mrs. Freeman said. The woman came to work, and accused Mrs. Freeman of spying on her, the latter said. With that, Mrs. Freeman said she went to Carlson's office and was told to take the woman off the job.

Mrs. Freeman said she returned, gave the order, and before she knew what happened, the woman struck her, just missing her eye, and drawing blood. "I was petrified," said Mrs. Freeman.

Afterward, the woman testified, "I was desperate, I didn't have a job, I didn't have a home, I realized that everything was off, and it was no use trying any more." In the next frenzied minutes, she told the committee, she locked herself in a room, was taken out by a guard to see the bureau chief, and heard from him that the job order would stand.

"If everybody hadn't been so emphatic against me, I wouldn't have done it," she said. She explained she had a razor in her pocketbook, and with that she cut her throat. She was treated at Providence. Now, the committee was told, she is awaiting a report from the Civil Service Commission to determine whether she can be retired for disability.

Another Employe Testifies

Another employe, Miss Mary E. North, told Ellender that her appearance before the committee last year had resulted in her demotion from a job as stenographer for the chaplains to one in the pool."

Capt. R. D. Workman, chief of naval chaplains, said that when he had given Miss North a "routine memorandum to copy, she told him "do your own dirty work, or get a yeoman downstairs."

Miss North said that her statement had been:

"If you must be so outspoken in these cases, get the man downstairs to copy them."

The memorandum, it was explained, was for a report to the Naval Relief Society, about the wife of an enlisted man who had recently had her first baby.

Miss North said that Capt. Workman had continually referred to matters "out of line" while dictating letters. They had to do, she said "with immoralities."

Capt. Scott Comments

Ellender asked Workman whether he knew that complaints had been made against him, and the latter said he did. Capt. E. W. Scott, former chief of chaplains, said he was reporting about Workman to the chief of the Bureau of Navigation. He declined to tell Ellender the nature of the report, or whether other complaints had been made.

Miss North, it was testified, was transferred to the officers' detail section. Another employe, Mrs. Lillian G. Foster, described the section as "the worst doghouse I have ever seen."

Charles Piozet, Navy director of personnel, said that Miss North had received no disciplining, no reprimand and no reduction in pay in the transfer.

35 From D. C., Nearby States To Take Coast Guard Tests

Thirty-five men from the District, Maryland and Virginia comprise the final list of candidates for admission to the United States Coast Guard Academy in this area, it was announced yesterday.

The Nation-wide list of approved applications for the competitive examination, scheduled for May 15 and 16, has reached 1,950 names, highest in the history of the academy. The previous record was set last year, when 1,398 applications were approved.

Senate Unit Approves Bill For D. C. Code

Five Other Measures Reported Favorably By Committeemen

The Senate District Committee yesterday approved a bill indorsed by the District Bar Association to authorize appointment of a commission to prepare a new code of laws for the District along with five other measures, three of which have passed the House.

Upon motion of Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, the committee approved legislation for the new code, which will cost the District $30,000 a year for three years. Five commissioners will be appointed by the Attorney General, with the approval of the District Court, to make the three-year study.

A special House committee is now engaged in a similar study, but sponsors of the Bilbo bill insist that the House is preparing another compilation rather than a new code.

Capper Bill Discussed

The committee discussed the Capper bill to provide for the election of delegates to the national political conventions but postponed action until next week.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, pointed out that the legislation comes too late to become operative this year. Chairman King indicated he does not favor the bill.

The committee approved House bills amending the District indeterminate sentence and parole law, authorizing the commissioners to provide parking space in the Municipal Center, and amending slightly the District adoption law.

Upon motion of Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, the committee approved a bill to put Amos B. Cole, dismissed policeman, on the retirement rolls.

McCarran said he did not want his proposal to be adopted as a precedent but explained that he believed Cole had been punished too harshly.

Consumer Co-op Bill

Upon motion of Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, the committee voted to report a bill to provide for the regulation and chartering of consumer cooperatives in Washington.

House bills to regulate the practice of dentistry and podiatry were referred to a sub-committee for hearings. A House bill allowing appeals from liquor license revocations by the ABC board was set aside when spokesmen for the Petworth Citizens Association objected to it.

The school sabbatical leave bill, passed by the House, was referred to a sub-committee to consider amendments requested by Superintendent Frank W. Ballou.

The committee agreed to hear next week arguments for a bill which would provide for the refunding of special assessments erroneously levied on the same basis as taxes.

Civil Service Board Opens Design Exhibit

An exhibition of architectural designs submitted in a recent Civil Service Commission competition was opened to the public yesterday in the rotunda of the Commission Building, Seventh and F streets northwest.

The showing represents the efforts of selected artists who prepared designs for an ideal community center for an industrial town of 15,000 inhabitants.

Change in D. C. Idle Benefits Again Deferred

Lack of Quorum Puts Off Committee Action in House

A final effort to reach an agreement on amendments to the District Unemployment Compensation Act will be made at a special meeting of the House District Committee this morning.

For the second time this week the committee failed to get a quorum at a meeting yesterday, and proxies held by some of the committee members were challenged. Eight members were present.

Even though an agreement is obtained within the committee today, a report will have to be filed in the House before the end of the day if the measure is to be called up on District day, next Monday.

Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and District Industrial Union Council, let loose another blast against the McGehee bill last night and charged that if the present law were not changed by this Congress "the responsibility will rest entirely upon the Board of Trade."

District employers will lose well over $1,000,000 if no compromise is effected, Katz said. The only basis for compromise, he said, is the benefit formula proposed by Representative Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

War Finance Plan Outlined By SEC Head

Jerome Frank Says His Talk Is a Simple Academic Discussion

A wartime plan designed to provide the Government with about $20,000,000,000 to finance expenditures with the least disturbance to normal economic forces was advanced before the Army Industrial College by Jerome N. Frank, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, it was disclosed yesterday.

In an address before the college on April 8, entitled "In Time of War Prepare for Peace," Chairman Frank declared that whatever the nature of a war in which the United States may become involved, "I take it that its purpose will be to preserve our capitalistic or profit economy inside our democracy."

Last night he made the following statement:

"My recent talk at the Army Industrial College was simply an academic discussion before the students there. It was merely one in a series of lectures given each year by civilians at the industrial college."

Four Methods Cited

If the United States is to avoid the totalitarian method of war finance—complete industrial conscription and rationing of consumption—Frank feels that there are four methods compatible with the capitalist system's of operation:

Taxation, forced loans, voluntary loans, and the issue of currency, including both paper money and bank deposit money.

Frank said that a modified adoption of "forced loans" as advanced by the British economist, Sir John Maynard Keynes, may provide a large share of the funds for financing expenditures.

The plan "is a combination of an income tax and a 'forced loan'—a delayed payment of wages," he explains. If adopted here, the "forced loan" proposal would take the place of the personal income tax, both normal and surtax. Collections might be made by the Federal Government possibly weekly for wages and salaries and quarterly for other income.

Advantages Are Outlined

The "forced loan" plan as the main source of war finance has four advantages, according to Frank. These are:

It would compensate, in part at least, the poorer classes for their wartime sacrifices by a future additional income.

Such a scheme would avoid or at least reduce the rise in the rate of interest and in particular the rate on Treasury securities.

Roosevelt Asks Rise For REA Borrowing

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday to enact legislation increasing the borrowing power of the Rural Electrification Administration from $40,000,000 to $100,000,000 during the fiscal year starting next July 1.

The additional authorization is necessary to meet pending requests for approximately $75,000,000 of loans in 44 States, he said.

Divorce Is Asked

Mrs. Dolly S. Smith, of Gaithersburg, Md., has filed suit in the Circuit Court at Rockville for a limited divorce from Herbert W. Smith, of Purdum, Md. The petition states that the couple were married at Warrenton, Va., April 17, 1939.

Streamlining Speeds Courts

Judge Nathan Cayton, of the Municipal Court, reported to Attorney General Jackson yesterday that modernized procedure in the landlord and tenant branch of the court facilitated hearings during April.

Judge Cayton said that stays of execution were granted in 916 cases, which greatly relieved the hardship of poor persons sued by their landlords. The number was an increase of more than 40 per cent over previous months.

The conciliation service, being tried for the first time here in real estate matters, ended 12 cases without trial. Judge Cayton expressed confidence that there would be a substantial increase as the new technique became more widely applied in the landlord and tenant court.

The reformed procedure substituted simple summonses for the complicated forms previously used and relieved defendants of the necessity of filing written defenses or having lawyers.

The landlord and tenant court handled 4,429 cases in April and gave judgments for possession in 3,467 cases.

Cap Pistol Mishap Injures Girl's Eye

A toy cap pistol, fired by a playmate, seriously injured an eye of Audrey Dolan, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dolan, 304 Spring street, Takoma Park, Md., yesterday.

The two youngsters were playing near the Dolan home, police were told, when the accident occurred. Powder from the exploded cap flew into the little girl's eye.

She was treated at Children's Hospital.

Senate Group to Vote Today on CAA Transfer

With a vote on the proposal set for not later than 4 p. m. today, a Senate committee opened hearings yesterday on President Roosevelt's plan to abolish the Air Safety Board and transfer the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Department of Commerce.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chief sponsor of a resolution that would block the projected transfer, announced that he would await the committee's action today before insisting on a showdown in the Senate.

If the committee tables McCarran's resolution, the Nevadan will offer a discharge motion Monday in a final effort to bring the hotly-debated question of CAA reorganization out to the Senate floor. The House has already voted against the President's plan, but Senate disapproval is necessary to kill it.

At the hearings yesterday, Budget Director Harold D. Smith said the reorganization plan would eliminate "functional confusion" in the CAA. He declared that the President had consulted him on the plan.

The work of the CAA, the Air Safety Board and the CAA Administrator now overlap, Smith declared. He denied that the proposed transfer would destroy the independence of the CAA and estimated that the proposed transfer would result in a saving of $220,000 annually.

Senate Unit Approves Bill For D. C. Code

Five Other Measures Reported Favorably By Committeemen

The Senate District Committee yesterday approved a bill indorsed by the District Bar Association to authorize appointment of a commission to prepare a new code of laws for the District along with five other measures, three of which have passed the House.

Upon motion of Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, the committee approved legislation for the new code, which will cost the District $30,000 a year for three years. Five commissioners will be appointed by the Attorney General, with the approval of the District Court, to make the three-year study.

A special House committee is now engaged in a similar study, but sponsors of the Bilbo bill insist that the House is preparing another compilation rather than a new code.

Capper Bill Discussed

The committee discussed the Capper bill to provide for the election of delegates to the national political conventions but postponed action until next week.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, pointed out that the legislation comes too late to become operative this year. Chairman King indicated he does not favor the bill.

The committee approved House bills amending the District indeterminate sentence and parole law, authorizing the commissioners to provide parking space in the Municipal Center, and amending slightly the District adoption law.

Upon motion of Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, the committee approved a bill to put Amos B. Cole, dismissed policeman, on the retirement rolls.

McCarran said he did not want his proposal to be adopted as a precedent but explained that he believed Cole had been punished too harshly.

Consumer Co-op Bill

Upon motion of Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, the committee voted to report a bill to provide for the regulation and chartering of consumer cooperatives in Washington.

House bills to regulate the practice of dentistry and podiatry were referred to a sub-committee for hearings. A House bill allowing appeals from liquor license revocations by the ABC board was set aside when spokesmen for the Petworth Citizens Association objected to it.

The school sabbatical leave bill, passed by the House, was referred to a sub-committee to consider amendments requested by Superintendent Frank W. Ballou.

The committee agreed to hear next week arguments for a bill which would provide for the refunding of special assessments erroneously levied on the same basis as taxes.

Civil Service Board Opens Design Exhibit

An exhibition of architectural designs submitted in a recent Civil Service Commission competition was opened to the public yesterday in the rotunda of the Commission Building, Seventh and F streets northwest.

The showing represents the efforts of selected artists who prepared designs for an ideal community center for an industrial town of 15,000 inhabitants.

Change in D. C. Idle Benefits Again Deferred

Lack of Quorum Puts Off Committee Action in House

A final effort to reach an agreement on amendments to the District Unemployment Compensation Act will be made at a special meeting of the House District Committee this morning.

For the second time this week the committee failed to get a quorum at a meeting yesterday, and proxies held by some of the committee members were challenged. Eight members were present.

Even though an agreement is obtained within the committee today, a report will have to be filed in the House before the end of the day if the measure is to be called up on District day, next Monday.

Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and District Industrial Union Council, let loose another blast against the McGehee bill last night and charged that if the present law were not changed by this Congress "the responsibility will rest entirely upon the Board of Trade."

District employers will lose well over $1,000,000 if no compromise is effected, Katz said. The only basis for compromise, he said, is the benefit formula proposed by Representative Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

War Finance Plan Outlined By SEC Head

Jerome Frank Says His Talk Is a Simple Academic Discussion

A wartime plan designed to provide the Government with about $20,000,000,000 to finance expenditures with the least disturbance to normal economic forces was advanced before the Army Industrial College by Jerome N. Frank, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, it was disclosed yesterday.

In an address before the college on April 8, entitled "In Time of War Prepare for Peace," Chairman Frank declared that whatever the nature of a war in which the United States may become involved, "I take it that its purpose will be to preserve our capitalistic or profit economy inside our democracy."

Last night he made the following statement:

"My recent talk at the Army Industrial College was simply an academic discussion before the students there. It was merely one in a series of lectures given each year by civilians at the industrial college."

Four Methods Cited

If the United States is to avoid the totalitarian method of war finance—complete industrial conscription and rationing of consumption—Frank feels that there are four methods compatible with the capitalist system's of operation:

Taxation, forced loans, voluntary loans, and the issue of currency, including both paper money and bank deposit money.

Frank said that a modified adoption of "forced loans" as advanced by the British economist, Sir John Maynard Keynes, may provide a large share of the funds for financing expenditures.

The plan "is a combination of an income tax and a 'forced loan'—a delayed payment of wages," he explains. If adopted here, the "forced loan" proposal would take the place of the personal income tax, both normal and surtax. Collections might be made by the Federal Government possibly weekly for wages and salaries and quarterly for other income.

Advantages Are Outlined

The "forced loan" plan as the main source of war finance has four advantages, according to Frank. These are:

It would compensate, in part at least, the poorer classes for their wartime sacrifices by a future additional income.

It would increase the ratio of savings to income.

Such a scheme would avoid or at least reduce the rise in the rate of interest and in particular the rate on Treasury securities.

Million Men Set to March, Italians Say

Acts Will Speak for Him, Duce Declares; Press Berates Britain

By Reynolds Packard
United Press Staff Writer

Rome, May 9.—More than 1,000,000 Italian troops are "along all frontiers ready to march" at a moment's notice, the Fascist press said tonight after Premier Benito Mussolini told a cheering crowd that his decision between peace and war will lie in acts and not words.

Mussolini spoke to a crowd of 75,000 from the balcony of his Venice palace on the fourth anniversary of the founding of the new Italian empire while Fascist students demonstrated before the German consulate here with shouts of "Down with England and France!"

The crowd in Venice Square roared when Il Duce appeared, expecting him to make some vital statement bearing on Italy's balance between peace and war, but he said only:

"As for the past month, you must get accustomed to my silence. Only acts will break my silence."

"Army Is Ready"

The controlled press extolled Italy's military preparations and Marshal Rodolfo Graziana, leader of half of Italy's armies, issued a message saying:

"With unchanging faith we soldiers are on all of Italy's frontiers raising our weapons and flags and ready for whatever command, wherever the king wishes and Il Duce leads."

Graziania's message was sent to Mussolini's Milan newspaper, Popolo d'Italia while the Bologna newspaper, Resto del Carlino, added:

"Our army is ready."

The Resto del Carlino said Italy has 65 first line divisions—about 1,000,000 men—ready for any emergency, which is as many men as Italy had under arms after two years of the World War.

Among these 65 divisions, it was said, are 14 mechanized, armored, Alpine and colonial divisions.

"Today the Italian army can be considered as a war instrument second to none," said the Corriere Della Serra. "Abundantly motorized, it can strike rapidly in all directions."

The Catholic afternoon newspaper Avvenire said the Italian armed forces are "worthy of the custody and carrying out of a new mission of Christian civilization," as it did in the Spanish civil war.

British Scheme Charged

The Popolo Di Roma, meanwhile, reported from Athens that Britain is striving urgently to spread the war to the Mediterranean and Near East and that the British scheme is being "developed in such a manner as to make the world believe the British are attacked by Italy and are not the actual aggressors."

The concentration of the British and French battlefleets in the eastern Mediterranean was described as for this purpose rather than for escape from the German air force.

success to reach Ambassador Bullitt in Paris. He tried to get a call through to American Minister George A. Gordon at The Hague, without result. He talked briefly with Ambassador Kennedy in London.

As each bit of information came in, much of it relayed to the State Department by newspaper reports, the President was apprised.

Between 11 p. m. and 12:45 a. m., Secretary Hull waited anxiously for another call from Cudahy, who had said he would call again "shortly" after his 10:30 p. m. call. Finally, just before 1 a. m., Cudahy called Hull again. He said:

"Luxembourg has been invaded by land and air from Germany."

Count W. van Rechteren Limpurg, counselor of the Netherlands Legation, was in constant touch with the State Department in the absence in New York of the Minister of the Netherlands, Dr. A. Loudon.

Count Limpurg's calls to the State Department were in an effort to get the news from home. He had received no information from the Netherlands since a cable early last night which said merely that the situation was tense. The last time he had talked with The Hague by telephone was yesterday morning.

In Cudahy's report to Hull about 1 p. m. he said German planes were continuing to cross the Dutch border and at that hour were bombing an airport near Brussels. He said a general attack on Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg seemed in progress.

Dr. Loudon's first word of the invasion of his country was a radio news broadcast which he heard at his hotel, the Croydon in New York. At 1:30 a. m. he declined to comment because he lacked official confirmation of the report.

Earlier this week it became known that the Netherlands, in anticipation of an attack, had made Dr. Loudon paymaster for its officials abroad, in event of an emergency.

ties and some members of the government but you can say:

"This looks like war."

"I do not believe the Dutch government will submit to this treatment," the informant said. "I believe they will accept the challenge."

Other Germans crossed the Maas River in rubber boats to Dutch territory.

A fierce air battle raged over Amsterdam as Dutch fighter planes dived repeatedly on German bombers and troop transport planes with chattering machine guns.

Reports poured in of planes in great numbers over a score of Dutch cities. Dutch authorities, hurriedly organized defense, flashed orders to the whole country to be on the alert against parachute troops.

A large number of the German troops landed by parachute were said to be dressed in Dutch military uniforms.

The Nazi tactics appeared to be identical with the lightning blow which conquered Norway in a few days.

Schiold Airdrome outside Amsterdam, the nation's largest, was heavily bombed. Dutch military authorities immediately threw a heavy guard around the airdome in an effort to defend it against German parachute troops.

School is one of the biggest air fields in the Netherlands. Damage to the airport was believed heavy. Three columns of thick smoke were visible from a nearby point.

Fifty German Heinkel planes were sighted over Sleidrecht flying at a height of less than 400 feet.

German planes were alighting at the River Maas near the German frontier and were landing troops.

The troops were crossing the river in rubber boats and were reported to have gained a foothold in Dutch territory. They were said to be reaching the Dutch side in "considerable numbers."

Hundreds of troops were landed at Hoogezwaluwe, whose big bridge is the major communicating link between northern and southern Holland.

Foreign parachute troops, believed to be German, were landed at Waalhaven, the major airport at Rotterdam which is Holland's most important seaport.

Parachute troops also were landed at Rozenburg Island, near Rotterdam.

Among places throughout the country where foreign planes were sighted, including planes identified as German bombers in flights ranging from 1 to 50, were Den Haag, Rotterdam, the Hook of Holland, Haarlem, Tilburg, Zaltbommel, Geldermalsen, Venlo, Alkmaar, Maastricht, Hengelo, Scheveningen, Arnheim, Leyden, Delft and Emmen.

Military authorities and local officials throughout the country were warned to be on the lookout for parachute troops.

The descent of swarms of foreign warplanes on the Netherlands came after a night of alarms and a week-long period of tension bred by fear the country would be invaded. All public communications between Holland and the outside world were taken over by the Dutch government last night, canals were locked and extraordinary measures taken for national safety.

The first aerial activity began at 2:41 a. m. Dutch time when Dutch anti-aircraft batteries first fired at foreign planes.

The firing ceased at Amsterdam at that time after a few shots.

A squadron of foreign planes was reported circling over the Helder, Dutch naval base on the northwest coast at the entrance to the Zuider Zee, and six German seaplanes were reported circling over Ijmuiden in central Holland.

Fifty unidentified planes were sighted over Nijmegen. Nijmegen is a large town 60 miles southeast of Amsterdam, very near the German border.

The major air battle broke out over Amsterdam shortly before 5 a. m., with fighter planes diving on bombers believed to be German.

A column of smoke was seen in the direction of Schiol Airdrome, outside Amsterdam, but it was not known immediately if it was caused by bombs. Antiaircraft fire made such a noise bomb explosions might pass undistinguished.

Yesterday the commander in chief of the Dutch army, Gen. Henri Winkelman, prohibited all large gatherings in strategic provinces along the borders in a further measure to strengthen national security.

Chamberlain Expected to Quit rejection from Clement Attlee and Arthur Greenwood, spokesmen for the Laborites, who said they would not serve in the cabinet under his leadership.

In reply to the question whether they would consider joining the cabinet under another Conservative premier, the two spokesmen for Labor said they would have to consult their executive committee before giving a definite answer.

These important declarations were made in a 45-minute conference at No. 10 Downing street this afternoon, while echoes of the acrimonious debate of Tuesday and Wednesday were reverberating through the House of Commons. Besides Attlee and Greenwood the prime minister's meeting was attended by Viscount Halifax and Churchill, who yesterday defended the government the latter had criticized consistently before the war broke out.

The refusal of the Laborite leaders to help the present head of the government perpetuate himself in office by entering the cabinet could only stiffen the resistance of the Liberal minority to similar proposals. It will discourage such government supporters as could help to regain the confidence of the country from helping to reconstruct the cabinet.

Events appeared to be moving swiftly following yesterday's division in the House, which found the normal government majority of 200 cut down to 81, in what amounted to a vote of confidence in Chamberlain.

In the first place, the Labor executive committee was expected to meet to consider the changed situation in advance of the Whitsuntide party conference at Bournemouth. It was feared, if matters were left unsettled, the radical members might succeed at Burnemouth in imposing impossible conditions on party collaboration by insisting on the socialization of industry and a capital levy.

In some quarters it was felt that early in the recess of Parliament Chamberlain would tender his resignation to the King, in which case it is likely he would be invited to try to form a new government.

So great is the demand for a real national government in which all parties would be represented, and so pronounced is the reluctance of the opposition and the critics in his own party, that it is doubtful whether the prime minister could accomplish this in a manner to quell the dissatisfaction in the country, which was but mildly reflected in the debate.

In the event of failure to do so, Chamberlain would make a second visit to Buckingham Palace and suggest that the King seek another leader for his government.

As the Conservatives still would retain an overwhelming majority in the House, it is not likely that Clement Attlee, leader of the opposition, would undertake the task of forming a new government.

Viscount Halifax, who has guided foreign policy in the latter part of the Chamberlain regime, would be the likely choice. In some quarters his membership in the House of Lords is considered a barrier, while in others it is regarded as an asset, for by reason of it he would be spared the necessity of facing criticism and questioning in Commons.

The steady stream of recruits for the army, navy and air force are rapidly speeded up by a proclamation the King signed today under the Conscription Act, extending the age of enlistment from 20 to 19 among the country's youth and upward from 28 to 36.

The new basis of recruiting is expected within six months and another 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 men have already registered or are scheduled to register. Today's call-up is seen as another preparation for total war. The last group called up were those aged 28, on April 20, and those aged 27—the final age group covered in the King's third proclamation on January 1—are due to register on May 25.

The government has already promised that no youth will be sent abroad before his twentieth birthday and, as a gesture to parents, the government has thus far not enlisted youths below that age and may not do so now except for an emergency.

Those aged 19 included in the new proclamation, however, will enable the authorities, if need be, to save time by getting potential recruits through the motions of registration and medical and other examinations so as to be ready to step into uniform immediately they reach 20.

In another war move today, powers to impose the death penalty on saboteurs and spies to deal promptly with any attempt by a "fifth column" to undermine the country's resistance were sought by the government.

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!

When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is: get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't endure it first and "cure" it afterward. Find out what's giving you the trouble.

Chances are it's simple if you eat the super-refined foods most people do: meat, white bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, you should eat a natural "bulk" producing food—such a one as the crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran. Eat it often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

German Rail Control Given To Army Heads

Civilians to Get Special Passes, but No Assurance of Seat

By Louis P. Lochner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, May 9.—All German railways were reported in reliable quarters tonight to have been placed under the command of the army for the approaching Whitsuntide holiday, with special passes required on a score of heavily-traveled routes.

The Whitsun (Pentecost) holidays, beginning this week-end, are observed over Europe for a week or ten days, and are a favorite time for spring travel.

Officially, the German holiday is Sunday and Monday, but schools are closed for a week and heavy civilian rail traffic as a rule sets in several days ahead.

For days the German newspapers have been urging civilians to stay off the railroads over the holidays. Placards in stations warn travelers that regular train schedules cannot be guaranteed.

Troops Shift Constantly

Troops are constantly on the move in Germany, shifting from one front to another, even though the fronts may be inactive. Thus a strategic balance is preserved, morale is kept high and the men are given a varied experience with terrain and fortifications.

The special passes now required in addition to tickets do not assure civilians a place on a train or even that the train will run.

While the army was taking these precautions, Adolf Hitler tried to drive a wedge between Norway's government and its people.

He bid for Norwegian, and, possibly, international sympathy by offering to release Norwegian soldiers captured by the German army. This liberty is unconditional for drafted soldiers, but conditional for officers and regular members of the standing army.

Blames War On Rulers

He tried to place the responsibility for the bloodshed in Norway on King Haakon and the cabinet of Johan Nygaarsvold, which he stigmatized as "the former Norwegian government."

The King and Nygaarsvold, presumably, still are in a secret place in Norway.

"Contrary to the will of the German people and its government," said Hitler in an order to his military commander in Norway, Gen. Nicolaus von Falkenhorst, "King Haakon and his cabinet urged war against Germany."

Oehmann Praises D. C. Contractors

Col. John W. Oehmann, District building inspector, told the Cosmopolitan Club yesterday that good buildings are as much dependent on proper construction work as on a well-administered building code.

Pointing out that there were only ten inspectors in the District to oversee the $42,000,000 of private building in 1939, Col. Oehmann said that, nevertheless, a good job was done. Fortunately, he said, most contractors make every effort to comply with the building code.

13 Nazi Ships Torpedoed, British Report

At Least Two Sunk, Says Admiralty; Two Submarines Lost

By the United Press

London, May 9.—British submarines have scored torpedo hits on 13 German troop transports and supply ships and sunk at least two of them, presumably off the Norwegian coast, the admiralty said in a communique tonight.

The admiralty said that an "independent" ship, apparently one not in convoy, had been torpedoed and sunk while another was driven ashore and destroyed by torpedoes and gunfire.

The British submarines, it was said, scored six torpedo hits on one convoy of ten Nazi ships, three hits on another convoy and two on a third convoy.

The admiralty's communique did not make clear whether the attacks on the ships in the convoys sank or damaged the vessels or where or when, or over what period of time the sinkings occurred, although it was presumed that the convoys were carrying troops and supplies to Norway, possibly to the new Narvik battlefront 200 miles above the Arctic Circle.

Reds Oust 'Political Generals'

By Henry Shapiro
United Press Staff Writer

Moscow May 9.—Russia has made her military commanders "entirely responsible" for future Soviet martial operations, the press disclosed today.

The move eliminates the divided responsibility between political and military officers.

This disclosure followed the replacement of Marshall Klementi E. Voroshiloff as Soviet Commissar of Defense by Marshal Semyon Timoshenko, who led the Russian military campaigns in Finland and Poland.

Editorials in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda and in the government mouthpiece Izvestia explained the reinstitution of Red army generals and Red navy admirals to a state of full military authority and responsibility.

"The reform," Pravda said, "aims to raise the authority of our commanders and strengthen military discipline.

"Though belated, it constitutes a link in the chain of measures strengthening discipline of the armed forces," the newspaper continued. "The titles of general and admiral reflect clearly that the commanders have full authority in all army units."

"The results of the Finnish and Far Eastern campaigns," it added, "established their authority among the Red Army and the masses of the Soviet people."

Izvestia added that "our commanders now acquire full power and become entirely responsible."

Mrs. Mattie A. Creasy

DavidMcIntosh,Jr., Dies in Baltimore

Baltimore, May 9 (AP).—David Gregg McIntosh, jr., 63, who served three terms as president of the Maryland State Senate, died suddenly of heart disease at his home on York road late today.

He had been ill for several months but had continued his law practice.

Mrs. Annie E. Mundy

Charlottesville, Va., May 9.—Mrs. Annie E. Mundy, 79, widow of George T. Mundy, and member of a prominent Orange County family, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas O. Yowell. Besides Mrs. Yowell, she is survived by another daughter, Mrs. K. B. Williams, of Barboursville. Funeral rites were held this afternoon from Barbour Memorial Episcopal Church, at Barboursville.

Paris Watches Cabinet Turn In England

French Parliament Expects Critical Debate on Course

By Lansing Warren.
Copyright by New York Times

Paris, May 9.—The British cabinet situation is being watched with closest attention by France, not only for its effects upon the future conduct of the British government but for the results events in Britain will have on the government situation in France.

Today, Premier Paul Reynaud presided at a cabinet meeting but the ministers' council scheduled for this afternoon was postponed until next Tuesday.

There is no doubt here that, after the turn of discussion in the British Parliament, when the French Parliament convenes it will have to face the same type of criticism which was levelled against the Chamberlain government.

There is a strong parallel drawn here between conditions now in the British Parliament and that which occurred here in late March when Eduard Daladier resigned as premier because he felt that a small majority in the Chamber was insufficient support for leadership.

The point about the British Parliament's debate that most struck French observers is the fact that discussion of the gravest questions of defense were held publicly and with the fullest freedom of expression to every party. There is no feeling of anxiety here about the outcome of the British crisis.

Le Temps points with admiration to the fact that the prospect of a government crisis caused not the slightest panic in England. Newspaper comment on the British cabinet debate implies for the most part that the lesson taught in London is equally applicable to France.

Bankers Elect E. M. Blaiklock

Edward M. Blaiklock, of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., was elected president of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, at its annual meeting last night in the chapter rooms, American Security Building.

Others elected were John M. Christie, Riggs National Bank, first vice president; Kenneth Birgfeld, American Security & Trust Co., second vice president; Frances E. Werner, Hamilton National Bank, secretary; James B. Ahalt, City Bank, treasurer; Sophia Karydakis, Second National Bank, assistant secretary, and Neal W. Wells, chief counsel.

The new board of governors consists of Herbert D. Lawson, jr., Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Myrtle P. Lewis, Liberty National Bank; Walton L. Sanderson, Hamilton National Bank, and Paul J. Seltzer, American Security & Trust Co.

Sen. Lundeen Makes Perfect Rifle Score

Senator Outshoots Soldiers With Both Garand and Johnson

Fort Belvoir, Va., May 9.—A Senator from the wheat belt, who opposes war and big armies, was the best soldier on the field here today at a demonstration of semiautomatic rifles for members of Congress.

After Army rifle experts had fired both the Garand, recently adopted by the War Department, and a rival gun, the Johnson, Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, asked if he could try. Twenty-six straight bulls-eyes he pumped into the target at 300 yards for a perfect score with both guns, better than the soldiers had done.

As the 61-year-old Spanish-American War veteran, who has fired in national meets at Camp Perry, Ohio, arose, he observed "those targets are too big, we used to have bulls-eyes half that size."

The demonstration was staged at the request of the Senate military appropriations subcommittee, who had heard complaints of flaws in the Garand and that it was inferior in some respects to the Johnson and the old Springfield which it is replacing in the Army.

It was not a competitive test and the results were not considered conclusive, but observers believed it would settle the controversy in Congress for the time being at least. Chairman Elmer Thomas, of the Senate subcommittee, and other members of the House and Senate expressed satisfaction at the showing of the Garand.

Senator Thomas said the Johnson seemed to be on a par with the Garand but added that as the Garand was "already in production for Army use there seems no reason to adopt another rifle."

Capt. F. X. Gygax Heads New Navy Reserve Bureau

Capt. Felix X. Gygax, U. S. N., yesterday was named director of a new office set up in the Navy Department to coordinate activities of the Naval Reserve.

CAPT. GYGAX

Now director of the reserve division of the Bureau of Navigation, Gygax will take jurisdiction over reserve activities in all bureaus, serving directly under the chief of Naval operations. He will be promoted to rear admiral shortly.

Capt. Gygax, 56, is a submarine expert and was aide to Admiral Charles F. Hughes when he was commander in chief of the United States Fleet and chief of Naval operations.

Senate Unit Approves 11% Fleet Increase

Vinson Announces Inquiry Over Lag Will Begin Next Week

By John G. Norris

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee gave unanimous approval to an 11 per cent expansion of the fighting strength of the fleet yesterday as a special inquiry into the naval shipbuilding program was launched in the House.

Rejecting naval pleas for a 25 per cent increase, the Senate group voted to report favorably legislation to add 21 warships, 22 auxiliary vessels and 1,000 planes at a cost of about $660,000,000. The House-approved bill carries no funds, but President Roosevelt is expected to ask for $46,000,000 in cash before adjournment to start work on the ships, if the measure goes through as expected.

Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee announced the shipbuilding inquiry. He said his committee would begin an investigation next week to see if construction of ships and planes could not be speeded.

He declared that although Congress had not stinted appropriations for the Navy, there were indications that the shipbuilding program was not going forward as rapidly as it should.

The committee will seek to find out whether Navy yards and private shipyards should be placed on a 24-hour basis to expedite work and whether special legislation like the Walsh-Healy Act is interfering with the program, Vinson stated.

Meanwhile, War Department officials were reported to have discussed with President Roosevelt the possibility of seeking additional funds this year for speeding arms purchases. Details were not given but it was indicated that antiaircraft guns and other weapons were desired rather than additional planes.

In testimony before Congressional committees, ranking Army officials have urged that several hundred million dollars be provided as soon as possible for acquiring the weapons and essential equipment for an Army of 1,000,000 men.

In voting the fleet expansion bill, the Senate committee turned down, 5 to 3, an amendment offered by Chairman Walsh which would have made the 167,000-ton enlargement in fighting craft a permanent addition to the fleet.

Walsh said the vote indicated that the majority of the committee believed that changes in naval design may result from the European War, and that Congress should pass on replacements of the craft some years hence.

The committee, however, voted to give the Navy a freer hand in building the ships now, allowing the department to transfer tonnage from one type of ship to another up to 20 per cent of the total so as to build more or larger vessels of any type should lessons of the war make this necessary. The House had allowed only a 10 per cent leeway.

Another amendment would authorize the modernization of the battleships New York, Texas and Arkansas at a cost of $5,750,000 by increasing the range of their guns from about 8 to 14 miles.

NEW SHOREHAM BALLROOM. The Shoreham's new annex, now a-building, will house a huge new ballroom, even bigger than the Blue Room. Though no definite announcements have been made, the rumor persists that the new ballroom will be headquarters for dancing to "name" bands. . . . Francita will remain with the Blue Room revue next week and Dancers Harland and Hart will arrive on Monday. . . . Francita's distribution of "radium gardenias" is such a hit that the Shoreham management has arranged for radium gardenia table decorations for parties requesting them.

GENTLEMAN KAIN. Leon Rodriguez, the noted headwaiter of New York's Commodore Hotel, includes Glen Echo's Paul Kain in a list of the "finest gentlemen I have ever met" in a current magazine article. That's nice, but Paul also belongs in anyone's list of the "finest saxaphone players I have ever met."

FACES AROUND TOWN. Mayflower Lounge. Pat Hurley, one-time Secretary of War, scanning an early edition of The Post.—Bright-eyed Hildegarde over from the Earle Theater to listen to Dick Koons' Glee Club . . . Flag Ship. Miss Ethel Fistere and her Murray Dancers tossing some impromptu dance fun. They'd come over to the Flag Ship after their Pall Mall session. . . . Mayfair, Henry Rule, of the National Capital Press, inquiring about his old pal, Dramatic Editor Nelson Bell. Jimmy Byrd and Lyle Smith planning the strategy for Mayfair's first softball game. . . . Metronome. Tennis star Don Budge dancing with a honey blonde. He dances as well as he plays tennis. Band Leader Bill Downer of the Nightingale squiring Eileen Ritter, star Roxyette.

BOOGIE-WOOGIE NOVELIST. Elliot Paul, who wrote "Life and Death of a Spanish Town" and many another best-seller, will be guest artist on Bill Gottlieb's (Post Swing Sessions) radio hour on WRC tomorrow eve. When he isn't writing, Novelist Paul plays a low-down boogie-woogie piano that has been publicized via Life and Time.

SOCIALISTS' PET NUMBERS. Maestro Burrus Williams, of La Salle Versailles, says these are the favorite tunes of social stars. Mrs. Grant Mason, "Deep Purple;" Mrs. Jock Whitney, "Rememb'ring;" Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, "Siboney;" Peggy Gibbins, "Let There Be Love;" Peggy Townsend, any conga; Angelica Lloyd, "This Changing World;" Mrs. "Bucky" Harris, "When You Wish Upon a Star;" Marie vom Rath, "And the Angels Sing."

NEW LOTUS SHOW. The Jeannette Hackett Revue, high-temperatured Manhattan unit, will make its bow in the Lotus next Monday. Full beauty line and a group of vaudeville acts. Tommy Tucker, the Hollywood sound wizard, will stay-over, we're glad to say.

Ray Donahue, who'll sing at Lounge Riviera's "Summer Opening Party" next Monday.

FOR LATIN ATMOSPHERE. Madrillon. Los Caballeros, a quartet of handsome Cuban muchachos, have just been added to the Madrillon amusement picture. They play all the tunes now popular in Havana . . . Lide-La Conga. All of Angelo di Bella's bandsmen are genuine Argentines. Their pulsant congas and the dynamic decorations of the La Conga Room make you think you're somewhere near the River Plate.

SQUIRREL FANCIERS. If you see two extra pretty girls feeding the squirrels and pigeons in Lafayette Square, they'll probably be Loraine Roberts, of the Robin Hood, and Peggy Wood, of the King Cole Room.

TROIKA CLIMAX. The new revue starting at the Troika (and it's a dazzler) is a brightly calculated build-up for the last two weeks before closing for the summer on May 25. La Helen Hamilton believes in "closing with a bang." Scores of reservations have already been booked for the closing party, always a real Russian fiesta. Air-conditioning is keeping Troika cool and balmy on these hot days. P. S. Dagger Dancer Yasha Nikogossoff has just joined the revue.

ACE MISTRESS OF CEREMONIES. Vivid Betty Reeves, heading the Casino Royal's Dance Cocktail Revue, is about the best mistress (or master) of ceremonies we've seen this year. Betty's the live wire that sparks the show . . . Next week the Virgini. Manch Girls, a bunch of Georgia peaches, will arrive in Casino Royal.

AROUND THE TOWN. Anchor Room. Manager George Osmolski just back from Sasha Bartnowsky's (Madrillon and La Salle Versailles) birthday party and vowing it was a party to stop all parties . . . Cafe Caprice. A grand place for dining as well as sipping. The chef goes in for such interesting specialties as baked grapefruit and braised lettuce. Delicious sea food soup, too . . . Hi Hat. Every minute lively. Interludes between the music of Ray Harts' Diplomats are filled with hit records played in the Ambassador's radio room on the thirteenth floor and broadcast downstairs in the Hi Hat . . . Shar-Zad. You've just four times more, counting cocktail sessions, to listen to George Duffy's band. Tomorrow night it's good-by, George, and thanks for all the good times . . . Rainbow Room. We find that the latest name for Durward Bowersox-Powersox, Rainbow's fiddling fiend, is "Dr. Cyclops" . . . Neptune Room. A hundred people waiting for tables. We gave up and went away.

"ICKIE NIGHT," better known as "Swing Night," is on at River Bend tonight. George Stein's band has as much fun as the customers at these events.

BASEBALL is more talked about than the war right now. The folks in the Harrington Tavern listen breathlessly to play-by-play baseball broadcasts. And whether you're downtown sipping ale in Dick's Grill or uptown shrimp feasting in Maynard's, half the chatter is about the afternoon game.

Welles to Sign Bank Treaty Of Americas

State Department To Ask Congress For Appropriation

Secretary Hull, Undersecretary Welles and their associates foresaw last night a great future in the development of Pan-American financial and economic cooperation through the establishment of the $100,000,000 Inter-American Bank.

The State Department, announcing that Welles would sign today the agreement establishing the bank, said it would then be submitted to the Senate for ratification, that Congress would be asked to issue a Federal charter for the bank, and that the House would be asked to vote money for the American subscription to the bank's capital.

The United States will subscribe to a minimum of 50 shares, totaling $5,000,000. Brazil and Argentina are to subscribe, if they sign the agreement, to a like amount.

"It has been apparent for some time," said the department, "that there has existed a wide zone of economic and financial activity among the American republics for which the existing machinery of cooperation has become inadequate.

"The bank, generally speaking, is designed to promote the fuller exploitation of the natural resources of the Americas, to intensify economic and financial relations among the American republics, and to mobilize for the solution of economic problems the best thought and experience in the Americas."

Other nations ready to sign today are Colombia, Mexico, Ecuador, Dominican Republic and Nicaragua. Brazil is expected to sign shortly.

Representative Crawford (Republican), of Michigan, meanwhile, urged the House not to be "panicked" into granting a charter for the bank, which he described as a Mexican-inspired institution designed to "serve domestic and foreign politics."

(Mexico vigorously supported the bank plan when it was proposed last November at a meeting of American Treasury representatives in Guatemala.)

Clark Condemns Army 'Recruiting' By Red Cross

Senator Bennett Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, yesterday accused the American Red Cross of "recruiting" for the Army and the Red Cross promptly replied that it had been doing so since 1912.

Senator Clark said it would shock the American people to learn that "the greatest mother of all has put on khaki breeches and boots and taken a sword and turned into a recruiting sergeant in an undeclared war."

Red Cross announcements inviting citizens to enroll for future enlistment as statistical clerks, hospital technicians and other functions were placed in the Congressional Record by Clark to support his charge that the Red Cross was trying to inflame the minds of the American public that war is imminent."

Dewitt Smith, Red Cross director of domestic operations, said the function of his organization was to provide care for the sick and wounded in time of war or disaster. In 1912, Smith said, the Red Cross began enrolling nurses who would enlist to carry the load in time of war. Later the enrollment was extended to other types of hospital workers and clerical workers with associated duties and periodically new rolls were made up. The Red Cross gave wide publicity to its most recent enrollment two months ago, Smith said.

Only a few thousand are enrolled, Smith said.

Wilson Granddaughter To Wed Briton

Los Angeles, May 9 (AP).—Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, daughter of President Wilson, announced today the engagement of her daughter, Mary Faith McAdoo, to Gerald Griffith James, son of Col. and Mrs. Ernest James, of London.

James is an artist at the Walt Disney Studio. His father is attached to the British war office.

Three Die as Two Planes Crash

Los Angeles, May 9 (INS).—Three men died in flames today after a midair crash at the Vultee aircraft factory in suburban Downey, between their slower camera plane and a swift military pursuit ship at an altitude of 150 feet.

The dead, all occupants of the camera plane, were Walter Quinton, 33, of Burbank, chief pilot for the Paul Mantz Air Service; M. G. McCarroll, 35, Paramount newsreel cameraman, and Marshall Coombs, 30, Vultee photographer.

Although injured, Vance Breese, nationally known test pilot and air racer, escaped death by a narrow margin by skillfully bringing the damaged pursuit ship down despite a landing gear broken in the crash.

Horton Demands Probe Into Franking 'Abuses'

Representative Horton (Republican), of Wyoming, asked Attorney General Jackson yesterday to investigate what he said was the "illegal use" of the franking privilege by the Office of Government Reports.

See for Bishop Here Is Sought By Episcopalians

The Episcopal Diocese of Washington's annual convention, in closing sessions yesterday, named a special committee to confer with the joint board of the general convention June 6 on proposals for establishment of a See for the presiding bishop here.

Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, rector of Epiphany Church and Senate chaplain, was named chairman, and Dr. Oliver J. Hart, the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, the Rev. Charles T. Warner, Charles F. Wilson, Henry P. Blair, H. L. Rust, jr., and C. F. R. Ogilby, members.

The convention adopted a majority report of the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, chairman of the diocesan department of social welfare, recommending to the coming general convention of the Episcopal Church "that steps be taken to provide some form of security for its lay employes."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'My Son, My Son' Offers Sterling Emotional Drama

Despite Curtailment of Howard Spring Novel, Palace Film Visualizes Story That Is Interesting and Well Acted

EDWARD SMALL'S PICTURIZATION of Howard Spring's first and best-selling novel, "My Son, My Son," is a splendidly executed drama, deeply emotional and romantic, within the stringently abridged scope of the story to which it confines itself.

BELL

This United Artists release, opening on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater this morning, is content to concern itself only with the matters of paternal devotion and filial reactions thereto, Maeve O'Riorden's career as an actress and the tangled tale of a father's and son's love for the same beautiful young woman. In the selection of these highlights from the book Lenore Coffee chose wisely for the foundation of her screen play, although her skeletonized version of the story omits much that seemed of prime importance in characterization and motivation in the printed work.

While the action of the film play has its inception in the Manchester slums, it picks up the lives of William Essex and Dermott O'Riorden in maturity, just as their subsequently successful careers are beginning. Essex marries Nellie Moscrop, daughter of the backstreet bakery-owner and both he and Dermott become the fathers of sons, whom they seek to shield from the poverty and deprivation of their own lives.

Rory O'Riorden grows into an upright and upstanding young man. Oliver Essex develops into a liar, cheat and unconscionable cad, who brings havoc into every life with which he comes in contact—most of all to his father and Maeve O'Riorden, his friend from babyhood. The full measure of Oliver's craven spirit is revealed when both he and his indulgent dad fall in love with Livia Vaynol, the young artist, after the death of Nellie Essex. Departing widely from the final chapters of Mr. Spring's novel, the picture makes partial atonement for Oliver's waywardness by making him die as a heroic figure in the First World War, posthumously awarded the Victoria Cross.

The movement of the pictured drama progresses from the squalor of Manchester to William Essex's first modest home, "The Beeches," thence to "Heronwater," the rambling summer retreat of the then wealthy Essexes, and finally to London, where Maeve achieves her triumphs in the Essex plays. The early Manchester slum life, the ramifications of plot having to do with the Irish Revolution and many other less consequential portions of the book are left untouched by the screen—a consideration of importance, of course, only to those who have read the novel.

Mr. Small has been especially judicious in his casting. Brian Aherne, Louis Hayward and Madeleine Carroll, as father, son and betrothed, who become the pivotal figures on the screen, are uniformly and continuously effective, although Mr. Aherne seems not to age as much as he might. Louis Hayward makes Oliver a thoroughly despicable bounder. In roles only a little less conspicuous, Henry Hull and Laraine Day, as Dermott and Maeve O'Riorden; Josephine Hutchinson, the Nellie Moscrop Essex; Bruce Lester, as Rory; Sophie Stewart, his mother; Lionel Belmore, the asthmatic Moscrop, and numerous others maintain the cast's high standard of excellence.

"My Son, My Son" is not extensively supplemented on the new bill at the Palace. A FitzPatrick Traveltalk, in color, is devoted to "Calling on Colombia" and a Paramount cartoon comedy has fun with "The Foul Baseball Player." A new issue of the "News of the Day" is the final auxiliary of an interesting, well-wrought and handsomely produced feature.

In Cast of Filmed Maxwell Anderson Play

JOHN GARFIELD'S PRINCIPAL SUPPORT

Shantytown Film Is Held At Keith's

Rogers-McCrea Item Catches Public Fancy; Short-Reels Continue

"Primrose Path," attributed only to the play by Robert L. Buckner and Walter Hart, as adapted to the screen by Allen Scott and Gregory LaCava, although, in fact, primarily based on Victoria Lincoln's story of "February Hill," is being continued a second week at RKO-Keith's Theater.

Co-starring Ginger Rogers and McCrea, it is a tale of the "wrong side of the tracks" that Co-author-Director LaCava has visualized in this squalid item. Despite its Shantytown gas station setting, however, there is as much sound human interest in the story as there is inconsistency and doubtful characterization. Ellie May Adams is a youngster with vastly higher standards of womanly virtue than might be expected to spring from her rickety home, presided over by a debauched father, a promiscuous mother and utterly depraved grandmother. Ed Wallace, the filling-station attendant and beanery waiter marries the girl, and only after many vicissitudes manages to place the play on a firm moral footing.

Ginger Rogers, abandoning glamour to the portrayal of a slum raggamuffin, and McCrea, in a stalwart role that occasionally becomes disturbingly weak—the author's fault, not his—acquit themselves with high credit. They are supported by admirable performances by Marjorie Rambeau, Miles Mander, Queenie Vassar and Joan Carroll, as the remainder of the Adams household, and Henry Travers, as the slothful but keen-witted proprietor of the gas station. Vivienne Osborne and Carmen Morales add color and variety to the action. "Primrose Path," incidentally, has its full quota of laughs.

The short subjects, including "Information, Please," and a new issue of the Pathe News, support the feature through its second week.

Columbia

Reported to be closely trailing the exceptional career of the same producer's "Gone With the Wind," David O. Selznick's "Rebecca" today begins its fourth week downtown, its second at the Columbia Theater.

With Laurence Olivier and John Fontaine in the central roles and under the masterly direction of Alfred Hitchcock, this celluloid transcription of the Daphne du Maurier closely follows the original's line of telling. Again the focal figure is the second Mrs. de Winter, who feels that her marriage to Max is a tragic anti-climax after his life with Rebecca, the first, late Mrs. de Winter. Her husband's famous estate, Manderley, on the Cornish coast, and all who knew her predecessor seem aligned against her. As Director Hitchcock tells his story the subsurface facts develop as they are in actuality.

This psychological character study is finely played. Both of the stars create stirring characters, while the supporting cast, headed by Judith Anderson, C. Aubrey Smith, Gladys Cooper, Florence Bates and Reginald Denny, is of the first order.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 9.

LABOR: The Marx Brothers employed Al Boasberg, the late humorist, to write gags for them. After five years Boasberg died—and for the past three years Irving Brecher has been supplying all the material used by them . . . A few days ago Brecher was closted with the Marx Bros. in a conference which lasted for almost 18 hours. At 4 a. m. he stumbled out of the room, wild-eyed and almost hysterical. "Boasberg isn't dead," Brecher screamed. "He's only hiding."

FREEDOM: Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, the Cuban Ambassador, will celebrate Cuba's Independence Day on May 20. He has arranged a party at the Havana-Madrid for that night, and said that he would like to celebrate the way Americans do on July 4—by setting off fireworks. . . . "But then maybe in these days it is not such a good idea" Dr. Fraga added, "to make too much noise about your independence."

MISTAKE: Benny Baker, of "Dubarry Was a Lady," dined at Moore's Tuesday night. When he emerged from the restaurant, a stranger stopped him and addressed him as "Johnny Davis" . . . "But I'm not Johnny Davis," Baker protested . . . "You are," the other insisted, "and, as one of your public, Mr. Davis, I want to tell you" . . . "But I'm not Johnny Davis," Baker repeated . . . "You are," the stranger persisted . . . "All right, so I'm Johnny Davis," Benny agreed. "So what?" . . . "So this," said the stranger, "so this, Mr. Davis"—and smashed Baker's nose with a right-hand punch.

CHARITY: Sunday night a Chinese relief show was held at the Center Theater. Jimmy Walker held up for auction a program bearing the autographs of all the celebrities who had entertained. Although more than 5,000 people were present, there were only two bids—one from a man in the audience, who bid $25, and the other from Stella Adler, who, bidding in order to spare the signers embarrassment, offered $45 . . . Miss Adler paid, and immediately offered the autographed program again for auction . . . Walker asked the $25 bidder if his offer still held—and this unidentified man nodded, and paid $25 . . . He was the one man in the audience to whom the names of these stars held no awe . . . He once was a star, too . . . His name is George K. Arthur.

PEACE: John Balderston flew from Hollywood to New York, where he now is the guest of the Carnegie Institute. . . . Balderston and a group of others recruited from various sections of this country are drafting a model peace plan for the Institute—a peace plan for Europe.

ABSENCE: Richard Whorf, who plays the role of a reporter in Helsinki, in Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night," tells of Bruno Walter's visit to Helsinki, and learning that Sibelius, the composer, was giving a party next door, Walter made his presence known, and immediately was invited to join this large, noisy party . . . Walter left, at 4 a. m., because he was scheduled to give a concert at Leningrad that evening . . . The next day, after the concert, the conductor returned to the Helsinki Hotel, and learned that the Sibelius party still was going on. He opened the door, and was greeted by the composer, who said: "Brun, Bruno, shame on you—so long in the baaaathroom."

ENTERPRISE: Margaret Wycherly, who appeared in "Liliom," left the cast last week to go to Hollywood. Her son, Tony Veiller, the Paramount producer, was anxious to see her and induced her to accept a contract to appear in the movie, "Victory" . . . She'll work there 2½ weeks. During that time her entire assignment will be to speak one line.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 9.

Frances Langford, who's doing the female lead in Lum and Abner's picture, "Dreaming Out Loud," tells me Hollywood's set of Pine Ridge is greater than original in Arkansas. Ours employs 112 people, while real sleepy town boasts a population of 87. Now, here's an idea for nothing. Why not, for the premier of "Dreaming Out Loud," invite the entire town out here for the week-end? A couple of buses would do it. Can't you just see the sign "Pine Ridge Comes to Hollywood to Dine with Lum and Abner?" Would that bring Barnum back to show business??? Wow!!!

HOPPER

While "Life With Father" continues to break Broadway records and will for three years, it's breaking Hollywood's heart. Oscar Serlin, the play's producer, made a stipulation that "Life With Father" would be sold to pictures only if he produced it. And so he will.

Oscar's had quite a story. He had a job as Paramount test director in New York, threw it over, wasn't kind of work he wanted. He offered to find Golden Boy for Harry Cohn, but wanted half interest in the boy, so deal was off. So he walked the streets for months, worrying because he had a wife and children at home.

Then he got the idea that "Life With Father" would make a great play—persuaded Lindsay and Crouse to turn out a script, took it to Jock Whitney's lawyer, who said, "It's another 'Old Homestead'—a play all America should see." He put $22,000 into it. When and if it's done into a picture, they'll be crazy if they change one member of the present cast. It's worth a trip East.

Walter Pidgeon, who's just finished "Nick Carter," told me while he was working in "It's A Date." with Deanna Durbin, the studio wanted Lloyd's to insure him against illness. They were having difficulty, as he was already insured for another picture, so Pidge cabled a man he knew in Lloyd's day before Christmas. "Sorry," came a reply, "All heads of firm are away on holiday till after New Year." Holiday was traditional—war could wait, business ditto.

Freddie Bartholomew is the youngest member of the Players Club of New York . . . but the membership, fixed by Gene Lockhart and Walter Hampden, takes effect six years from now—when Freddie is 21!

Bette Davis and Dottie Lamour are a terrific hit with everyone in Honolulu, and are getting pointed comments in local papers there about their cooperation, in contrast to the lack of it Ginger Rogers displayed several seasons ago. But, on the other hand, the girls are getting no rest!

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 9 (INS).—Warners are in a quandary and they'd like to ask your advice, Mr. and Mrs. Public. "All This and Heaven Too," previewed today runs 20,000 feet in length—approximately 23 reels. Bette Davis and Charles Boyer and Jeffrey Lynn are so good that the Warner bosses hesitate about cutting a foot from Rachel Field's book. What to do is the question. "Gone With the Wind" has brought in $50,000,000 (sic) in United States box-office receipts and "Rebecca" is trailing along and apt to equal this startling figure.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Miss Field's book has been followed just as carefully as "Gone With the Wind" and "Rebecca." The public who reads these novels insist on getting them intact. Now what Warners would like of you, dear public, is: Would you like "All This and Heaven Too" road-showed as "G. W. T. W." was, or would you like to see it in two parts, released a week apart?

I doubt if Ponce de Leon's fountain of youth could have done as much to bring William Powell back to health as his youthful bride, Diana Lewis. Bill, who two years ago was so sick his friends shook their heads and feared he would never act again, is so well that he plans to make another picture as soon as he and Myrna Loy finish "I Love you Again." It will be a Dashiel Hammett "Thin Man" epic, "The Thin Man's Shadow," with Woody Van Dyke as its director and Hunt Stromberg as the producer. The last "Thin Man" wasn't nearly as good as the first, so M.-G.-M. is turning loose all their best writers to try a smash-up comedy thriller.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Judy Garland's new heart is an orchestra leader named Ken Baker, not to be confused with Kenny Baker, who has a wife and family; Hal Roach, jr., has bought a sparkler for Dolly Hunt and as soon as her divorce from Willis Hunt is final they'll march to the altar; Noel Coward arrives next week to visit Cary Grant. Cary has already moved into the Norma Talmadge house, which he bought, and Randolph Scott has leased one of Bebe Daniels' beach houses; Olivia De Havilland was sent home yesterday with a heavy chest cold: Harry Ritz and Betty May Heath are still aflame; Ralph Murphy and Gloria Dickson doing the night spots. She has put on pounds and will have to watch her weight; Madeline Carroll is trying to persuade Paramount to let her sail for France, but so far no luck; Dorothy Lamour, who had Honolulu in such a dither, docked in San Francisco yesterday and later left by automobile for Hollywood.

Constance Bennett is a flu sufferer; Robert Paige, who kept Little Margaret Roach's telephone so busy a few months ago, is romancing with Betty Peacock, a pretty Paramount secretary; Ann Rutherford and Rita Johnson go East for the premier of "Tom Edison the Man" at Orange, N. J.; Ann Sheridan and John Conte, Carole Landis, Willis Hunt, Lana Turner, Artie Shaw, Joan Blondell, the Adolph Menjous, the Fred Astaires, Eleanor Powell and Cesar Romero are among those who have booked reservations for Virginia Johnson's dance concert tomorrow night.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Maryland U's Clef and Key Scores a Hit

"Include Me Out," A Musical Comedy, Ends Run Tonight

Opening before a near-capacity house Wednesday night and playing to a packed auditorium last night, the Clef and Key Club of Maryland University found themselves with a hit of no mean proportions in "Include Me Out," the musical comedy, with book and production by Leonard Meakin and songs by several Maryland U. students. Following a first night that displayed some hesitancy on the part of the cast, and considerable hesitancy on the part of the scene changes, last night's performance had a professional smack to it.

"Include Me Out," a title seemingly borrowed from Sam Goldwyn's press agent, deals with somewhat shady politics on a mythical Meredith University campus. Somewhere during the course of the nine scenes, the political pattern gets lost in the rush, but the on-lookers didn't seem to mind, inasmuch as Meakin's book contains a number of rib-tickling quips.

Tops in the Cast

Honors go to Jake Powell, the opposition candidate, who prefers to be included out, and Jane Anderson, who does a bit with a "chocolate strawberry nut sundae with a double dab of whipped cream and topped with a cherry." Leading ladies Doris Hampshire and Jean Wells, supporting players Pete Snyder, Wimp Orpwood, Worthy Talcott and Betty Raymond added their bit to the festivities.

Hot songs, well accompanied by Frank and Lois Young at twin pianos, included "In Your Spell" and "The Third J in Sway," contributed by WOL's Walter Compton, and "We're in the Army," by the aforementioned Messrs. Powell and Orpwood.

All in all, Clef and Key has done a competent job in "Include Me Out," considering the limitations of Maryland's Agriculture Auditorium and the fact that the cast of 50 students were in actual rehearsal for only one week. When the show closes its run tonight the youngsters will have something for their scrap books.

Actor May Convert Tank Into Tractor

Charles Winninger celebrated the completion of his role opposite Bing Crosby and Gloria Jean in "If I Had My Way," by sending one of the strangest cablegrams to Europe on record.

He wired a friend in Helsinki asking him to buy one of the light tanks disabled in the Finnish-Russian war.

Charles wants to convert it into a tractor to use at his San Fernando Valley farm, and figures the tank would be a swell relic—if he can get it.

Morgenthau, Jones Differ On Loan Bill

Treasury Secretary Opposes Program For Realty Credits

By Felix Cotten
Post Staff Writer

Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones, who has been directed to turn over $300,000,000 of Reconstruction Finance Corporation capital to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, yesterday had put in a few licks on his own account, and brought a protest from Morgenthau in return.

It all concerns a bill which had its genesis in President Roosevelt's plan to transfer back to the Treasury $300,000,000 of the corporation's original $500,000,0000 capitalization.

This is the RFC part of the $700,000,000 of capital funds to be recaptured from financial agencies to keep the national debt under the $45,000,000,000 statutory limit during the next fiscal year.

The bill, introduced this week by Representative Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, and Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, authorizes the RFC to buy from the Treasury the stock of Federal Home Loan Banks, valued at $125,000,000. This would reduce to $175,000,000 the RFC cash repayment to the Treasury.

Would Limit Funds

It would also bring closer together the domain over which the Federal Loan Administrator rules by tying the Home Loan Banks to the RFC. The bill also would limit to $300,000,000 the amount which could be recaptured from the RFC.

But the bill, in addition, would give Jones power to initiate RFC loans against preferred stock of banks, or purchase of stock, and contains a provision which Jones feels would encourage national banks to follow a more liberal real estate loan policy.

Morgenthau's protest was against these provisions. He said Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency, joined him in "100 per cent opposition."

Favors Purchase

The Treasury head was sympathetic to the provision for RFC purchase of Home Loan Bank stock. He felt it was desirable to bring the Federal Loan Agency domain closer together.

"We don't feel, however," he said, "that we want to see national banks loaded up with long-term loans on real estate."

With regard to the preferred stock provision, Morgenthau said he had been passing on RFC preferred stock advances, at the President's direction, for seven years, and did not know of any reason why this practice should be changed.

"I know a number of very powerful reasons why it should not be," he declared.

President Must Approve

Jones said the provision would not take this power out of Morgenthau's hands and place it in his. It would simply permit him, he explained, to initiate advances against preferred stock as well as Morgenthau. The RFC "has been doing all the work anyway," he declared. In any case, however, he said, the President would have to approve the advance.

And if the President, in turn, referred the matter to Morgenthau there would be no change.

The real estate provision would permit national banks to lend up to 80 per cent of the appraised value of a property subject to amortization of 60 per cent of the principal in 15 years instead of 40 per cent in 10 years, as at present.

Jones regarded this as the most important feature of the bill. By permitting a longer amortization period, he said, national banks would be encouraged to make loans for construction of "busines buildings." This, in turn, would boost employment and aid recovery.

Officials Surprise

The RFC Mortgage Company now makes such loans, he explained, "but I would prefer to see the banks do it," he said. In this case, there would be some competition between them and insurance companies, which are now making similar loans.

Introduction of the bill took Treasury officials by surprise. Morgenthau said Jones brought a draft of the bill to the Treasury last week. It was turned over to Under-Secretary Bell to draw up a report, but before the Treasury's criticisms had been prepared news came that the bill had been introduced.

Jones explained that he was "in a hurry to give the Treasury its $300,000,000." Besides, he said, "Congress may adjourn soon."

Drys Call for 3d-Party Drive For 'Reforms;' To Name Babson

Prohibitionists Seek Coalition of Independent Groups for Fight on Moral Issues; Ban on Liquor, Narcotics Demanded

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 9.—The Prohibition Party offered itself today as the foundation for an evangelistic third party movement in the Presidential campaign this fall.

Seizing upon the idea of its new leader, Roger W. Babson, that there should be a coalition of "all those interested in putting righteousness before expediency," the party invited all independent political groups to join it in a fight on moral issues.

Delegates to the nineteenth national convention incorporated the coalition idea in their 1940 platform and called for outright prohibition of the liquor and narcotic traffic, commercialized gambling, debasing movies and "injustices of all kinds."

The new platform contained most of the ideas advanced by Babson, Massachusetts statistician, as a means of reawakening the temperance movement. Reliable reports indicated Babson would be nominated for President by the convention tomorrow.

The platform recommended prohibition, advocated reducing taxes and the public debt, conserving natural resources, maintaining military defenses adequate for continued peace, and the proposal for the coalition party.

Two Girls Face Charges in Fire

Judge Fay L. Bentley of Juvenile Court, yesterday notified Robert E. Bondy, welfare director, she would waive jurisdiction in the cases of two inmates of the National Training School suspected of the blaze at the institution April 29.

Although three inmates were accused in setting the blaze, one of the girls is only 16 and will remain under the Juvenile Court's jurisdiction. Bondy said he would press arson charges against the two older girls in District Court. Both are nearing 18.

'Bullseye' for Garand

Congressmen Approve New Fast-Firing Rifle

Southern Vindication

Encouraging news is reported by the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching. For the first time since records began to be kept, in 1882, 12 consecutive months have now passed without a single lynching in any Southern State.

The ability of States and groups of States to cope with the lynching problem, without help or interference by the Federal Government, is thus emphasized. And particular credit for this constructive development belongs to the association which makes the report, and which has rendered yeoman service in making every section of the South conscious of the imperative necessity of eradicating this form of mob murder.

The announcement also reveals the highly efficient technique being used by local governments to combat mob violence. Education, radio alarm systems and mobile State police units have alike proved their worth in eliminating the ugliest stain on the escutcheon of Southern civilization.

If the record of the last 12 months is maintained, the last vestige of excuse for the present antilynching bill will be wiped out. That measure, with its proposals for Federal penalties on State and county officials who fail to do their duty, and on the counties themselves, would provide a very dangerous invasion of local rights even if the apparent need for it were greater than is the case.

At the first appearance of the bill its partly political character was obvious; lynchings were already rapidly diminishing. In 1939 there were but three in the Nation. Yet the measure has twice passed the House, and now is on the Senate calendar. Now that lynching can at last be called nonexistent, it is difficult to see how arguments for the measure can be effectively sustained.

Travel Made Easy

The installment plan is about to be extended into another phase of American life. Already accustomed to the idea of enjoying automobiles, furniture, radios and a multitude of other products while paying, the public after May 20 may do nearly the same with travel. This news is conveyed in the announcement that 66 railroads will permit trips to be financed on credit by a separate corporation.

One interesting difference between merchandise bought on credit and travel on credit is that the full benefit of a railroad ticket will be obtained before payments begin. Such a state of affairs is not without advantages and disadvantages for all concerned. The scheme would not permit the company to telegraph a Washingtonian en route, "Please remit or we shall be obliged to leave you in Peoria." And, once a trip is over, the installment man could not come and take it away if you should forget to send a check.

Imagine, however, a conversation between two girl clerks: "My dear, where did you get that beautiful tan?" "Oh, it isn't mine yet—I've only paid the first installment!"

Oracle In Danger

If the District should limit the conversation of taxi drivers who have not bought guides' licenses, the effect would be as revolutionary as the passing of the old-fashioned bar.

In the dear dim days beyond recall, the man who filled the foaming mugs used to be the official source of information and misinformation on political and sporting subjects, the dispenser of undercover rumors said to come from persons in the highest places, the forecaster of events to be unfolded, the self-appointed oracle of public opinion.

The mantle fell first on the barber, but your modern tonsorial artist is no longer as expansive and garrulous as his predecessor of a generation ago. He now frequently refrains from talking unless his views are requested, and, anyway, conversation is difficult in a machine shop, which is what the modern barber shop has become.

So only the taxi driver has been left to carry on the tradition of loquacity. He took up with vigor where the bartender left off and the barber declined. His especial delight has been in defining the state of mind here to persons who hire him for sightseeing trips. Many a visitor to the Nation's capital has gone home, after a few cab rides, to spread interpretations which, if printed, would surprise Washingtonians.

The law would only forbid the unlicensed driver to talk about the scenery, but in so doing it would remove his principal means of opening a conversation. Although we are not trying the test case here, it may be permissible to predict that a strict interpretation of the law would be hard to enforce. Where is one to draw the line between sightseeing and ordinary pleasantries? Moreover, at least one cabby, when questioned on the issue, cited the Bill of Rights, which, as everyone knows, prohibits limitations on the freedom of speech. When it comes to that we do not know any group or profession which has more earnestly and unceasingly practiced it.

Very Little Confidence

The vote of confidence which the British cabinet obtained in the House of Commons after two days of embittered debate on the Norwegian fiasco provides scant comfort for Premier Chamberlain and his colleagues. It was a victory which came perilously close to being a defeat.

As a result of the Conservative landslide at the last general election, in November, 1935, the government has a nominal majority of 220 over the combined Labor and Liberal opposition. That majority has hitherto been more than ample to offset all defections and has enabled the government to surmount successive tides of criticism directed against it not only by Laborites and Liberals but also by dissatisfied Conservatives.

This time, however, the Chamberlain regime barely managed to avoid the rocks. Wednesday's vote of confidence went in the government's favor by a majority of only 81. More than 100 Conservatives abstained from casting their ballots, while at least 40 others actually joined forces with the opposition. Of the entire membership of the House it was an actual minority which rallied to the Prime Minister's support.

For Mr. Chamberlain, the writing on the wall is now unmistakable. This week's debate, and the vote which followed, revealed on the part of a considerable section of the House of Commons a strong distrust of his leadership and a bitter resentment at the government's apparent failure to prosecute the war with sufficient energy, efficiency and dispatch. The demand that new hands be placed at the tiller will not easily or quickly die down. For it arises out of the deep concern of the British people over the trend since last September.

Mr. Chamberlain has two choices before him. He can resign and permit some one else, Lord Halifax, for instance, to take the premiership. This is perhaps not an immediate possibility. Despite the very slim majority Mr. Chamberlain received Wednesday he has indicated that he intends to carry on and with Commons recessed until May 21 he has some days of grace.

An alternative course would be a reformation of the government by the addition of new and vigorous blood, involving the elimination of those members who, like Sir Samuel Hoare, the minister for air, and Sir John Simon, the chancellor of the exchequer, have also been targets of opposition wrath. It seems practically certain that between now and the next meeting of Parliament some kind of overhauling will take place in a government which has little in its record conducive to national pride.

Whether the changes likely to occur at Whitehall and Downing street will have much immediate effect, so far as the presecution of the war is concerned, is another matter. Great Britain was slow in getting herself prepared for the emergency which is now so threatening. And time presses.

However, this week's explosion in Parliament indicates that the state of urgency has been brought home to the people of the United Kingdom and to their chosen representatives. Far more than the prospective change in administrative posts it is this salutary shock to national complacency which should prove of the greatest ultimate importance.

Haphazard Budgeting

It makes more adequate provision for relief, increases appropriations to replace obsolete schools, and grants funds for much needed additional policemen. The allowance for the education of handicapped children is also increased and the use of the fund is assigned to the Board of Education instead of the Board of Public Welfare, as under the House bill. These and other changes have resulted in restoring $1,400,000 eliminated from the House bill.

The appropriations carried by the Senate bill bring total expenditures slightly above budget estimates, However, actual expenditures would be somewhat less than the budget figures because the total includes a revolving fund of $150,000 needed to inaugurate the food stamp plan. These outlays will be recovered, however, once the plan is under way.

It has already been pointed out that a city as prosperous as Washington ought not to be relying upon the Federal authorities to supplement direct relief outlays by gifts of food. There are other communities with a much better claim to participation in the benefits of this restricted system of relief because of their incapacity to finance local relief needs adequately. Admittedly there are Washington families in distress who can make good use of surplus foods. But that is not because Washington cannot, but because Congress will not, make sufficient provision for the destitute.

The haphazard way in which the District's financial affairs are handled is strikingly illustrated by the irresponsible slashing of the supply bill in the House and the subsequent restoration of cut items by the Senate Appropriations Committee. District Auditor Donovan estimates that the increases in expenditures carried by the Senate bill can be met without raising the levy on real estate. Part of the outlays will be covered by special water and gasoline taxes, and the remainder from the general fund.

That is good news, but it is also a painful reflection upon the unbusinesslike methods pursued by Congress in dealing with the District financial housekeeping.

Bankers And Farmers

Addressing the annual convention of the North Carolina Bankers Association, Robert M. Hanes, president of the American Bankers Association, denied Secretary Wallace's charge that the opposition of the banks to his farm credit program is "part of a campaign against lower interest rates for the farmer." Mr. Wallace made that charge in a recent address in St. Paul extolling the objectives of the Jones-Wheeler farm credit bill, although he did not refer to it by name.

Mr. Hanes rightly says that the "real issue cannot be obscured by the cheap political trick of calling names or impugning motives. The real issue at stake here is whether a system of agricultural credits operated by the farmers of the country with Government supervision and utilizing private capital shall survive or whether it shall be emasculated and perverted into a socialized credit system under centralized political control and financed by the United States Treasury."

The bankers are not alone in believing that passage of the Jones-Wheeler bill would be a misfortune for the farmer. Representatives of leading farm organizations such as the American Farm Bureau, the National Grange and the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives are also opposed to the bill. In picturing bankers as enemies of the farmer, moreover, Mr. Wallace seems to forget that the banks have a selfish interest in helping to improve the economic status of the farmer. Mr. Hanes notes that over 75 per cent of the members of the American Bankers Association are country banks located in every section of the United States. Certainly it is to their interest to aid efforts to raise farm income and farm living standards.

Various spokesmen for farm organizations who are opposing the Jones-Wheeler bill and advocating a restoration of the independence of the FCA realize that a farm credit system controlled from Washington and dependent upon Government subsidies will not benefit farmers in the long run. The California Farm Bureau and the California State Grange have stated their conviction that the farmer "is not willing now to let the politicians run away with his program, making him a ward of the Government and subject to its whims."

Yet that is likely to be his fate if the Jones-Wheeler bill is passed. For its enactment would destroy the cooperative features of the present credit system, remove essential safeguards against unsound lending, and, as Mr. Hanes says, "place the farmer borrowers at the mercy of a single bureaucratic credit agency."

Passing Of A Dandy

With the passing of E. Berry Wall in Monte Carlo, it may properly be said that dandyism as a cult has seen its last surviving American disciple vanish from the scene. This New York-born boulevardier and flaneur, whose violet spats, spread-eagle collars, blazing waistcoats and startling canes were a familiar sight to society of the mauve decade, for a time ruled the cut of men's clothes as tyrannically as Cinq Mars did in the period of cavalier elegance in France. Our Hollywood Beau Brummells, for all their wealth and extravagance, seem to lack the charm and fastidiousness of the true breed of dandy. Berry Wall was to the manner born.

One would think, with a reputed wardrobe of 285 pairs of trousers, Wall held the world record for sartorial vanity. But he had predecessors who rivaled him. Cinq Mars, for example, owned 300 pairs of boots. One pair of Sir Walter Raleigh's cost 6,000 ducats (equivalent to $15,000). We learn also of a Messer Simpliciano whose mounts were so richly perfumed, his approach could be scented blocks away. And, on authority of Bandello, there lived a Portuguese exquisite in the sixteenth century who was so scrupulous about his person that an attendant had to brush his clothes every ten paces.

The world today is concerned with more vital matters than the accoutrements of male mannequins. Yet, they have their place too, and it may be excusable to "drap a tear" at the passing of one of the most picturesque of them in our own time.

Streamlined Defense

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Does it not appear that the immediate streamlining of national defense as a whole is a logical and necessary step to pouring out millions to the Army and Navy?

If, as many experts point out, serious lack of coordination now exists between the various brancnes of defense, is this not a sign that the present Secretary of the Navy and the present Secretary of War should be replaced by a single Cabinet officer, a Secretary for National Defense? Then career secretaries without Cabinet status might be selected—one to head the Navy, one the Army, one for aviation, one for the National Guard, and perhaps one of supply—whose duty it would be to plan the integration of manufacturing capacities with consolidated wartime needs. These career secretaries and their expert staffs, with the Secretary of National Defense and the President, would constitute a Board of Strategy for the coordination and streamlining of national defense.

It would be well to know whether in a democracy in peacetime patriotism can be made strong enough to permit closing of useless Navy yards, Army posts and forts, or if community pride and greed will prevent this very necessary step being taken until an enemy is upon us and delayed action is dictatorially taken.

"Almost Human"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A correspondent in The Post of May 1 makes the statement that animals do not have souls. It is interesting in this connection to note that about a century ago the great Napoleon stated in a letter he wrote that he doubted if women have souls. If your correspondent will read the book "Almost Human," by Carita Borderieux, he may be tempted to reconsider his own statement.

We live in a conscious universe and who shall define its boundaries? The most serious thing about any needless cruelty to an animal is its reaction on the character of the person who indulges in it. If you want to judge a man's character observe his treatment of weaker life. Lincoln delayed a journey to help a fallen bird.

"Gone With The Wind"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is reported in the papers that the advisory committee of the "North Carolina for Roosevelt" movement adopted a resolution urging the State Democratic convention to vote for Mr. Roosevelt, if his name is presented, "until he is nominated or until his name is withdrawn from balloting."

I am a native of North Carolina, but such an act as this takes from me all pride in the land of my nativity. How can our people so far forget their glorious heritage, and traditions of patriotism and devotion to our institutions as to be willing to abandon their principles, and all they have heretofore stood for by repudiating the fundamental and vital rule against a third term, which will lead to dictatorship, and support a man like Roosevelt?

He has broken every promise he made to the people, and every principle of the party that made him President, and in addition, by his utopian experiments, taken largely from the Communists, almost ruined the South socially and economically. Verily, all that I have loved and admired in my State and people, their conservatism, their love of freedom, their individualism and self-reliance have gone with the wind.

ALEXANDER SIDNEY LANIER.

Russian History

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of May 7 Walter Lippmann states: "Now the one thing that Hitler cannot afford to have happen is that Russia . . . should do what Russia has so often done before, should change sides in the war."

Would Mr. Lippmann be kind enough to state a single case when Russia changed sides in a war?

Is his hatred of Russia and everything Russian so strong that he casts a slur relying on the fact that few among us indeed know anything about Russian history and that his statement will go unchallenged?

What Price Peace?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few weeks before Norway became the next victim of the German "Lebensraum" program, the Oslo paper Aftenposten, in discussing the merits of this campaign, suggested that the word "Lebensraub" would better describe what these modern pirates are doing. For while Lebensraum suggests more room in which to live, Lebensraub denotes robbery.

In other words, they had caught on to the sad reality that the Germans merely began a career of murder and plunder, and since charity begins at home, they quite appropriately started out robbing the German Jews, then they went across the border into Austria, then Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Denmark and last (until further notice) Norway.

Most Germans harbor the illusion that they are a superior race, that their neighbors were only born to serve as slaves for these superegotists. That's what Hitler kept on telling them after they had been humbled in the dust 22 years ago, and the gullible Germans will follow any demagogue who tells them how clever and how good looking they are.

Even a small number of Americans have become so deluded that they actually believe all the German balderdash propaganda. Their tender hearts bleed over the "injustice" of the Versailles Treaty, but they have no pity for the thousands of Poles and Czechs who are human slaves in Nazi concentration camps, for their women and children who are homeless, starving and without fathers and husbands. If anything, the crime of the Allies has been in permitting these twentieth century Huns to raise their ugly heads once more to steep the world in blood and misery.

Anyone who still doubts the sinister intentions of the Nazis may have their doubts expelled by looking up the writings of Herr Hitler and his henchmen, and the revelations of a few honest Germans who could not condone the greed and cruelty of these fiends in human form. We are now in possession of ample proof that the Scandinavian venture was planned as far back as 1934.

The silly pretense that the Germans became so indignant because the British mined Norwegian waters, that they overnight had several thousand soldiers at points 700 miles from the home base, can only be believed by people who believe in miracles. We now know that they were planted there weeks before the British even thought of laying mines there.

Any American condoning and encouraging all these planned plunders and killings proves thereby that he is not in sympathy with our principles of liberty and justice. How much longer must the world suffer the pride, arrogance and greed of these twentieth century Huns, who are so anxious to prove themselves masters over people they regard as slaves?

I feel confident these haughty oppressors will be humbled in the dust once more, but at the end what a price will the rest of the world have had to pay for another short period of peace.

Mystery Of Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Where does the sovereignty of the United States reside? The United States Supreme Court in the past thought that the Federal Government was partly sovereign and that the State governments were partly sovereign. The idea of sovereignty does not admit of division. When one speaks of a supreme power he is speaking in the superlative degree.

There cannot be two supremes but only one supreme. Some statesmen used to think that sovereignty resided in each State but the Civil War proved the fallacy of that idea. Others think that sovereignty is in three-fourths of the States or in two-thirds of the State legislatures. It does reside there momentarily but after an election where does it go?

It is popularly believed that the people are sovereign. What does one mean by the people? Does one mean by the people, the population, the citizens or the body politic? If population is meant, then the aliens must be excluded from the citizens. If citizens are meant then minors, the insane and those who do not vote, such as residents of the District of Columbia and the Territories, must be excluded from the idea of the people being sovereign.

Let us assume that there are 130,000,000 people in the United States. In the national election of 1936 approximately 41,000,000 people voted. If we subtract the 41,000,000 people from the total population, it will be found that 89,000,000 must be excluded from the idea of the sovereignty of the people.

But were the 41,000,000 voters actually sovereign? No, because the 17,000,000 minority voters had their wishes negatived by the 28,000,000 majority voters. So that out of the 130,000,000 inhabitants of the United States only 28,000,000 may be said to have possessed anything even remotely resembling sovereignty.

But were the 28,000,000 voters actually sovereign? By sovereignty I mean an absolute and perpetual power which acknowledges no superior nor equal nor is it derived from any other power save God. The sovereignty possessed by the above mentioned group was only momentary, that is at the time of casting their votes. After the act of voting, the sovereignty flies away on wings to rest no one knows where.

But the most curious thing is that even the 28,000,000 voters did not possess sovereignty in themselves for they actually had to purchase it, in the form of a poll tax from a party who really did not possess it to sell. Great is the mystery of democracy.

The Post Impressionist

Panhandler—New Style

There are no more physicians. Instead, there are neurologists and pediatricians. There are no more lawyers. Instead, there are criminal lawyers, property lawyers, patent lawyers. In any profession you care to name the general practitioner, the all-around handyman, has taken the count. He's out. If he exists, he exists as a museum piece or as a horrible example of the fate that overtakes the man who tries to carry his eggs in more than one basket.

Accustomed as we are to the forays of specialization into professional and industrial kingdoms, and the resultant slicing into servile states of once magnificent empires, none of us would have guessed that the iron hand of the monster would close upon the art of begging with its cramping grip. Of all the free and easy avocations, this, the liveliest of the drab arts, should have been able to hold out forever against specialization. The more one had studied the art the more he would have been inclined to contend that when the day came for speaking not of housewives but of housewife-cooks, housewife-menders, and so on, free men could still speak of plain, unadorned, catch-as-catch-can panhandlers. Anyone would have said so. Yet the day has come when the brotherhood of mendicants has as many groups and classes as any organization of scientists.

How it happened I don't know, but there's no such thing as the ordinary beggar any longer. The brother-can-you-spare-a-dime type has gone with the snows of yesteryear. In his place is the hustler with the streamlined technique, an expert in a chosen field, the Ph. D. of his kind. Against this latest creation of science the clumsy fumbler whose only stock in trade was his obvious indigence and a way he had of looking stepped-on when he mumbled his plea doesn't stand a chance. Unless he equips himself with modern improvements, he's doomed.

Taking stock of the methods employed by his more successful competitors the unfortunate beggar with the horse and buggy technique will recognize immediately that the new moocher can be identified with one of four schools: (1) the geographical school, (2) the occupational school, (3) the frustrated-ambition school, (4) the evangelical school.

Followers of the first school, the geographical, ascertain before they approach a prospective client his place of origin. Then they represent themselves to be gentlemen temporarily out of funds trying to promote capital to take them back to the home town where a job is waiting for them. Home may be Boston, New York, Tulsa, Atlanta, Key West. Wherever it is it's the place that spells home to the man who's been picked for the touch.

Obviously your geographical sponger has to be a man with a keen ear for speech differences. The more he can identify absolutely, the wider his range of activity and, naturally, the greater his income. No one feels as though he can turn a deaf ear to the pleading of a fellow Bostonian or a fellow Atlantan. So the beggar with a knowledge of phonetics has a right to feel he need never go hungry. Shaw's Prof. Higgins in "Pygmalion," for example, if he had turned to begging for a living would have cleaned up a fortune.

An occupational school man identifies himself with the principal occupation in whatever vineyard he happens to be working at the time. In most New England cities, for instance, he would pass as a textile worker. In Washington he's always a Government employe. Not that the present tense should be used. For, though his occupation varies with his background, his status never changes: he's just been laid off.

There are, of course, more occupational-school men in active practice than there are geographical experts. The reason is not far to seek. The entrance requirements are much less rigid. The more he familiarizes himself with the trades and crafts in which he deals, however, the more certain he is of a steady reward.

The chiseler who specializes in frustrated-ambition stories leads a more hazardous existence. This is a field in which only a few can achieve success, but the harvest is there for those who can reap. Beggars identified with this school differ from their fellows in that while the others are frankly begging they are not. They want a loan.

They have their hearts set on being machinists, waiters, filling-station attendants, doormen, busboys. It doesn't matter what they want to be. They can't realize their heart's desire because they haven't the price of the uniform or they haven't the money to pay a union admission fee. Always there is money to be paid out before they can go to work.

What attracts interest here is the noble gesture in the direction of independence. What holds interest is the air-tight way in which the story is documented. Documentation is the secret of success.

So far as the evangelical school is concerned I can say only that unless a man feels the unmistakable touch of genius upon him he should leave this field alone. I don't know how many have essayed it. I've met only one, a moocher extraordinary, a man of such abundant talent that he hadn't spoken a dozen words before I realized I was in the presence (and in the toils) of a master.

"It is more blessed to give, brother," he told me, "than to receive. What I do with any money you give me should be no concern of yours. Suppose I should buy liquor with it. Does that detract from your virtue? Not a whit! You've done your good deed. You've cast your bread upon the waters, and, believe me, brother, it will be returned to you a hundredfold."

That wasn't all. That was only the exordium, but what followed was every bit as surprising and alarming. The man, I was convinced, was inspired. I am still convinced he was and still firm in my belief that only such a man, one who can command the afflatus, should venture into this field.

Evidence And Courts

By Ernest Lindley

Reply To McGuire

THE ACCURACY of my most recent column on the Walter-Logan bill is challenged by Col. O. R. McGuire, who, as chairman of the Committee on Administrative Law of the American Bar Association, is chief author of and lobbyist for that bill.

The gist of the argument is whether or not the Walter-Logan bill would breach the long-established rule that, unless unsupported by substantial evidence, the findings of fact by administrative agencies shall be binding on the courts.

This rule goes to the heart of the relationship between the courts and administrative agencies. It was created, not by Congress, nor by the executive branch of the Government, but by the courts themselves. The courts recognized that facts can be ascertained most efficiently and accurately by the experts in administrative agencies. They recognized, also, that the citizen is entitled to protection against arbitrary action. To this dual problem the "substantial evidence" rule was the answer of the courts, and it has been ratified repeatedly in legislation setting up new administrative agencies.

I wrote that a proposed amendment to the New York State Constitution—beaten overwhelmingly by the voters of the State when its true meaning was explained to them—would have breached this time-tested rule. Col. McGuire agrees.

I said that the Walter-Logan bill contained "a somewhat similar provision." Col. McGuire furiously disagrees.

If the Walter-Logan bill requires or permits the courts, in reviewing decisions of administrative agencies, to go into the facts, it is at least "somewhat similar" to the rejected New York amendment. Indeed, its effect would be substantially the same as the New York amendment's.

COL. McGUIRE reminds me that I am not a lawyer. He implies also that I can't read plain English. For, he asserts, the language of the bill clearly shows that it contains "no such requirement."

If Col. McGuire is right, then a lot of people who not only know the English language, but are competent lawyers, are wrong. Among them are:

1. Dean Landis of the Harvard Law School. He says, in substance, that this section of the Walter-Logan bill either makes for independent judicial determination of the facts, or else is sloppily drafted and open to that interpretation by the courts. This incidentally, is only one of the points made by Dean Landis in his devastating attack on the bill in the Harvard Law Review for May.

2. The minority report of the House Judiciary Committee—this point not being challenged by the majority report.

3. Breck P. McAllister, visiting associate professor of law at Yale, in his critical analysis in the Illinois Law Review for February.

4. Chester T. Lane, general counsel, and Robert M. Blair-Smith, counsel, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, in their article in the Illinois Law Review for February.

5. The analysis of the bill submitted to the House Judiciary Committee by the Department of Interior.

6. The analysis by the Department of Agriculture.

7. The analysis by the Treasury Department.

8. The analysis by the Federal Power Commission.

9. The analysis by the Brookings Institution.

Various pieces of literature have been distributed to drum up support for the bill. Before me is a bulletin of the Michigan Manufacturers Association, dated April 24, 1940, saying: "This is the bill that provides for a review by the courts of the law and facts in decisions made by administrative boards and agencies."

IF COL. McGUIRE does not intend to breach the substantial evidence rule, he stands convicted of sloppy draftsmanship. The error can easily be repaired by striking out of this section everything except a reaffirmation of this rule.

However, while Col. McGuire attacks me for saying that his bill would breach this time-honored rule, he does not specifically say that it does not. He says merely that the scope of judicial review under his bill would be less than under the Interstate Commerce Act. He cites a case involving the confiscation of property. In such cases, involving constitutional questions, the courts reserve the right to go into the facts fully. This is the established exception to the substantial evidence rule. It applies to the decisions of all administrative agencies.

So Col. McGuire implicitly acknowledges that his intention, after all, is to breach the substantial evidence rule. (If it isn't, let it be added, some of the backing for the bill will be sadly disillusioned.)

One does not expect an enlightened attitude from the American Bar Association. But certainly one expects competent draftsmanship and a clear statement of purpose. One or the other—maybe both—are missing in this case.

If Col. McGuire, as he seems to complain, is really a misunderstood man, I suggest this remedy: Let him state what he wants to achieve in plain, but specific English. Then let some of the lawyers on the Senate Judiciary Committee put it into clear legal language. Then the debate can go to the real merits of the bill.

THOMAS E. DEWEY
To him will belong any credit for freeing labor from racketeers, says Westbrook Pegler in an article on this page

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Pompous Squawk

THERE IS A NOTE of humor reminiscent of Charlie Chaplin in the days before he became a man with a message in the pompous squawk telegraphed to the American Federation of Labor in Washington by the national convention of the Building Service Employes Union after Tom Dewey's men had picked up three officials and the bookkeeper of the racket as material witnesses in the case of George Scalise. Mr. Dewey wanted the testimony of some key men of the union in the Scalise prosecution, so when the mob rallied in Atlantic City he grabbed his witnesses under the authority of an interstate treaty which permits extradition in such circumstances. There is no such treaty between New York and Illinois, which is the racket's home State, and Mr. Dewey had detected no eagerness on the part of the boys to cooperate in the task of delousing their union.

"Such action has no parallel in labor circles," said the message to the A. F. of L. in Washington. "We believe such activity seriously threatens labor councils, and we ask all labor to note that only in this State is such procedure possible. Future bodies should, when fixing convention locations, note the fact."

THE WARNING to other unions, conducted or dominated by gorillas of the underworld, to stay out of New Jersey will be well noted by those whom it may concern, but it is unnecessary in the case of the so-called stagehands' union, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators, for that malodorous racket already has honored the fair city of Louisville, Ky., with its preference, and will gather there on June 3 to reallocate the grafting and extortion privileges.

The hodcarriers' racket will not be interested one way or another, for it is not in the habit of holding conventions except under the hats of the boss unioneers, who include some of the most rapacious leaders that ever beat a poor working stiff out of a day's pay.

The police of various cities and the FBI should place Louisville on their "must" list for June 3 and the four or five days ensuing, for the meeting of the stagehands' union promises to present a congress of grand and petty larcenists, yeggs, graduate bootleggers and assorted thugs the like of which is not likely to be discovered anywhere outside the austere councils of A. F. of L. unions, Joliet of Dannemora.

OCCASION will be taken, no doubt, to deplore as an attack on labor with a capital "L" the cruel incarceration of that noted alumnus of a Halsted street brothel and union racketeer, Willie Bioff, whose present address is the Cook County Jail, and to reaffirm the union's faith in Nick Circella, the Chicago stick-up man and general practitioner in crime.

Blackjacks will be worn, and there will be an exhibition drill in which the leading hoodlums of the racket will work out on the head of a stuffed dummy representing the working man, the winner to receive a solid gold kit of safecracker's tools.

The Louisville police are advised to place special guards around the banks, and the people of the city, if they are prudent, will move out of town for the duration, taking with them all possessions of value.

The building service mob were a little self-conscious at their reunion in Atlantic City, for the recent heat on their late illustrious president, Mr. Scalise, and certain other leading warriors in labor's battle have attracted more attention than ordinarily attends the deliberations of a gang. Not only that, but there is reason to fear that Mr. Scalise and the charming brothers Schwartz, of New York, will presently have company in their predicament, for it seems unlikely that the hoodlums who adorn this subsidiary of the A. F. of L. permitted Mr. Scalise to take it all.

The protest to the A. F. of L. was correct. No such action has disturbed the solemn councils of a racket operating under charter from the A. F. of L. But that is not to say that this action came an hour too soon or that the national leadership of the A. F. of L. deserves any credit for the belated attempt to create a distinction between the labor movement and the underworld. And Mr. Dewey, rather than William Green, will receive the credit for a service to the rank and file of labor and the reputation of the A. F. of L.

Hitler's One Way To Win

By Dorothy Thompson

Another Chapter: Norway's Downfall

Paris.

I INTERRUPT this series of travelogues, which I have continued to write regardless of the news, to comment on the debacle in Norway and the ensuing debate in the House of Commons.

The conduct of the war so far by the British and French falls far short of the energy and intelligence which the crisis demands, but the reasons lie deeper than the personalities of the British leaders, and the real difficulties are as much political as they are military.

To begin with, the democracies are neither militarily nor psychologically prepared even yet for the kind of war that Hitler wages. For seven years, under ruthless despotic dictatorship, the largest nation in Europe has used its entire wealth and an immense amount of the wealth of other nations, its money, man power, total industrial plant, total labor power, total press and world political and commercial connections for only one goal: a war the object of which is a complete redistribution of power.

For five of these seven years Britain, France and the United States refused to see what was going on in front of their eyes and would not believe what the dictators themselves told them. The United States still refuses to believe it. The President knows the truth; he knew it earlier than any of the democratic statesmen of the world. But the people of America do not know it. They watch with fascinated and horrified eyes the course which affairs take, and do not realize that the United States itself is dangerously unprepared in its mind, its economic organization and in its defenses to survive the twentieth century.

NO CHANGES of leadership or strategy on the part of the Allies can overcome two assets which the Nazis have: division in the ranks of its victims and the moral inhibitions of the Allies by which their hands and feet are tied in advance.

The Nazis have a single-minded goal: to change the social structure of the earth and make Nazi Germany first the arbiter of Europe, and from Europe—which politically controls Africa and a large part of Asia, and economically controls South America—make her the arbiter of the world.

In our comfortable complacency our minds are unequal to the first necessary act of imagination, namely, the realization that this is a possibility.

It is a possibility. Its realization demands action that is swift and ruthless beyond all previous experience of political and military action. If it is to succeed, it must succeed in months, not in years. If it fails, the failure is the most gigantic in history.

The decision, therefore, to undertake it is a decision of insane daring or of insane desperation. But once it has been taken, once desperate move after desperate move has pushed Hitler to where he is, he cannot retreat except to make the total retreat. Nor can he delay. The strain is too tremendous—the strain not only upon his country but upon himself. Every sign points to the immense drive for the last decision.

The pressure on Mussolini is the most significant indication. Mussolini does not want to go into this war now, or did not want to two months ago. But if Mussolini is convinced that Hitler can win—and that means win in a matter of months—then he is going into the war, for that is his only hope of survival and gain, for the immediate next lap of history anyhow.

THE PLAN of Hitler allows for no concept of neutrality, any more than it allows, in ultimate victory, for any such thing as a small and independent nation. Therefore, when he violates the "neutrality" of Denmark and Norway and occupies those countries he is taking not only a temporary step for strategical reasons, but a permanent step for ideological reasons. As long as the Nazis are in power in Germany they will never get out of Denmark, even if and after they have won the war.

The existence of the small nations with any degree of autonomy depends upon victory for the Allies. In Hitler's dream of redistribution of Europe the small countries will be provinces of Germany, controlled financially, politically and economically from Berlin. Hitler will make his own United States of Europe, but with the most limited states' rights and without any bill of rights.

The fantastic thing about this war is that the governments of every neutral country know this. They are under no delusions whatsoever, but despite the fact that they know it and despite the fact that not a single one of them is able to defend itself and that there is no system of collective security under which any of them would certainly come to the help of his neighbor, despite the fact that the only powers which can and will defend them are Britain and France, they cling to a legal conception of impartiality which is utterly without reality.

BECAUSE BRITAIN and France are fighting for the basic concept of Europe, which is diversity in unity, and are trying in an anarchic and revolutionary world to hold aloft the concept of law and of "a decent respect for the opinions of mankind," they are tied hand and foot. They must either crash the West Wall or do what Germany does—advance blow by blow, moving in upon the protagonist through neutral territory where the gains can be greatest with the least loss.

No matter what government had been in power in England and no matter how much energy and intelligence were at hand, it is very doubtful whether an attempt to come to the assistance of Norway from the sea could have succeeded in overcoming the first advantage, of ruthless, instantaneous, unwarned attack, aimed at possessing or demolishing the airdromes, particularly an attack aimed against a country undermined by treason, and, for all modern purposes, utterly undefended and completely unprepared.

Germany, sitting in the center, protected at her back, strikes out with her left hand today and with her right hand tomorrow, and hopes that the Allies, running now to this corner of Europe and now to that in defense of "neutrals," will dissipate and divide their forces, while a series of humiliations weakens their internal morale. If she can persuade the French to blame the British for this fiasco, and the British to blame the French for the next one, that is all to the good.

BUT HITLER cannot win the war by taking all the small countries of Europe, north and south and east and west. He can only pocket them and use them as bases for the real attack in the place that will bring the real decision.

If the German press, the pressure upon Mussolini and the choice of Norway indicate anything at all, they indicate that Hitler will perhaps make one more minor move before he strikes with all the force of the German machine upon the head and solar plexus of the British Empire—upon England herself and upon the eastern communications of the empire. He needs perhaps one more base for such a blow in the west. Holland would be ideal if Holland could be got without involving Belgium and thus France. And he needs the Italian fleet, air and land forces, the latter supplemented by his own in the Near East.

If there is a move in Holland, it is possible that we shall see some new version of the Trojan horse tactic. Holland, like all the other small states except one—namely, Switzerland—is very badly prepared to defend itself even for a short time.

When the history of this period is written it may be described as the era of neutrality to end neutrality. For the defense of neutrality presumes either countries strong enough to defend it themselves, or a world in which it is a generally accepted concept and not merely an idea held by one side of the struggle.

Associated Press Staff Men Write About 90 Years of News

Book, Rich in Anecdote, Describes History of Agency From Modest Beginning to Present Vastness

By the Associated Press

New York, May 9.—For more than 90 years, now, reporters for the Associated Press have covered the news of the world, its wars and its tragedies, its comedies and its achievements.

The story of these men—men who saw history in the making from ringside seats—has been told in book form by two young newspapermen whose research into the past has taken them two years.

Oliver Gramling, assisted by William A. Kinney, wrote the book, which covers the years from 1848, in which the A. P. had its beginning, to 1938. Both are members of the Associated Press staff, as is Henry Barrow, the artist, who created the illustrations.

Often, only a line in some yellowed document gave the authors their clew to the activities of some early A. P. man, revealing he had been on the spot—covering the news. They searched through more than 3,000 contemporary records and decades of official reports in their quest for the story-behind-the-story that makes up their absorbing tale.

Bernhardt's Salute

Not only a factual record—and the facts are far from dry-as-dust—the volume is rich in human anecdote.

For instance there is the story of Sarah Bernhardt's salute to Sam Davis in 1907; as much a part of the tale as the telling of financial panic, or war, or death and destruction.

The authors describe it this way:

"Sam Davis, a Nevada string correspondent, . . . interviewed the great Sarah Bernhardt for the Carson Appeal, his own little newspaper; for the San Francisco Examiner, and for the Cooperative.

"The actress liked him so much that, when her train was ready to leave, she put her hands on his shoulders, kissed him on either cheek and then squarely on the mouth. Said she, 'the right cheek for the Carson Appeal, the left for the Examiner, the lips, my friend, for yourself.'

"Davis displayed no signs of bashfulness. 'Madame,' he exclaimed, 'I also represent the Associated Press, which serves 380 papers west of the Mississippi River alone.'"

Dedicated to Noyes

The volume is dedicated to Frank B. Noyes, who was president of the Associated Press for 38 years and a member of the executive committee for 45 years. It will be published in September by Farrar & Rinehart. Although it has not yet been officially named, it carries the working title of "A. P.—Ninety Years of News."

It is a story of men, of nations, and of events, of swiftly changing scenes and tempos of nearly a century; of the progress and advance of the United States to a position of world power and the parallel expansion of the Associated Press.

Modest Beginning

It tells of that first meeting in early May, 1848, when men, representing six New York newspapers, decided to pool their news-gathering resources—an act that marked the beginning of the A. P.

The first organization began operations in a small attic office in lower Manhattan. Its general agent, who received $20 weekly, had one assistant.

From this modest start, the book traces the rise of the A. P. to its modern organization, with 1,400 member newspapers, with 285,000 miles of leased wires in the United States alone, and its great new photo network on which news pictures are transmitted by wire, a development which means that news pictures now move simultaneously with the news.

KATHARINE BRUSH
"Uncompromisingly post-war," says Lewis Gannett. His review of her latest book appears on this page, and her columns are published every Sunday in The Post

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Pre-War, Post-War Women

KATHARINE BRUSH grew up in Newburyport, the one girl at the boys' school of which her father was headmaster; Michael Strange grew up a lonely child in Newport society. Katharine Brush flunked Latin and so missed college; at 16 she became a movie columnist on The Boston Traveler; at 18 she married and went to Ohio. Michael Strange was expelled from the Brearley and from a convent school; at 18 she married an American diplomat and went to Europe. Katharine Brush wrote short stories, divorced her first husband and came to New York; in 1930 her glittering best seller, "Young Man of Manhattan," established her as a female F. Scott Fitzgerald, historian of the speak-easy age. Michael Strange wrote poetry, divorced her first husband, married John Barrymore, went on the stage, gave up Barrymore and married a New York downtown lawyer. And, in this week of 1940, these two traditionally glamorous American women publish their autobiographies, telling of happy second or third marriages. Michael Strange calls hers "Who Tells Me True" (Scribners, $3.75); Katharine Brush calls hers "This Is On Me" (Farrar and Rinehart, $2.75).

There the parallels end. . . . Well, not quite. For both women, presenting themselves as modern women of the world and exercising a certain frankness in the telling of their loves and sorrows and successes, nevertheless are strangely reticent about their ages. It requires a little ungallant detective work to calculate, from the rare dates in their narratives, that Katharine Brush must be nearing 40 and Michael Strange nearing 50. It is only a decade's difference, but it is a gulf. For Michael Strange writes with pre-war sentiment, as a pre-war personality, and Katharine Brush is totally and uncompromisingly, unsentimentally post-war. A decade may make a lot of difference.

Michael Strange's mother came of the old Austro-Hungarian aristocracy. Her father was an Oelrichs and a broker, but not, as Michael Strange explains, of the rich branch of the family. (Her father complained bitterly when her mother ran up a bill of $8,000 for dresses.)

Revolt In The British Parliament

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN managed to escape defeat on Wednesday by a very narrow margin. But the sands of the present government are obviously running out.

Three things saved the premier. The first was the size of the government's normal following. More than a hundred Conservatives abstained from voting and an additional 40 or more braved the ire of the party whips to vote with the opposition yet the government emerged with a majority of 81.

The second was Winston Churchill's able if not wholly satisfactory defense of the government's conduct of the war in Norway and his acceptance of full blame for the disaster. Churchill's prestige has been dimmed by what has happened. Yet he continues to command the respect of Parliament and public opinion. It is certain that had he chosen this moment to part company with Chamberlain, as he did so often in the past, the government would have fallen.

But there was also a third consideration that operated in favor of the government. That was the understandable reluctance on the part of many Conservatives to vote out the regime at a moment of great crisis and also the uncertainty as to whether any change at this time would necessarily be a change for the better.

Yet that consideration has steadily diminishing force. It will disappear altogether unless a halt is put to the long succession of disasters from Manchuria to Namsos with which the names of present members of the government are associated.

THE DEBATE was not without its perils to the nation as well as to the government. The upsurge of bitterness by opposition speakers, the admissions of Britain's inadequate preparations, particularly in the field of aviation, may encourage Hitler and Mussolini to do their worst and further weaken Britain's prestige among neutrals. Yet the debate was in no sense a sign of weakness. It was, on the contrary, an unmistakable sign of strength.

Democracies operate under a great handicap in waging war. Unlike the totalitarian dictatorships they do not regard war as a normal activity to which all of the nation's energies must be directed. War for them is a violent deviation from the norm requiring very painful adjustments which cannot be brought about overnight. Thus the Third Reich at the very outset was prepared to the hilt, could chose the moment of striking and the field of action. The Allies, on the other hand, have had to telescope what should have been the preparation of years into a few months and to do so under the enormous difficulty of having simultaneously to wage war. Many believe that this will prove a fatal weakness. Perhaps so. But by no means all the advantages are with the totalitarian dictators in time of war.

WHAT HAPPENED in the House of Commons on Tuesday and Wednesday was by no means without its constructive side. In a democracy there is always a distinction between the nation and the regime. Regimes come and go. If they are able and successful, they are permitted to remain in power; if not, they are eventually forced out and the national will is expressed by a new set of leaders.

In the course of Parliamentary debate in Great Britain this week violent differences of opinion were expressed regarding the conduct of the war. Winston Churchill did not see eye to eye with Admiral Sir Roger Keyes; Premier Chamberlain with Herbert Morrison and Lloyd George. But beneath these differences there was a fundamental unity so strong and so striking that no one even bothered to express it.

That was the unity regarding aim. Conservatives, Liberals, Laborites, are all determined to carry the war to a successful conclusion. The result of the debacle in Norway was neither to destroy the will to fight nor the will to win. On the contrary, the mood of determination was accentuated. The attacks on the government were wholly the result of the feeling that Mr. Chamberlain's leadership was too feeble and too fumbling to give fullest expression to this national will.

NOW WARS ARE not won by morale alone, no more than by man power alone or arms alone. But no belligerent nation can long stand the deterioration of its people's morale and there is still a great deal of truth in Napoleon's dictum that in wartime the morale is to the material as five to one.

During the years of uneasy peace that preceded this war and the months subsequent to the outbreak of hostilities, the peoples of Great Britain and France have been subjected to a long series of shocks. They saw one bastion fall after another. Hitler's "peaceful" victories over Austria and Czecho-Slovakia were followed by his warlike triumphs in Poland, Denmark and Norway. But these developments, far from destroying the morale of the British and French, only aroused and has tended to strengthen their determination to fight the menace of Hitlerism.

This process cannot go on forever. But there is not yet the slightest sign of any crumbling in the morale of the Allies. The mood of the Parliamentary debate in England was a mood of utter determination. Mr. Chamberlain may go as Daladier went. Mr. Chamberlain may stay, but with a different set of colleagues. In any event, the British nation fights on and it does so because that is the will of the people. Chamberlain is not England. But the Third Reich is Hitler.

ACCORDING to all present indications German morale, fed on past victories and the hope of victories yet to come, is strong.

During these months the preparations of seven years are telling in the scales. But if there is a halt to the succession of triumphs, if instead of victories there are defeats, what then?

Will the German people react to such a situation in the way the British people have reacted? Will their backs be stiffened? Will they rally with the same force around a Hitler who has blundered as around a Hitler who has produced one triumph after another? One may be permitted to have one's doubts. For, if history proves anything at all, it proves that dictatorships cannot stand defeat. For them disaster means doom.

Justice Stone, Treadway Ask More Police

Subcommittee Adds 25 in Supply Bill After Representative Tells of Intruder

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

A threatened attack on a House member and an appeal for more police protection from a Justice of the United States Supreme Court were disclosed yesterday as the Senate Appropriations Committee approved subcommittee recommendations to add $1,405,623 to the District supply bill, bringing it to $49,697,340.

Release of a transcript of executive hearings on the bill revealed that Justice Harlan F. Stone had written to a member of the subcommittee appealing for more police in his neighborhood and that white-haired Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, had been threatened by an intruder.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, meanwhile, gave notice in the Senate that he would seek to call up the appropriations bill in the Senate Monday under unanimous consent. The Senate is not in session today.

Stone Wrote to Nye

The testimony of Justice Stone and Representative Treadway were understood to have influenced the subcommittee in its decision to provide funds for the employment of 25 additional policemen.

Justice Stone, who lives at 2340 Wyoming avenue northwest, wrote to Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, including excerpts from a report of the Washington Criminal Justice Association in support of his statement that more police are needed in the National Capital.

"The recent alarming increase of crimes of violence, robbery, burglary and the like in the city," he wrote, "and particularly in this neighborhood (his own), has drawn my attention and that of many others, to the inadequate policing of the city and to the necessity of making some provision for an increase in the next annual budget of the District."

Treadway Threatened at Home

After citing the request of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, for 100 more policemen, Justice Stone said:

"It is indisputable that the increase in police force has not kept pace with the increase in population more or less permanently residing here, to say nothing of the floating population which has drifted to Washington since the depression.

"And, judging by the boldness and frequency of crimes in the city, the police protection is inadequate."

Representative Treadway told the subcommittee, the record disclosed, that he was threatened by an intruder in his home, 2490 Tracy place northwest.

Many Congressmen live in the Kalorama section, including Senator White (Republican), of Maine, of 2449 Tracy place.

Treadway said that patrolmen were seldom seen in the area until after his encounter.

"A colored man came to my house one night," he recalled. "I went to the door myself, and this young man stood there and said that he used to be a caddy for me at the Burning Tree Club.

"I said, 'What of that?' He said, 'My mother just died.'

"I'm sorry. What of that?'

"He said, 'I owe some bills.'

"I said, 'You're not going to get any bill out of me.'

"Would Have Grabbed Any Woman"

"I held my hands so that he could not get by me, one hand on the casing, and one on the door. I put my hand in my pocket and I said, 'Here is some silver.' But he wouldn't accept that.

"When the police officers came they said it was very fortunate that I had gone to the door instead of my wife or some female member of the household, because they said he certainly would have grabbed any woman who went to the door and that that was what was being done at the time. To what extent the situation has been cured I am not prepared to say."

Treadway explained that after he had taken the matter up with the Kalorama Citizens Association "a good many men were sent out there for the time being."

"In order to do that," he added, "they were obliged to take these men from other sections of the city which were probably as deserving of watchful care as we were."

Treadway concluded that he "was sorry that these attacks on people in the neighborhood did not occur a little sooner so that it could have been taken up in the House."

Inspects Gun on Trolley

A 45-year-old colored man learned yesterday that a crowded street car is no place to inspect a loaded pistol. He will be given an opportunity in Police Court today to explain why he had an unlicensed gun in his possession in the first place.

The man first came to notice of police when an unidentified civilian emerged from a trolley at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest and told Patrolman H. F. Elliott he had seen a colored man loading a pistol on the car. Elliott telephoned ahead in an effort to locate the car and its suspicious passenger.

After searching several cars, Eighth Precinct Policemen S. L. Stouffer and D. M. Brown came upon a motorman who said the suspect got off at Massachusetts and Nebraska avenues. Discovered in Washington Cathedral grounds, he said he had found the gun and shoved it in his pocket while he looked for work.

Office Worker's Tulips Win Woodridge Show Sweepstakes

WINNERS 6 AND 4—Top—Edward Paul Secrest, jr., 6, is proud of his iris arrangement that won third prize in the section of the Woodridge Garden Club show open to children under 12. Lower—Pat Sweeney, 4, won first prize in the same group with the arrangement of tulips at right. The arrangement at left, entered by Mrs. Charles Bowne, was named the best in the show

John B. Charlton, whose work at the Department of Agriculture is in the office of budget and finance, left his figuring and went out to win with the products of his soil last night. His tulips brought him the sweepstakes in the Woodridge Garden Club show.

239 Exhibits

The club's fourteenth annual tulip show in Sherwood Church Hall at Twenty-second street and Rhode Island avenue northeast brought 239 exhibits from 28 persons. Dr. Freeman Weiss, president of the club, said that although Woodridge is "a noted rose community, there's a growing interest in tulips and other flowers" which bloom before the roses start.

A sturdy red tulip, about 32 inches tall, named Gloria Swanson, won the title "best tulip in the show." It was grown by Charlton at his home at 31 Franklin street Hyattsville. He claims no special methods in tulip-growing, but rather insists that tulips are so satisfactory because they don't require a lot of coddling.

Mrs. C. E. Yeatman, of 4005 Twenty-first street northeast, won the top total of points, 22, in flowers other than tulips, included in this show.

In the tulip competition, Mrs. F. E. Burgess, of 4012 Twenty-second street northeast, came second to Charlton with 23 points; Mrs. Charles Bowne, 2001 Rhode Island avenue northeast, third with 19 points; Mrs. A. C. Wilson, 3420 South Dakota avenue northeast, fourth, with 17 points.

Mrs. Bowne with 19 points and Mrs. Burgess with 16, followed Mrs. Yeatman in the competition among other flowers.

With small pink tulips in a china bowl shaped like a lamb, Mrs. Bowne received the award for best arrangement in the show. Mrs. R. G. Peterson, of 3030 South Dakota avenue northeast, was adjudged winner of the award for the best miniature arrangement—forgetme-nots and yellow alyssum in a vase no larger than a thimble.

Winn T. Simmons judged the specimen blooms and collections of tulips, while Mrs. H. E. Ewing, of the Takoma Horticultural Club, judged the arrangement classes.

Winners in the various classes were:

Class 1, 12 named varieties—John B. Charlton, first; Mrs. C. J. Bowne, second. Class 2, six named varieties—Mrs. F. E. Burgess. Class 4, specimen blooms, Darwin types, violet purple and dark blue—Charlton, Mrs. Burgess, Mrs. A. C. Wilson. Class 5, specimen blooms, scarlet and red—Charlton, Mrs. Burgess, Mathilda E. Bartlett. Class 6, rose and pink specimen blooms—Mrs. R. G. Peterson, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Burgess. Class 7, lavendar and lilac specimen blooms—Mrs. George U. Graff, Mrs. Burgess, Mrs. Wilson. Class 8, white specimen blooms—Charlton, Mrs. Burgess, Mrs. E. A. Clark. Class 9, yellow specimen blooms—Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Peterson.

Class 11, violet and purple breeder types—Miss I. Gummel, Charlton. Class 12, brown and bronze—Charlton, Mrs. Wilson. Class 13, lilac and pink—Charlton. Class 14, yellow and orange—Mrs Wilson, Mrs. M. S. Porter. Class 15, red, cottage or May-flowering type—Dr. Freeman Weiss, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Bowne. Class 16, pink, rose and lilac—Mrs. W. A Shiner, Charlton, Mrs. Graff. Class 17, orange and bronze—Miss I. Gummel, Mrs Bowne. Class 18, yellow—Charlton, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Burgess. Class 19, white—Charlton, Mrs. Bowne, Mrs. Burgess. Class 20, lily-flowered—Mrs. Wilson, Charlton, Mrs. Porter.

Class 21, Rembrandt, Bizarre, Byblomen—Mrs. Clark, Dr. Weiss. Class 22, parrot—Charlton, Mrs. Peterson, Mrs. Bowne. Class 23, double—Mrs. Burgess, Mrs Bowne. Class 25, other tulips—Dr. Weiss. Class 26, vase of tulips—Charlton, Howard Saxton, Mrs. F. Schwertner. Class 27, vase of tulips—Mrs. Charlton, Mrs. Burgess, Mathilda Bartlett. Class 30, vase of white tulips—Mrs. Bowne. Class 31, vase of mixed tulips—Mrs. George Clark. Class 32, bowl of tulips—Mrs. Charlton. Class 33, bowl—J. J. Srkna, Mrs. E. A. Clark. Class 34, arrangement of floating tulips—Mrs. Burgess. Class 35, Japanese arrangement—Mrs. Burgess, Mrs. Schwertner, Mrs. Bartlett. Class 36, novelty arrangement—Mrs. Bowne, Mrs. Yeatman, Mrs. E. A. Clark. Class 37, miniature arrangement of tulips—Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Yeatman, Mrs. Bartlett.

Class 38, arrangement by children—Pat Sweeney, Charlotte Weiss, Marjorie Peterson, Edward Paul Seacrest, jr. Class 39, narcissus (a)—Dr. Weiss, Mrs. E. A. Clark, Mrs. Yeatman. (b)—M. C. Wilson, first and second, Marjorie Peterson. Class 40, lily of the valley—Miss M. Linder, first and second; Marjorie Peterson. Class 41, bleeding heart—Miss Gummel, H. J. Clay, Mrs. Schwertner. Class 44, pansies—Mrs. J. Srnka, A. P. Hoffman, second and third. Class 45, flowering shrubs—Miss Bartlett, Hoffman, M. Srnka. Class 46, other flowers—Mrs. Yeatman, Henry Clay, M. C. Wilson. Class 47, miniature arrangement, not over 3 inches—Mrs. Graff, Mrs. Burgess, Miss Linder. Class 48, miniature arrangement not over 5 inches—Miss Peterson, Mrs. E. A. Clark, Mrs. Graff. Class 49, corsage—Mrs. Bowne. Class 50, Japanese or line arrangement—Mrs. Yeatman, Mrs. Sheiner, Mrs. Peterson.

Archbishop Warns Of Communism

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, last night warned against "evils within a nation that are worse than war," citing communism, divorce, juvenile crime, "race suicide," and "lack of proper respect of authority."

He addressed more than 200 members of the Curley Club of Washington at the Continental Hotel. The occasion was the presentation of a check for more than $1,000 to the archbishop from the club for use in scholarships in Catholic high schools of the city.

Discussing conditions in the current war, the archbishop declared that "men seem to have forgotten God."

"Here at home things are not so peaceful as you think," he said, "forces are eating at the vitals of the Nation." Communism, he said, "is here to stay with us." He deplored what he said was a large number of communists teaching in higher institutions of learning.

James J. Corbett presided at the gathering. Miss Dorothy Barrett, past president, was in charge of entertainment.

D. C. Parking, Tax Issues Discussed

4 Associations Meet; Congress Heights Opposes Rise in Real Estate Levy

Four citizens associations met last night, two for the last time this season. The double-parking problem in Washington was discussed by the Congress Heights Association, while the American University Park Association went on record in opposition to any increase in District real estate taxes.

The Washingtonians requested the House and Senate Committees to revise the present personal property tax of the District. Mrs. Roosevelt was thanked by the Columbia Heights Association for her indosement of suffrage here and for her interest in the city's public welfare institutions.

Columbia Heights

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association last night thanked Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt for her efforts in behalf of the Capital's public welfare institutions, and for indorsing the cause of suffrage in the District.

The resolution expressed the group's appreciation "for the helping hand held out by her to the unfortunate inmates of Washington's ill-cared-for public institutions and for her indorsement of the cause of suffrage for the voteless American taxpayers of the Nation's Capital."

Dr. A. D. Smith, chairman of the committee on education and schools, introduced a resolution asking that the Wilson Teachers College recreation field be available as a children's playground when it is not in use by college students.

Another resolution, introduced by George H. Brown, asked that police officers off duty be assigned to serve at social and diplomatic functions. Officials were recently accused of weakening the force along the crime front to meet the demand for police at social functions.

Other resolutions opposed the Schulte bill to regulate barber shops in the District, and approved the pending House bill authorizing Federal authorities to deport undesirable aliens.

Mrs. Ella West and Horace Baxter were named delegates to meetings of the Outdoor Cleanliness Association.

Col. Luther R. Maddox was re-elected president of the association. George H. Brown, Dr. A. V. Smith and Mrs. Ella West were elected first, second and third vice presidents, respectively. Mrs. Marie F. Maddox was named recording secretary and Walter I. Swanson, corresponding secretary. Glendie B. Young will be treasurer.

American University Park

The American University Park Citizens Association last night went on record in opposition to an increase in real estate taxes in the District at its final meeting of the year held at Hurst Hall, American University.

The association reiterated its request for an elementary school in the American University area.

The group asked for ten-minute bus service during the middle of the day.

It was voted to sponsor a tennis club and baseball club, which are to be self-supporting. The Outdoor Cleanliness Association program, sponsored by the Dupont Circle Association was approved.

Congress Heights

Double-parking in District streets was scored last night by the Congress Heights Citizens Association holding its final meeting of the season at the Congress Heights School. Lieut. John L. Norris, of No. 11 Precinct, spoke.

A request for lateral sewers running into the Oxon Run interceptor from Tenth, Eleventh and Savannah streets southeast, was made by the group. The National Park and Planning Commission was requested to plan a baseball diamond on Oxon Run parkway.

Washingtonians

A resolution to request Senate and House District committees to revise the personal property tax of the District was adopted last night by the Washingtonians at their monthly meeting.

The group, which met at 2153 California street northwest, was addressed by Col. John W. Oehmann, inspector of buildings, who answered questions concerning his department.

The group also indorsed the bill pending in Congress providing for the election of two of the District Commissioners and suggested that an amendment to include election of the District Engineer Commissioner be written into the bill.

Squirrel Goes Nuts

You would think life for a squirrel in the woods around the National Zoo would be happy and carefree. But yesterday one of the squirrels there flew into a terrific rage, bit three men and paid for his fling with immediate immolation.

Two of the victims were treated at the Zoo's infirmary, one for bitten fingers, the other for bites on the back of his neck; the third disappeared. The squirrel was rounded up by Zoo guards and will be examined today by chemists of the Department of Agriculture for possible rabies.

$43,626 Pledged to Symphony

Fund Drive Workers Are Encouraged By First Report, Anonymous Backing

Encouraged by the anonymous offer of a Washingtonian to underwrite the Watergate concerts, volunteer workers yesterday reported 1,124 pledges, totaling $43,626.28, in the tenth annual sustaining fund drive for the National Symphony Orchestra.

By stipulation of the anonymous donor a minimum goal of $107,600 must be raised by workers to secure his backing of the summer concerts.

At the Carlton Hotel, where the first report meeting was held at a luncheon, A. F. E. Horn, campaign manager, told workers that he was encouraged over the first report—in which Army and Navy soliciting units announced progress above the first report of last year. The entire report was as follows:

Special gifts, quota, $61,500, pledges, 166, amount, $27,186.50; business and professional, quota, $14,000, pledges, 71, amount $4,153; Army, quota, $1,500, pledges, 203, amount $628.43; associations, quota, $7,500, pledges, 116, amount, $2,407.50; education, quota, $4,000, pledges, 51, amount, $1,168; Government, quota, $7,000 pledges, 108, amount, $1,182; Navy, quota, $3,500, pledges, 28, amount $672; Orchestra Guild, quota, $6,500, pledges, 331, amount, $4,788.60; suburban, quota, $2,500, pledges, 50, amount, $740.

The campaign chairman emphasized that the goal must be attained by Thursday, May 16, if the 1940-41 season is to become a reality.

Wise Appeals For Aid to Jews Now in Poland

Declaring that at no time in their history have Jews been called upon to suffer as are those living in Poland today, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise last night called for local support in a national Jewish appeal that opens next Tuesday.

The appeal will be launched to raise funds not only for needy Jews in Poland, but for Jewish refugees now in America and in Palestine.

"More than half of the 3,500,000 Jews in Poland were living on a low standard when the Germans marched into that country last September. Now their situation is infinitely worse," said Dr. Wise, who is honorary chairman of the national appeal.

Jews now living in Palestine may be compelled to fight if the current war spreads, the rabbi declared, adding "but if they must die they will do so fighting for their rights—not like rats in a trap."

More than 200 leaders of Jewish activities in the Capital heard Rabbi Wise, who was introduced by Rabbi Isadore Breslau, head of the District Zionist organization, who is co-chairman of the Washington appeal. Morris Simon, also a co-chairman, discussed plans for presenting the appeal next week. Isadore Hirschfield, honorary chairman of the drive in the District, also spoke.

Mrs. Raphael Tourover and Mrs. William G. Illch will be hostesses at a 4 p. m. tea in the Mayflower Hotel today for women leaders in the appeal.

Police Aide Kills Self as Wife Phones for Help

Earl Ronald Whipp, 39, special investigator for the Metropolitan Police and a World War veteran, shot himself to death last night at his home, 5408 First place northwest, while his wife was phoning police for aid.

Shell shocked in the last war, Whipp had been in poor health.

His wife said when he threatened to shoot himself last night she went to the phone to summon police. While she was talking he shot himself in the right temple.

Lowest Gas Tax

The District and the State of Missouri last year had the lowest gasoline tax rate, 2 cents a gallon. Top tax of 7 cents was charged in Florida, Louisiana and Tennessee.

The Public Roads Administration, which compiled the statistics, stated that the District had net total gasoline tax receipts of $2,791,000.

Aleen Buchanan, 17½, Yanked Out of Show by District Law

Aleen Stuart Buchanan had to sit in the audience at last night's performance of "Louisiana Purchase" because she's only 17. District child labor laws prevent her from appearing in the show, so she'll have to wait until it opens in New York before resuming her place in the ballet

The hand of the law reached into the National Theater last night and yanked Aleen Stuart Buchanan, pretty ballet dancer, out of the cast of "Louisiana Purchase."

Under the District's child labor law, girls under 18 are prohibited from taking part in professional performances after 7 p. m.

Miss Buchanan, a resident of Washington, appearing in her second musical comedy, is seventeen and a half.

The show didn't suffer greatly when Miss Buchanan was removed from the cast, on orders of an officer of the Department of School Attendance and Work Permits. There was an understudy ready to take her place. And anyway, she was relatively unimportant in a cast that included William Gaxton, Victor Moore and Vera Zorina.

To the young dancer herself, however, the incident was very important, particularly in view of the fact that her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Wager Brown, of Chevy Chase, and a friend of her family, Capt. Jorge Godoy, naval attache of the Argentina Embassy, were in the audience to see her perform.

Miss Buchanan was born in Newport, R. I. When she was 3 years old, her father, Capt. Richard Bell Buchanan, of the Marine Corps, was killed in Nicaragua. Her mother, the former Marjorie Jordan, later brought Aleen and her two sisters, Ann and Betty, to Washington and enrolled them in the Convent of the Sacred Heart, 1719 Masachusetts avenue northwest. The family lives at 2115 Bancroft place northwest.

Aleen studied under the sisters for 15 years. She was there in 1936 when Pope Pius XII, then Cardinal Pacelli, called at the convent during his whirlwind tour of Washington. In 1937, after studying dancing for a while here under Lisa Gardiner, she went to New York and enrolled in the American School of the Ballet.

Her first show was "The Streets of Paris," which had a nine-month run in New York. Her work in that won her a place in "Louisiana Purchase," in which she and seven other dancers support Zorina.

Leaving here tomorrow night, the show will go to New York, where Aleen will resume her place in the cast. New York has a child labor law, too, but it is not quite so inflexible as the one here.

Edmund Plohn, manager of the National Theater, who has developed a corrugated forehead rounding up midgets to take juvenile parts here, or canceling shows where midgets wouldn't do, recalled other cases last night.

Plohn, backed by many local and Federal officials, has been fighting for a bill which is to come before the House of Representatives Monday. The bill, H. R. 9293, would amend the child labor law so that juveniles would be permitted to appear in the professional theater after the Board of Education has determined that neither their health, morals nor education would be jeopardized.

Help Parks In Americas, U. S. Is Urged

Dr. Atwood Cites Survey Showing Neighbors Lack National Systems

Extension of our good neighbor policy to the point of instructing and encouraging Latin-American countries to develop national park conservation programs was advocated last night.

Speaking at the twenty-first anniversary of the National Parks Association, Dr. Wallace W. Atwood, president of Clark University, urged that American delegations be sent to South America to show Latin Americans the benefits learned from our successful park conservation program.

Dr. Atwood said a recent survey indicated few Latin-American countries except Argentina, Mexico and the Dominican Republic had national park systems.

Another speaker, Newton B. Drury, an executive of the California Starte Park Commission, spoke of the difficulties met by park administrators who are asked to satisfy conflicting interests.

Drury criticized what he called "technical virtuosity." He spoke of groups of men armed with ample funds—road builders, fire preventionists, landscapers, dam constructors, soil erosionists—all eager to employ their individual techniques "to mobilize on the unsuspecting landscape."

He called for intelligent discretion to combat the "democracy complex," which claims in effect that the public owns the parks and can develop them in the way to suit the majority.

"The parks," he said, "are a heritage, and no one generation has a right to use them up."

Among the guests at the meeting in the Cosmos Club were Robert Woods Bliss, former Ambassador to Argentina; Dr. D. Alfredo Sordelli, director of the Bacteriological Institute of Argentina; Dr. Pedro C. Sanchez, of Mexico, director of the Pan American Institute of Geography and History, and Dr. John C. Merriam, president emeritus of Carnegie Institution.

Rabbi Finkelstein Represents Jews In Peace Talks

President Roosevelt's personal machinery for bringing church and Government leaders together in consultation for world peace was complete today with acceptance yesterday of Rabbi Louis Finkelstein, head of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, of a White House invitation to represent American Jews in the peace conversations.

The New York rabbi succeeds Rabbi Cyrus Adler, who died recently.

Rabbi Finkelstein, who is 44 years old, thus takes his place with Pope Pius XII, head of the Catholic Church, and Dr. George A. Buttrick, president of the Federal Council of Churches, the Protestant representative, as Jewish member of the interfaith committee for peace.

The Jewish and Protestant leaders were asked by President Roosevelt last Christmas to assist him in "parallel endeavors" for peace. They were invited to come to the White House for periodic conferences.

Democratic Leaders Heap Praise on Hull

Ringing Tributes Given In Home Town Paper Issue Devoted to Him

By Robert C. Albright,
Post Staff Writer

Ringing tributes from President Roosevelt, Postmaster General Farley, Speaker Bankhead and other ranking Administration and diplomatic figures are profusely heaped on Secretary of State Hull in a strictly "non-political" Cordell Hull edition of his home town weekly newspaper.

A 64-page tabloid edition of the Carthage (Tenn.) Courier, dedicated to Hull's "48 years of faithful service," added to the enigma surrounding the Secretary's political intentions and his Presidential prospects.

The publishers bowed to Hull's repeated denials that he is a candidate or interested in politics and disavowed any effort to make it "a political vehicle," but frankly stated:

"It has been difficult to prepare the edition and not associate Mr. Hull with the Presidential possibilities which, rightly, have been thrust at him. To deny this, or to fail to recognize it, would be little short of hypocrisy."

Roosevelt Leads Tribute

President Roosevelt, who frequently has been reported favoring Hull as his White House successor, wrote the Carthage weekly that "Fortunate indeed is a community which can claim as its first citizen a man of the caliber of Cordell Hull."

Continued the President's letter, published in the issue:

"After all these years of public service which has included membership in both branches of the National Legislature, he is now, with all of his remarkable powers disciplined by study and experience, exercising the high responsibilities which fall to him as Secretary of State in a time of great international tension.

"The country is fortunate in having such a public servant in such a post and I, now, as through many years, consider it my good fortune to have him among my warmest personal friends."

Secretary Hull, who has declined to talk politics with intimate friends, cautioned others against activity for him, and put his foot down on one Tennessee Hull-for-President movement, is nonetheless repeatedly mentioned for the high office in articles throughout the issue.

"The editors of the Carthage Courier and other close personal friends respect the wishes of the great Secretary of State that nothing be done by them to promote the widespread demand that he become a candidate," said young Representative Albert Gore, of Carthage, known as Hull's Congressional protege.

"We cannot check the processes of our thinking, however, which, without exception, culminates in the thought that he would be a great President."

Farley Joins Chorus

The edition, which appeared as the "Draft Roosevelt" movement attained its highest peak, and as third term nomination knocking awaited only a reply from the White House door, carried warm praise for Hull from some active Democratic Presidential candidates and dark horses.

Postmaster General Farley, a candidate in his own right without any "ifs," who has been reported sympathetic to a "Hull-Farley" ticket, wrote the Carthage publishers that nothing has ever happened to change his conviction that Hull is "the most unselfish man I ever met in politics."

"By unselfishness in politics, I mean a sincere endeavor to put the common welfare above private advantage in the consideration of public problems," said Farley. "Measured by that stern test, there is no man of this generation who stands higher than Cordell Hull. The proof of this lies in the fact that not a single blemish mars his long career in public office."

Speaker Bankhead, Alabama's "favorite son" candidate, said in a contributed article that Hull "is one of the very first citizens of the world," adding: "I think it is a fair estimate to assert that he is one of the really great statesmen of modern times, and will go down in history with the universal admiration and respect of the entire civilized world."

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, another "dark horse" possibility, who will again be Democratic convention keynoter if he wants it, said Hull "has won the confidence and respect of all the people of the United States and the world."

Third Term Crops Up

Senator McKellar, Tennessee Democrat and Hull's former colleague, injected a third term note, stating: "If President Roosevelt refuses to become a candidate for a third term or declines to accept the nomination, in my judgment, Secretary Hull is the proper man to succeed him as President." McKellar added that if Hull is "nominated and elected President, I have no doubt he will continue his successful career in that high position."

Resounding praise from foreign Democrats figured prominently in the issue, with Count de Saint Quentin, French Ambassador to the United States, viewing Hull's espousal of "economic liberalism as the most decisive factor of world peace."

"Notwithstanding the great hardships which the war entails, the French government shares Mr. Hull's convictions that autarchy is bound to destroy not only economic but also political liberty and that the Secretary of State's policy is the only one that will make the reorganization of a sound peaceful world possible," said the French Ambassador's published statement. "The one condition is, of course, that the war comes to a successful end before financial and economic exhaustion destroys the very roots of the social life of belligerents and neutrals alike."

New York Times Is Awarded Ayer Typographical Prize

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 9.—Award of the F. Wayland Ayer Cup for excellence in newspaper typography for 1940 to the New York Times was announced today by N. W. Ayer & Son, Inc.

The award, made annually since 1931 in connection with an exhibition, was based on typography, make-up and presswork, without regard to the editorial content of the papers. All pages, including those inside, were considered by the judges. The judging was based on editions of March 19.

The New York Times previously won the cup in 1933 and 1935. Other winners have been the New York Herald Tribune, four times; the Hartford Courant, the Los Angeles Times and the Newark Evening News.

Honorable mentions were awarded in these four classifications:

Standard size papers of more than 50,000 circulation:

First, the Philadelphia Inquirer; second, the Christian Science Monitor; third, the New York Herald Tribune.

Standard size papers with from 10,000 to 50,000 circulation:

First, the Chattanooga Daily Times; second, the Glendale (Calif.) News Press; third, the Passaic (N. J.) Herald News.

Standard size papers with less than 10,000 circulation:

First, the Iron Mountain (Mich.) News; second, the Hornell (N. Y.) Evening Tribune; third, the Titusville (Pa.) Herald.

Tabloids:

First, the Chicago Daily News; second, the Washington News; third, the New York Daily Mirror.

Bryan Dismisses Theft Charges

Insufficient evidence yesterday prompted Alexandria Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan to ask a dismissal of a charge of theft against Woodrow Johnson, 27, of North Washington street, before a grand jury.

Johnson was charged with the theft of $13 from Walter Bryant, at police headquarters. Following a preliminary hearing in Police Court Judge James Reece Duncan ordered Johnson held pending grand jury action yesterday.

The case was nol-prossed by Judge William B. Woolls.

Hanes Fears U. S. Monopoly Of Farm Credit

Bankers' Chief Sees Jones Bill Leading To Absolute Control

By Hedley Donovan.
Post Staff Writer

Robert M. Hanes, president of the American Bankers Association, charged yesterday that passage of the Jones-Wheeler bill would lead eventually to a Federal monopoly in the entire farm loan field.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is backing the far-reaching bill, Hanes asserted, to further his "political aspirations."

Hanes delivered his attack on the pending farm credit legislation in a speech before the North Carolina Bankers Association convention at Pinehurst, N. C.

Meanwhile in Washington a Senate Banking Subcommittee heard renewed objections to the bill from R. E. Short, president of the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation, who contended that the Federal Land Banks already possess authority "to assist worthy borrowers in retaining their farms and getting out of debt."

Short insisted that the various methods of liberalizing payment terms now in use by the land banks can accomplish as much as the Jones-Wheeler bill in relieving distress in the areas of severe farm depression where a high proportion of loans are delinquent.

Urges Limited Change

If further liberalization is necessary, headvoated "separate emergency provision" which would not involve the entire farm loan system.

Short expressed fears that the "sweeping and mandatory" language of the section of the bill which provides for automatic scale-down of indebtedness whenever a borrower can show that his mortgage exceeds the productive value of his land "would be regarded as a general invitation to all borrowers" to seek a scale-down "whether they are entitled to it or not."

Senators Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, and La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, co-sponsors with Wheeler of the Senate bill, interrupted the witness frequently.

La Follette accused Short of supporting a credit system which "will continue to grind farmers to powder and force them from their homes into the highways." Bankhead at one point told the witness, "You sound very much like a banker."

Bankhead, acting chairman of the subcommittee considering the bill, told reporters the measure "undoubtedly needs some revision." Hearings will probably continue into next week, he said. The House Agriculture Committee is expected to resume hearings on the bill next week.

Hanes, in his address before the banking convention, declared that the Jones-Wheeler bill "would destroy the existing cooperative agricultural credit system, destroy tre Federal land banks and place the farmer borrower at the mercy of a single bureaucratic credit agency."

The measure would "drive out of the farm credit field all lenders, except one, the Department of Agriculture," he said.

Hanes described as "a typical political speech" a recent address in which Secretary Wallace charged that the opposition of banks to the Jones-Wheeler bill is part of a campaign against lower interest rates for the farmer.

Wallace, according to Hanes, "avoided any attempt to meet a single argument advanced against this deliberate proposal to destroy the Federal Land Bank system and substitute for it a centralized, bureaucratic farm credit system."

The bankers' association has never opposed the present 3½ per cent interest rate on land bank loans, he stated, and approves an extension of the rate until agricultural income is restored to a "reasonable level."

Hanes said the "real issue" in the dispute over the Jones-Wheeler bill is "whether a system of agricultural credits operated by the farms of the country with Government supervision and utilizing private capital shall survive, or whether it shall be perverted into a socialized credit system under centralized political control and financed by the United States Treasury."

Wallace has never explained "this sudden rush to abolish an existing credit system established 24 years ago after long and careful study," he said, adding that the Secretary "cannot obscure the real issue by the cheap political trick of calling names or impugning motives."

Color Riotous in Straw Hats, Coming In Season Wednesday

FIVE DAYS FOR FELTS—Grant Gordon's thoughts have turned to leghorns, panamas and sennits since the deadline for felts and bowlers is only five days in the offing. Evelyn Cave was there to help him make a selection

Whether to offset the gloom from Europe or to prove that the male can show a dash of daring, the puggree is in ascendancy and the coconuts and hemps, the honakas, peanut straws and colored leghorns will form a straw hat galaxy to brighten the town, come next Wednesday, May 15.

Color, mostly in puggree bands, is up, experts showed yesterday, and the tendency to telescope the crowns is apparent in the stocks.

Brims, style indications show, will be generally wider and the straws follow the shapes of the felts the male shook last winter's snow off.

The shop clerks look to brisk sales of the new gear, but are fortified with the old stiff straw models for customers with lingering sentiment for the discus style hats they were wont to sail across ball parks when the season ended and the home team won.

The puggree bands, which have appeared and reappeared in the last 40 years and originated out of the Hindu turban, come up this season with poker dots and the glen plaid.

The coconut, a dark, wide-woven straw, found popularity in the Bahamas and is looked to hopefully by local merchants.

Trade Board Officers Invited to Cruise

Officers of the Board of Trade have been invited to be the guests of the Junior Chamber of Commerce on the maiden trip down the Potomac of the steamer Mount Vernon, sailing from Seventh street at 8:30 p. m., May 16.

Board of Trade officers who have been invited to join 1,500 members of the junior board and their friends on the trip include James E. Colliflower, president; Fred A. Smith, first vice president; Lanier P. McLachlen, second vice president; Granville Gude, secretary; Edward F. Colladay, general counsel; George Plitt, sr., treasurer; Frederick P. H. Sidddons, assistant treasurer; Frank R. Strunk, sergeant at arms; Harrison Brand, jr., executive secretary, and William H. Press, assistant executive secretary.

Quill Renews Blast at Dies

Michael J. Quill, head of the C. I. O. Transport Workers Union, yesterday assailed Representative Martin Dies as "an agent of the war lords in an attempt to wreck the labor movement in this country."

Quill was ejected from the witness stand Wednesday after charging the Dies Committee with efforts to force America into war.

Home Economist Lists Menu for Mother's Day

'Ubiquitous' Mrs. Elinor Lee Who Combines Business Career, Motherhood, Homemaking Describes Some Appealing Recipes

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

BUSINESS is the great adventure of modern life, but we still pin our faith to the young woman who though active in business still keeps to the thought of a home life. The old pattern—to stay at home and sew a fine seam—does not exist for many women. In times like ours, it is often necessary for them to adapt their lives to existing conditions. Such is the way with one enterprising, talented young woman known to many in Washington.

Martha Ellyn

Mrs. Elinor Lee is an outstanding example of the career mother. She really may be characterized as being "ubiquitous." As Home Economist and Director of Women's Activities, WJSV, Columbia Broadcasting System, she carries on a home maker's program and other activities 5 days a week, advising about food, laundering, the use of flowers in the home, health and other subjects and also introducing many outstanding personalities who come to Washington. Recently she has become interested in Low Cost Model Homes, and twice a week her programs takes her listeners into these homes to show their advantages.

Has Young Daughter

When business duties are finished Mrs. Lee is then busy with home affairs. Kitty Sue, her 6-year-old daughter is one of her mother's chief interests. Like mother, like daughter, may be applied to these two for the girl is constantly asking her mother to show her how to cook, to use her small electric iron and to do other things around the home as her mother does.

Since this Sunday is Mother's Day, Mrs. Lee is planning a dinner for this occasion, including her mother's favorite foods. It is an appealing menu. Mrs. Lee has given me an "advance" on her menu and the recipes for two of the dishes she will serve. She will improvise a delightful table setting for this special occasion, using an ivory damask table cloth, crystal scales holding pink and white carnations as a centerpiece, and crystal goblets of Fostoria in the Meadow Rose pattern.

Mrs. Lee's menu and recipes follow:

Mother's Day Menu

Honeydew Cocktail
Oven Fried Chicken Peas
New Potatoes Parsley Butter
Beets with Orange Sauce
Hearts of Lettuce
Lime French Dressing
Hot Rolls Butter
Strawberry Ice Cream Cake
Coffee

Oven Fried Chicken

Cut 1 frying chicken in pieces suitable for serving. Dip in 1 well-beaten egg, to which has been added 2 teaspoons salt. Dip in fine bread crumbs, using about 2 cups. Place in well-greased shallow baking pan or dish. Over top of chicken lay strips of bacon. Bake uncovered in oven at 375 degrees for 1¼ to 1½ hours. Garnish with strips of crisp bacon and parsley. Cook giblets in small amount of water on surface of range if gravy is desired. This liquid may be used as basis to which milk and thickening for gravy may be added.

Strawberry Ice Cream

Beat 2 egg yolks until light and lemon colored before gradually adding ¼-cup sugar and ¼-cup white corn syrup. Add 1 cup top milk and 1 cup light cream and blend thoroughly. Beat 2 egg whites until light, add 2 tablespoons sugar and continue beating until stiff. Fold this into above mixture with 1 teaspoon vanilla and freeze with temperature control set at coldest position until practically frozen. Remove from pan and beat until a smooth mixture is obtained. Add 1 cup crushed strawberries and freeze. Serve the ice cream between layers of sheet butter cake and top with ice cream.

Mrs. Lee also enters into various club activities, being chairman, program committee, Soroptimists; a member of the American Home Economics Association; District of Columbia Dietetics Association, Home Economics Women in Business and Parent-Teacher Association. Before becoming associated with Station WJSV, Mrs. Lee taught home economics, was dietitian at the Church, Home and Infirmary Hospital, Baltimore, and home economist for a public service company and an electric manufacturing company.

New Role for Old Favorite

Among the best culinary practices with which we meet warm weather needs is the utilization of new ways to serve old vegetable favorites. In the accompanying recipe ripe olives in ready-to-use, chopped or sliced form are introduced into a carrot puff to give this every-day vegetable a boost in flavor and popularity. If you prefer larger slices or chewy wedges of ripe olives to add to the illusion of a meat-flavored dish, cut the fruit from the pits of whole ripe olives instead.

Baked Carrot and Ripe Olive Puff

Combine 2 cups mashed, cooked carrots, 1 cup thick white sauce, 2 beaten egg yolks, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¾ cup cracker crumbs and 1 cup sliced or chopped ripe olives and mix thoroughly. Fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into an oiled baking pan and bake about 25 minutes in a moderate oven, 350 degrees. Serves 4 to 6.

Mother and Daughter Act

College Men Cook for Selves And Save

University Supplies Menus That Help to Stretch Food Dollar

What men cook for themselves is news at any time. What they can do with foods and how they can do it for $3.17 per person is an interesting story which appeared in a recent issue of The Daily Californian. Men students at the University of California, it seems, have discovered the happy plan of cooking for themselves in groups of two in order to stretch the food dollar a little farther.

To aid and abet them in this worthy aim, Dr. William E. Marsh and Virginia Dobbin, dietitian, have had prepared under their direction a week of low cost menus with market lists and recipes to go with them. These menus pay particular attention to health values and flavor appeal as well as price.

One outstanding characteristic of the menus is the generous use of dried fruits throughout the week. In fact, they appear no less than 12 times in the 21 meals. The breakfast menus feature stewed prunes and cooked apricots, respectively. Suggested plans for luncheon include raw dried fruits or cooked sauce, depending on individual preference, as an accompaniment to egg, cheese or lettuce sandwiches. On another luncheon was a carrot-raisin salad. Dinner menus featured stewed apricot sauce, and fruit cup variations, such as diced apple, orange and prune, or apple, orange and apricot. Apple pudding with raisins in it was another suggested dessert.

Why a doctor and a dietitian should use dried fruits to such an extent is worthy of some thought. Surely it is further evidence, if any is needed, of the excellent food values these fruits contain. They have the happy faculty of combining well with many other foods, which makes them a great help in the planning of early spring menus, when vegetables are still comparatively scarce.

MISS FULLMER

MISS RYAN

By The Post Food Editor

PUDDING is the name given to many desserts. Properly it is a food using flour or some other cereal as basis. The Post recipe contestants have combined many flavors and foodstuffs to make delicious pudding concoctions. Following are the winning recipes:

Rhubarb-Strawberry Roll

First Prize, $3.
Miss Martha Ryan,
1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest

Recipe: Sweeten 1 cup sliced strawberries and 2 cups diced rhubarb slightly. Make a syrup of 1 cup water and ¾-cup sugar in an 8-inch square pan. Cook 5 minutes. Make a biscuit dough of 2 cups flour, ½-teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1/3-cup shortening, 2/3-cup milk and 1 beaten egg. Roll to 1/3-inch thickness; spread with fruits and roll up. Cut in 1-inch slices; place in the hot syrup. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees for 25 minutes. Serve hot with cream. Serves 8.

Cranberry Steamed Pudding

Second Prize, $2.
Miss Ruth Fullmer,
2219 Minnesota avenue southeast

Recipe: Pour 1 cup buttermilk over 2 cups soft bread crumbs and allow to stand for ten minutes. Cream ½-cup butter, add 1 cup sugar gradually and cream thoroughly. Add 2 well-beaten eggs and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Add the buttermilk and crumb mixture and 1¼ cups sifted flour with ½-teaspoon baking powder and ¼-teaspoon salt. Add 1¼ cups cranberries and pour into a well-buttered pudding mold. Steam for 2 hours. Slice and serve while hot with vanilla or butter pecan ice cream. One cup of nuts may be added if desired. Serves 6.

Lemon Chiffon Pudding

$1 Prize.
Miss Doris L. Ericson,
2717 Thirty-sixth place northwest

Recipe: Mix 5 tablespoons flour and 1 cup sugar. Cut in 3 tablespoons butter, then add ¼-cup lemon juice and the grated rind of ½-lemon. Add 3 egg yolks, beaten well. Beat mixture well and add 1 cup milk and then 3 stiffly beaten eggs whites. Pour mixture into a buttered baking dish, set in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 1 hour. When done a custard will be formed at bottom and cake-like sponge at top. Serve cold. Serves 4.

Indian Pudding

$1 Prize.
Miss Marion Yeatman
2608 Tilden street northwest

Recipe: Pour 2 cups scalded milk gradually into 5 tablespoons cornmeal. Cook in double boiler for 15 minutes. Add ½-cup light molasses, 1 tablespoon butter, ½-teaspoon ginger, ½-teaspoon salt and 2 well-beaten eggs. Bake in greased baking dish for 1 hour in pan of hot water, in oven at 300 degrees. Serves 4.

Date Pudding

$1 Prize.
Mrs. Gene Braid,
509 B street northeast

Recipe: Cream 1/3-cup butter, add ¼-cup brown sugar and ¼-cup granulated sugar gradually and cream thoroughly. Add 2 eggs and beat well. Mix and sift 1¼ teaspoons baking powder, ¼-teaspoon soda, ¼-cup salt and 2/3-cup flour and add to first mixture alternately with ½-cup buttermilk. Add ¾-teaspoon vanilla and stir in 1¼ cups chopped dates and 1/3-cup chopped walnuts that have been mixed with 2/3-cup flour. Pour into buttered mold, cover and steam for about 2 hours. Serves 6 to 8.

Lillian Russell Influence Felt in Summer Hats

By Marshall Adams

LILLIAN RUSSELL, during her colorful life, was the toast of the nation and even now, 50 years later, the tradition of her fabulous clothes continues to exert its spell. Noted for great kindliness as well as "beauty," Lillian Russell is now best recalled as the originator and wearer of remarkable hats. Not only were her hats the largest of their day, but the most lavish in trimming. Not even a Gainsborough beauty's plumes were as billowing, or the sweep of a 90's brim as commanding as La Russell's. This year, every important millinery designer has taken the Russell hat silhouette into consideration. This may be due to current boredom over last season's tiny hats or to the coming film starring Alice Faye in the role of Lillian Russell.

—or—to woman's wish to be dramatic and "pretty."

Lilly Dache, John Frederics and every other top hatter has done a version of Lillian Russell's big, braggadocio hats. Some of these faithfully copy Lillian's side-swept brim (pictured right), often a foot wide and curving high on one side. The plumes, flower fripperies and ruffles of the gay nineties are absent, but veiling appears on most of the new summery felt or straw "Russells." One of the smartest variations of this huge hatted theme is Harryson's toyo (above). Its veiled brim has dramatic sweep—therefore is especially good for simple frocks.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Her Son-in-Law Is a Sleepy Head; Isn't It Man's Responsibility to Rise First of Mornings?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like some advice on how to obtain more cooperation in our household. I would like to know whether a man should have to be called to get up in the morning. My daughter and her husband (in their middle twenties), my son (in his early twenties) and I live together. My daughter has been married three years. She and her husband are employed, and since they married she has supported herself in addition to helping support him, in order to allow him to pay off some bachelor debts.

As far back as I can remember in my own family life, the man was the head of the house. By that, I mean he was first up in the morning; he was the one his womenfolk depended upon to go ahead, to manage, to assume the duties which we regarded as "a man's responsibility." Maybe I am old-fashioned and entirely wrong in my belief, but it seems to me these virtues always have and always will characterize the better type of man—the type of man I want my daughter's husband to be.

He has good qualities and I feel he would be capable of discharging a real man's responsibilities, if only he would assume them. But he was a much "made over" child and grandchild. In fact, his sister and brother recognized this favoritism. And my daughter, being a very emotional person, and brought up in a home without a father (as we separated when she was quite young), felt that loss and, therefore, tends to be overly fond of her husband. Her attitude toward him is more of a hindrance than a help, and I feel that both of them would be grateful for any help you could give us in creating a happier situation.

MOTHER.

Remember Old Saying, "Let Well Enough Alone"

DEAR MOTHER: That older generation to which you refer had a way of saying (don't you remember?): "Let well enough alone." Such is the advice I would give you concerning your daughter's husband. If she is satisfied with her choice and receives from him adequate compensation for her childhood's emotional starvation, you are blundering badly in spraying the acid of criticism in their direction.

In a pioneer society, no doubt it was the mark of the civilized man to be up and about before his womenfolk; but primarily because there were fires to be kindled, outdoor errands to be run and provisions to be assembled from storehouse, cellar, etc., before the scene was set for the preparation of breakfast. Life at its best was difficult enough for women in those days, and the manly husband was alert to employ his superior strength in conserving his lady's physical resources, so greatly taxed by perennial child bearing and the housewife's interminable duties of weaving, spinning, cooking, canning, preserving, etc.

The push-button conveniences of modern city living, however, and the disposition of modern married couples to regulate the size of their families, automatically create a vastly different state of affairs in which—it would seem to me—there is no fixed intrinsic value in a man's acting as the morning alarm clock for his household. Many wives, indeed, would find such matutinal prowling a disturbance rather than an accommodation; and most of them are willing (and can well afford) affectionately to indulge the inveterate sleepy-head husband who has to be routed out of bed for breakfast. So I think you are making a mountain out of a molehill in this instance.

Rather than undertake a character-molding job on your son-in-law, you had better be on guard against your own tendency to meddle and pettishly complain.

M. H.

How Live Above Mother's Criticism?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 27 years old and live with a woman friend who is 34. We have lived together for several years and get along fine. But recently my mother came for a week's visit and found all manner of fault with her. Also, she told me I should be living with a younger person.

Mother always has objected to my friends, and this girl really is a pal to me and is well liked by everyone. How can I overcome this influence mother has on me, so that I won't let what she thinks bother me? I realize I am old enough to live my own life, since I am earning my own living.

Do you think I am doing the wrong thing in living with a girl who is seven years older than myself? I surely will appreciate your opinions and advice.

ROSE AGNES.

Adult Must Develop Mind of His Own

DEAR ROSE AGNES: It is absurd to think your friend's age disqualifies her to be a suitable close companion. Actually, seven years' difference between a girl of 27 and a woman of 34 is almost indistinguishable nowadays. To the casual beholder, these are contemporaries in physical appearance, mental attitudes and social interests. Yet, even if your housemate were an exceptional "settled" 34, her mature influence might be reckoned as potentially beneficial rather than detrimental. I see no warrant for your mother's statement that you "should be living with a younger person." I have no fault to find—on the basis of age—with your arrangement.

If you choose not to let "what your mother thinks bother you," then you simply must develop what is known as "a mind of your own." Just don't assimilate her critical remarks. Don't order your life by her suggestions or directors. Exercise your own judgment. "Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried, grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel—," regardless of her dour dubiety.

More Men Cooks Needed, Says Chef

It's a profession, says Chef William Sprinzing, of the select Germantown Cricket Club, that has openings for skilled men, is definitely not a woman's job (outside the home) and has a future.

Sprinzing, whose guests in his 12 years at the cricket club have included visitors to Davis Cup tennis matches, explains: "People must eat and it's a good profession for young men. In cooking like many other branches of American life, there is a shortage of skilled men."

The reason, he holds, is that 90 per cent of America's better chefs have come from Europe, but immigration laws have curtailed that supply.

Stretching Is Aid to Nerves

If you're all worn out or under nervous strain a lot—and most women stay keyed up most of the time—stretching is a good idea.

It's good to remember that stretching is always one of the simplest remedies. It can be done many times during the day. Stand on your toes and raise your hands high over your head—reaching as high as you can without overstraining. At home, you can stand in the doorway and try to reach the frame overhead. Try to better your own mark each time you repeat. Breathe deeply each time you raise your arms, stretch up and come down to relax.

You can stretch in the bathtub and in bed. Starting at the toes, bend them over tightly and relax them several times. Arch the feet and relax them. Work the feet in circular movement at the ankles, then let them dangle. Stretch the legs stiffly from the hips, then release your muscles. So with the rest of the body, taking the fingers separately, the hands, arms and neck, ending with the facial muscles which can be tightened and stretched by dropping the jaw and stretching the mouth, then relaxing.

Today's Health Talk

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Undulant Fever

It was about 50 years ago that Bruce, an English army doctor, reported a new disease from the Island of Malta. It was a long-continued, mild fever, caused by a germ which infected goats. The germ got into the goat's milk, and as the goat milk is a regular dairy product in Malta, the disease was frequently transplanted in the human population.

For a long time it was complacently supposed that Malta fever did not appear outside the Island of Malta. That complacency was due for a rude awakening. The first cases of Malta fever or, as it is called here, undulant fever, seen in the United States were of the chronic type, all in soldiers or sailors who were hospitalized at Hot Springs, Ark., with the diagnosis of chronic rheumatism.

Many Cases Reported

Since 1920 many cases of the fever have been reported in the United States. It is, in fact, our commonest continued fever with the exception of tuberculosis. The sources of infection are cows and pigs as well as goats. American herds are widely infected with carrier animals.

The acute form is well known as a low fever of long duration, sometimes prostrating the patient for three months or more. But the germ is hard to down; even when apparently recovered a person may be a carrier or the victim of chronic brucellosis (still another name for it.)

The commonest form is like the original cases—a chronic rheumatism. But nearly any part of the body may be the seat of the symptoms. The nose, throat and ear infections, tonsillitis, caught and chest infection, bronchitis, pleurisy, heart trouble, dyspepsia, bladder and female trouble, backache, headache, depression, apprehension, skin eruptions have all been described.

If Tall, Avoid Hanging Driblets In Dress, Advises Ilka Chase

By Ida Jean Kain

MOST of the time the fashion experts are so busily engaged in steering the women who are less than 5 feet 4 into clothes that will make them look taller that never a thought is given to the tall woman. But this week she gets a break!

In a backstage chat with Ilka Chase, who supplies the running comment for those fascinating technicolor fashion films, does a radio program and appears on the Broadway stage, we pumped for ideas on dressing to make height an asset. Miss Chase herself is a whiff over 5 feet 8, and conceded to be one of the best dressed women in mid-town Manhattan, where a woman is expected to be well dressed.

Though she herself wears those new long-jacketed suits with all the requisite dash, she is not committed to the strictly tailored style. What she insists is: "That the tall girl should stay away from those dripping, drooling things with little driblets hanging down."

Pointers On Dress

And she also believes firmly that the dress should make up its mind what it is going to be and should fit to define the figure.

The hair-do, Miss Chase points out, can add two or three inches to the height, and the woman who is tall already should favor the rather flat style of hairdress. If she has a long neck, the hair should be worn long and soft. The most flattering hats are those which fit the head snugly and do not elongate the figure.

As for skirt length, Miss Chase declares "that depends on how good the legs are. But a skirt should never be worn so short that it shows the backs of the knees—that part of the figure is anything but attractive."

And there you have the rules of a fashion commentator for dressing to make height an asset.

Holds Down Three Jobs

But some of you will be more interested in Miss Chase's ability to hold down three jobs at the same time and keep looking as fresh as a first year debutante. The secret seems to be "rest when you can get it." Last summer when she was not working the actress spent the entire time in the countray, and about the most strenuous thing she did was gardening. She thinks plenty of sleep is the world's best beauty treatment.

Her favorite exercise is horseback riding, even though she professes to be afraid of horses. It's exhilarating, good for the figure, and fun. Next to riding she likes dancing, and says she never feels better than when she goes dancing three nights a week. We've been saying right along that dancing is good exercise!

But when working hard, there's not much choice as to exercise, and she depends on a two-mile daily walk and mild calisthenics to keep her figure perfect. She particularly likes "cat stretching:" Stand with arms stretched overhead, ribcage pulled up and away from the hips, then rotate the trunk in wide circles while continuing the upward stretch.

The Contented Cow

I.

My doctor is the best in town,
No one can equal his renown,
As everyone admits;
My dentist serves the social cream
Why every woman of high esteem,
Within his office sits!

II.

My lawyer's from the biggest firm.
He's saved from many a prison term
Rich men of high repute;
My pastor can outpreach the best,
I'll back him up in any test,
His rivals to confute.

III.

My barber, he, can cut the hair
To give a woman a smarter air
Than can any of his kind;
My manicurist is supreme,
In giving nails a superior gleam,
She's my special, secret find.

IV.

My masseur knows the latest tricks,
He holds forth in the bailiwicks
Of all the town's elite;
My druggist fixes the best pills,
Even though he sends the stiffest bills,
With him no one can compete.

V.

My plumber has the biggest name,
In all his line, in fact, his fame
Is spreading far and wide;
My laundry has the best clientele,
In washing clothes it does excel,
I point to it with pride.

VI.

My maid, however, is just fair
You can't find a decent one anywhere
(That's what my friends all say);
My husband, too, he has his faults,
His comfort he too much exalts,

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

THE TOUGHEST trick a local meanie can perform these days is ducking a benefit. The platinum dance halls of the town are booked solid with elegant shoe-scuffles to aid our various suffering brethren and sistren overseas. All worthy causes, undoubtedly, and society has gone to bat for them with such nerve that there must be thousands of vacant chairs at home-cooked dinners these evenings.

"Babs" Hutton

The whole family takes part. Mother arranges programs and bosses committees. Daughter solicits ads for the program and peddles tickets. Father—well, the poor fellow just digs deep for admission prices, struggles into a boiled shirt and is led protestingly to the benefit. This very night one of the biggest, the Allied Relief Ball, takes place at the Astor, and a whopper it will be. Heaven help our big businessmen these days! They look up from their desks and see, not their secretaries, but a couple of lovely young women like Mrs. John Barry Ryan and Princess Kyril Scherbatow ready to high-pressure them for an advertisement. This glamorous team is reported to have blasted out 75 pages of ads for the souvenir program of tonight's shindig.

I knew there would be a good fellow for "Bundles for Britain." Yep, a few nights ago there was a benfit at the Coq Rouge for "Kits for Canada" and Garboesque Anne Francine sang songs in both French and English to honor attending nabobs.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The wise birds perched here report that Barbar Hutton Etcetera will marry her handsome Bob Sweeney in Honolulu come summer, and then honeymoon in that romantic stage-setting. The same owls say that Baba won't fraternize extensively with Doris Duke Cromwell, who will be in her gorgeous island hideaway, Shangri La. Not that the dollar princesses squabble—just that they have few interests in common, and both crave their complete privacy. In fact, Mrs. Cromwell is practically a hermitess, if permitted to be. . .

Psittacosis, the dread "parrot fever" heard so much of a few years back, claimed its first victim in four years when Mrs. Stella Blair, owner of a pet shop, died the other day. She was bitten on the finger by a lovebird.

Informal Luncheons Give Society Pause

Senora de Recinos Is Hostess in Honor Of Senora Horacio de Alfaro, of Panama; Mrs. Burke Entertains Many of Official Set

By Hope Ridings Miller

LADIES' LUNCHEONS took over the stage yesterday as a number of pleasantly informal parties accented the social whirl.

Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Gautemala, was hostess in honor of Senora Horacio de Alfaro, wife of the former Minister of Panama. Mrs. Edward Burke, wife of Senator Burke of Nebraska, entertained for her house guests, Mrs. Mabel Woodworth Jensen, widely known violinist, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, who is spending several days here and will be the featured artist at the Congressional Club tea this afternoon.

Hope Ridings Miller

Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Alva Adams, Mrs. D. Worth Clark and Mrs. Wesley A. Sturges were others on the list of luncheon hostesses yesterday.

The diplomatic contingent was well represented at Senora de Recinos' tea. Her guest of honor is the wife of a former envoy from Panama here. The brother of Ricardo Alfaro, of Washington, he is here for the Eighth American Scientific Congress which opens here today.

Guests at the luncheon included Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador; Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Ambassador of Ecuador; Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister; Senora de DeBayle, wife of the Minister of Nicaragua; Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro; Senora de Sosa, Mrs. James O'Donnell Moran, Mrs. Robert E. Moran, Mrs. John J. Shugrue, Mrs. Edward H. Conger and Mrs. Maria Luisa Hermoso.

THE CONGRESSIONAL CLUB was the scene of Mrs. Burke's luncheon, which drew a sizeable number from the official set, and several out-of-towners. Ranking guest was Mrs. George W. Norris, wife of Senator Norris of Nebraska. Others in the company included a number of wives of Representatives—Mrs. C. W. Darden, jr., Mrs. A. Willis Robertson, Mrs. Schuyler Otis Bland, Mrs. Bruce Barton, Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin, Mrs. Stephen Bolles, Mrs. Ralph Church.

Still others there were Mrs. Samuel W. King, Mrs. J. Sexton James, Miss Jessie Ash Arndt, Mrs. Edward C. Moran, jr., Mrs. Clark Galloway, Mrs. Ernest Burt, and three residents of Omaha, Nebr.; Mrs. Dwight E. Porter, Mrs. Herbert Daniels and Mrs. J. M. Souby.

OUT TO Mrs. K's Toll House Tavern went the 15 guests to attend Mrs. Hill's luncheon. In the company were Mrs. Fritz Lanham, Mrs. William D. Byron, Mrs. Edwin Schaefer, Mrs. Sam Hobbs, Mrs. Dow Harter, Mrs. John Sparkman, Mrs. George Grant and Mrs. Andrew J. May, all wives of Representatives. Still others there, were the Misses Margaret and Jennie Moore, Mrs. Roger Rutledge, Mrs. Paul F. Dickens, Miss Helen Newton, Mrs. Harry Huse, Mrs. Allen Crenshaw and Mrs. I. T. Quinn.

MISS HELEN GAHAGAN, widely known actress of stage and screen, who in private life is Mrs. Melvyn Douglas, centered the spotlight at the luncheon given by Mrs. D. Worth Clark, wife of the Senator of Idaho.

The party took place at the Clark residence on Glover Driveway, and guests included Mrs. John J. Dempsey, Mrs. William B. Barry, Mrs. Phil Ferguson, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, Mrs. Raymond Clapper and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin. Miss Gahagan, who arrived in Washington several years ago, will remain for several days and will attend the relief dinner at which Mrs. Roosevelt will be present next Tuesday.

MRS. WESLEY A. STURGES' attractively furnished apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel is a monument to her skill as an interior decorator. Guests who gathered there yesterday for the luncheon in honor of Mrs. Donald Halstead spent a good part of their time admiring the choice arrangement of pictures, sofas, and softly cushioned chairs in the sunny drawing room. The dining room table was center with a bouquet of white blossoms—jonquils, stock, roses and carnations, and in a tall vase before the broad windows was a huge bouquet of white snapdragons.

Covers were laid for eight, and the party went merrily along until well past midafternoon. Luncheon table talk turned on a variety of subjects, ranging all the way from war in Europe to Presidential candidates on this side. Guests included, in addition to Mrs. Halstead, Mrs. Alexander H. Syron, Mrs. Phelps Adams, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Frank Bohn and Mrs. John Slear.

MEANWHILE, in another apartment at the Wardman Park, Mrs. Alva Adams was entertaining at the second of two luncheons she has given this week. Among her guests were several Senators' wives, including Mrs. Guy M. Gillette Mrs. James F. Byrnes and Mrs. Elbert D. Thomas.

Engagement Announced

Ira Hill Studio.

Ensign to Wed Miss B. L. White

Mr. and Mrs. Walker Gibson White, of Douglaston, Long Island, announce the engagement of their daughter, Barbara Lewis, to Ensign John L. Erickson, U. S. N., son of David L. Erickson, of Lincoln, Nebr., and the late Mrs. Erickson.

Miss White is the granddaughter of Mrs. Lewis D. Pace and the late Mr. Pace, of Atlanta, Ga., and Washington. Her material great-grandfather was Samuel Field Phillips, Solicitor General of the United States. She is also descended from the Warner Hall Lewis family, of Virginia.

On her father's side, Miss White is the granddaughter of Mrs. Frank Hollis White, of Washington, and the late Mr. White, and a great- granddaughter of Brig. Gen. Horatio Gates Gibson, U. S. A. Also on this side she is a direct descendant of Capt. John Underhill and Antoine Lispenard, prominent figures in the early history of New York.

Ensign Erickson was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1938. He is now stationed on the U. S. S. Savannah and will be transferred July 1 to the United States Naval Air Corps at Pensacola, Fla.

Magruder Tea Fetes Mileses

Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles, who have been widely entertained since the former returned from duty at the United States Embassey in London, were guests of honor at another party yesterday, when Col. and Mrs. John Magruder were hosts at tea.

As Gen. and Mrs. Miles are prominently identified with residential society as well as Army circles, both sets were represented yesterday. Pouring tea was Mrs. Miles' sister, Mrs. Samuel Reber, and Mrs. Rufus Bratton presided over coffee. The hostess wore a flowered silk frock.

Among the hundred invited to the party were the Chief of Staff of the Army and Mrs. George Marshall, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. de Kauffmann, the Dutch Minister and Mme. Loudon, Gen. and Mrs. Lorenzo D. Gasser, Gen. and Mrs. Maxwell Murray, the former Ambassador to Germany and Mrs. Hugh Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Col. William Shipp, Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin, Clarence Hewes and Maj. and Mrs. Thomas Betts.

Miss Bohen Will Bow Here And in Iowa

Mrs. E. T. Meredith Plans Presentations For Granddaughter

This season's bumper crop of debutantes continues to grow—and latest name to be added to the lengthy list is that of Miss Barbara Bohen, whose grandmother, Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, will present her here next winter.

Miss Bohen is the daughter of Mrs. Fred Bohen, of Des Moines, Iowa. Some time ago plans were completed for her debut in Des Moines in June, but her grandmother decided only yesterday to make it a double debut in the two cities.

Miss Bohen is a student at the Madeira School, where she rooms with Miss Kitty Hill, debutante daughter of Mrs. Hiram Bingham, of Washington. Miss Bohen will share honors at the party which Mrs. Bingham will give for her daughter early next winter, probably during the Thanksgiving holidays.

Mrs. Bohen, Mrs. Meredith's daughter, is a frequent visitor to Washington. Mrs. Meredith will go out to Des Moines for her granddaughter's coming out party in June and from there will travel to Honolulu for a vacation of several weeks.

Miss Bohen will attend Smith College next year and expects to commute during the holidays for debutante festivities in Washington.

Virginia Daly, To Be Married

Senator White to Be Best Man at Affair In New York City

Senator Wallace H. White, jr., of Maine, will be best man at the wedding of Miss Virginia Daly, daughter of Thomas Paul Daly, of Pasadena, Calif., to Richard Dwight Lunn, who is the son of Mrs. White. Among the ushers will be Armar Archbold, of Washington.

The couple have selected Friday, May 24, as the date of the ceremony, which will take place in the chantry of St. Thomas' Church in New York, at 4 o'clock. The Rev. R. H. Brooks will officiate. A reception will follow at Pierre's.

Miss Therese Cronin, of Toronto, will be maid of honor. Bridesmaids include Miss Nina Dorbritz, of Pittsburgh; Miss Marjorie Nair, of Pasadena,; Mrs. William Luke 2d, of Covington, Va., and Mrs. John R. Fales, of Stamford, Conn.

In addition to Mr. Archbold, the ushers are Herbert F. White, of Topsham, Me.; John R. Fales, Ernest O. Dorbritz, of Pittsburgh; J. Morris Baldwin, jr., of Montgomery, Ala., and James W. Duff.

About the Town

with DUDLEY HARMON

So much fanfare is being raised about the South Americans coming here next week for the Scientific Congress—Spanish-speaking hostesses have been ferreted out to entertain them and special guides to steer the wives to beauty shops, etc.—that we're apt to forget that some pretty distinguished North Americans will be here too.

Example one is Dr. James L. Chapin, who is curator of birds at the American Museum of Natural History in New York. But don't think that a curator's life is spent cataloguing stuffed objects in glass cases. Dr. Chapin's adventures once led him to the heart of the Belgian Congo, where, one day in the jungle, he discovered a peacock feather which didn't match up with any in existence. This led to lengthy investigations, at the end of which Dr. Chapin had discovered and photographed a brand-new bird!

ANOTHER CONFERENCE DELEGATE, Dr. Robert Cushman Murphy, is president of the Audubon Society and an authority on birds of the Arctic region.

Also a curator at the American Museum is Dr. Roy W. Miner, who will bring his attractive wife to the Congress. Dr. Miner has been in charge of assembling three remarkable exhibit groups at the Museum, one of which took almost 15 years to complete. He assembled a coral group—40 tons of it—and setting up this massive conglomeration is regarded by experts as something of an engineering feat. Later Dr. Miner toured the South Seas to get material for a pearl diver's exhibit and is now working on a sponge group. He is also the inventor of the underseas camera.

DR. THOMAS BARBOUR, one of the three brothers of Senator Warren Barbour, of New Jersey, is also coming to the congress. Dr. Barbour is director of the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Cambridge, Mass., and is curator of the Peabody Museum there. He also lectures at Harvard.

BLONDE, CHIC Senora de Cardenas, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, is a talented dancer. Often, as the last few guests linger on after a party at the embassy, she dons the costume of her native Rumania and entertains them. She can also do the Jota and other complicated dances of Spain.

The Ambassador's hobby is taking movies, and the other night after a dinner he showed some of his wife dancing in the embassy patio with several of the Spanish artists who were here for the recent benefit at the embassy. The beautiful patio, incidentally, is one place where it's easy to forget all the troubles of the world. The tinkling of the fountain, the red geraniums and big vases of dogwood made wars and other catastrophes seem very far away at the recent dinner.

AMONG THE GUESTS who relaxed there were the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, the latter spring like in a dress of soft green with flowers at the neckline. The hostess wore white pique with narrow shoulder straps. Very effective was Mrs. Walter Edge's frock of bright green topped off with a clip of diamond and emeralds. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, hard workers for the current National Symphony fund raising campaign, were also among the guests.

NOT ONLY are most diplomatic dinners black tie this season, but the menus seem to be getting simpler. The meal at the Spanish Embassy, while perfectly prepared, was neither long nor elaborate.

SENHORA DE MARTINS, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, has cards out for a party next Tuesday afternoon at the embassy.

Rita Pearl Irwin, Major's Daughter, Engaged to Wed

Mrs. Asa Irwin, of Mozarrt place, announces the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Miss Rita Pearl Irwin, to Frank A. Calabria, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Calabria, of Sandusky, Ohio. Miss Irwin is the daughter of the late Maj. Asa Irwin, Quartermasters Corps, U. S. A.

The wedding will take place June 1 at 8 a. m. in Sacred Heart Church. The couple will honeymoon at Lake Champlain.

Mrs. Giegengack Is Bridge Hostess

Mrs. Augustus E. Giegengack, wife of the Public Printer, gave a bridge luncheon yesterday in her apartment at the Wardman Park in honor of Miss Agnes V. Slattery, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who is visiting her.

Among the guests were Mrs. Vincent C. Burke, Mrs. Benjamin B. Cain, Mrs. James E. Duke, Mrs. James G. Haskell, Mrs. Martin E. Joynt, Mrs. John Loughran, Mrs. J. A. Mendelsohn, Mrs. Joseph B. Stanley, Mrs. Eugene J. Tighe and Mrs. Gerald A. Walsh.

Daughter Is Born To the Norman Moores

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Moore announce the birth of a daughter yesterday at Beth Israel Hospital in New York.

Mrs. Moore is the former Miss Dorothy Ford and both she and her husband are former residents of Washington.

40% Raised In Symphony Fund Drive

120 Workers Report At Luncheon on First Three Days of Drive

More than 120 workers in the National Symphony Orchestra's tenth annual sustaining fund campaign attended the first report luncheon at the Carlton Hotel at 12:30 p. m. yesterday. A. E. F. Horn, general chairman of the campaign, reported that 40.39 per cent of the $107,600 goal had been raised during the first three days of the drive.

Honored guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Alexander F. Jones, Dr. Hans Kindler, John T. O'Rourke, Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, and five members of the orchestra, Millard Taylor, concertmaster, Francis Garzia, violinist, Sylvia Meyer, harpist, and Samuel Feldman and George Wargo of the viola section.

In charge of arrangements for the luncheon was a committee composed of Mrs. Milton W. King, chairman, Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, Mark Lansburgh and Mr. Horn.

Stage Stars Feted By Theater Group

Washington residents interested in the Civic Theater sat down to lunch yesterday with two outstanding stage stars—the beautiful dancer, Zorina, and Comedian Victor Moore. The occasion was the launching of next season's drive for the Civic Theater.

Zorina was the focus of all eyes as she sat next to Lee D. Butler, theater president, who presided at the luncheon. She wore a navy blue suit with white pin stripes, a dark yellow silk blouse with a turndown collar, and a little cluster of lilies of the valley pinned to her lapel.

Among the guests were Day Tuttle, Civic Theater director; Minor Hudson, Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, in a brown sports suit; L. M. C. Smith, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Metcalfe Walling, Maj. Mason Wright, who has taken part in several Civic Theater productions this year; Miss Elinor Lord, Miss Hazel Edgar and Mrs. Mary MacCracken Jones.

St. Gertrude's Guild To Make Show Plans

St. Gertrude's Guild will meet this morning at 10:30 in the recreation room at 1901 Wyoming avenue to complete arrangements for the variety show to be given at the Mayflower on Friday evening, May 24.

Proceeds from this show will be used to pay the interest on the debt on St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mme. Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, has issued invitations to a tea on Saturday, June 8, from 4:30 to 7, in honor of her debutante daughter, Miss Courtney Louise Stillwell. The party will be held at the Embassy.

The Bulgarian envoy and Mme. Naoumoff gave a dinner last night in honor of the Greek Minister and Mme Diamantopolous. M. Diamantopolous was formerly stationed in Bulgaria.

The Irish Minister and Mrs. Robert Brennan entertained informally at dinner last evening.

The Charge d'Affaires of Luxemburg and Mme. Le Gallais will spend this week-end in New York. Tomorrow they will attend a dinner to be held by the Luxemburg colony there to celebrate the seventy-third anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of London, which confirmed the independence of the Grand Duchy and stipulated its permanent neutrality under a collective guarantee of the powers.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy will entertain at a small dinner May 16 in honor of Miss Ellen Hewes Floweree.

Homer S. Cummings, former Attorney General, is at the Waldorf Astoria Towers in New York.

Mrs. Harold E. Saunders and Mrs. J. Frank Rice gave a shower last night in honor of Miss Margaret Wetmore, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Wetmore, whose engagement to John Harlan was recently announced.

Miss Gerry Dick will entertain at a small party in honor of Miss Ruby Black, president of the Women's National Press Club, on Sunday from 4 to 6 at 208 Raymond street, Chevy Chase, Md.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

MRS. JOUETT SHOUSE will entertain on June 9 with an out-of-door tea dance at Wolftrap Farm, the Shouse country place in Virginia. The dance will be given in honor of the five charming debutantes of that week, Louise Stillwell, daughter of Madame Espil, Cynthia Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Elysabeth Barbour, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Warren Barbour, Sita Finkenstaedt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, and Mildred Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McKee Dunn.

Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim will give a dinner on their yacht on May 16. The yacht is anchored opposite Hains Point and is conspicuous for beautiful whiteness and for the large American flag painted on her side. The flag is, of course, there for the purpose of identification when the yacht cruises beyond territorial waters. Mrs. Guggenheim says that, if any of her dinner guests gets lost trying to find the dock, he can proceed to Hains Point and "yoo hoo," and she will send the launch to fetch the lost one.

Charles Lucet, Third Secretary of the French Embassy, asked several men for luncheon the other day to meet Pierre de Lanux, the French author, who has just completed a lecture tour in this country. M. de Lanux brought news of Andre de Laboulaye who was Ambassador of France in Washington for a number of years. M. de Laboulaye has a great many warm friends in the Capital for, besides being stationed here as Ambassador, he did a tour of duty as secretary under Ambassador Jules Jusserand.

AT PRESENT M. de Laboulaye is in Paris at the Ministry of Information where he is in charge of American Affairs. His duties are to see that the American correspondents get facilities from the other government departments, to give out news to them, and help them get their papers for traveling about France and seeing the Front. M. de Lanux modestly stated that he had held this job himself until it was found necessary to give it to a man of the rank and diplomatic prestige of M. de Laboulaye, rank being very important in the cutting of departmental red tape.

Jose de Lasa, attache of the Cuban Embassy, has returned from a visit to Havana where he attended the wedding of his sister, Maria Luisa de Lasa, to Carlos Blanco y Sanchez. The groom was First Secretary at the Cuban Embassy in Washington a few years ago and is now on leave from his post at the Cuban Legation in London. He is a cousin of the Secretary of State of Cuba, Dr. Miguel Angel Campa. In her early teens the bride attended Georgetown Visitation Convent for a year, and now she has chosen to take her honeymoon trip in the United States.

The wedding took place in the famously beautiful, old church of Our Lady of Mercy in Havana. Among the guests were Dr. Martinez Fraga, Cuban Ambassador to the United States, and his First Secretary, Dr. Roberto de Mendoza, both of them at home on leave.

THE BRIDAL PARTY walked to the altar through a lane banked with Easter lilies, calla lilies and branches of orange blossoms and spaced, at intervals with flowering rose trees. The roses were Cuba's famous, pink Catalina Lasa roses, named for the bride's aunt. In contrast with the masses of blossoms in the church the altar itself was decorated with green foliage, and lit with hundreds of flickering candles in the gorgeous antique gold and silver candelabra which are brought out only for special occasions.

According to the custom in Cuba, the wedding was at nine-thirty in the evening. In the time of the bride's grandmother, weddings were planned for an hour even more suitable to the tropical climate. In those days the bride's family gave a ball, beginning at midnight. After dancing all night, the wedding party and guests went at dawn to the family chapel in the house, and there with the first mass, the wedding ceremony was performed.

Benefit Concert Draws Procopes

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope will leave today for Boston to attend a concert on Sunday for the benefit of the Finnish Relief Fund. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play, conducted by the famous Finnish musician, Tanno Hannikainen, who recently came to this country for a series of concerts.

On Monday the Minister will address a meeting of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. He and his wife will be guests during their stay of Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird at her home in East Walpole, Mass.

Senora de Valdes Gives Luncheon For Mrs. Cajigas

Better relationships between the United States and Puerto Rico were promoted yesterday at a luncheon given by Senora Mariana L. C. de Valdés, who entertained in honor of Mrs. Tomas Cajigas. The latter planned the Puerto Rican reception given here during the recent convention of the National League of American Pen Women.

The luncheon took place at Hotel 2400 and was followed by an informal tea attended by a number of additional guests interested in forming an association to promote understanding between this country and Puerto Rico.

The luncheon company included, in addition to Mrs. Cajigas, Senora de Munilla, Mrs. Mario Julia, Mrs. Everett Wilson, jr., Mrs. William Devine, Mrs. Paul Stavinsky, Mrs. Frank Buckley, Mrs. Lucille Buchan, Mme. Nalda Sari, Mrs. Sophocles Pappas, Mrs. Maria Massari, Mrs. Cordova Davila, Mrs. H. Russell Bishop, Mrs. Raphael Martinez Alvarez, and Mrs. Newton Brewer.

Trinity Alumnae To Give Dance

The Alumnae Association of Trinity College will entertain at a dance tonight at the Congressional Country Club.

Among the hostesses at cocktail parties before the affair will be Mrs. Martin O'Donoghue, president of the Washington Chapter, who will entertain for the out-of-town guests; Mrs. Matthias Mahorner and Mrs. S. Albert Mickler, who is chairman of patrons for the dance.

Mrs. VanDeventer Returns From Parley

Mrs. Horace Van Deventer, director from Tennessee on the National Board of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, has returned to Washington from the spring meeting of the directors at Stratford Hall, Va. She is at the Brighton.

Mrs. Van Deventer will leave today for the Grand Council at Mount Vernon. She is regent from Tennessee in the Mount Vernon Ladies Association. Mr. and Mrs. Van Deventer live in Knoxville, Tenn., but have spent the winter at the Brighton.

Senora de Alvarez-Calderon Here As Peru Envoy to Science Parley

Underwood & Underwood

Senora Anita de Alvarez-Calderon (left), one of the Peruvian government's delegates to the American Scientific Congress, with Mrs Thomas Burke (center), chairman of hostesses and Latin-American chairman for the people's mandate committee, and Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the People's Mandate, who were her guests at Lima, when the mandate committee's delegation visited there

Is Only Woman Named As a Delegate; Husband To Attend Forum, Too

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor.

Distinguished as the only woman appointed by her government as its representative to the Eighth American Scientific Congress, Senora Anita Fernandini de Alvarez-Calderon has arrived in Washington from Lima, Peru, accompanied by her husband, Senator Alberto N. Alvarez-Calderon.

Senora de Alvarez-Calderon is also here as official representative from the National Council of Women, an organization comprised of more than 100 groups, of which she is vice president. Her husband, a lecturer on physics and engineering at Catholic University in Lima, as well as a member of the Senate, is here as a representative of the university.

Young and vivacious, Senora de Alvarez-Calderon, is considered one of the foremost women of Peru. She is not only vice president of the Council of Women, but a leader in cultural movements and founder and permanent acting president of the Saint Rose of Lima Pro-Basilica Ladies National Committee. This was formed in 1934 for the erection of the Basilica of Saint Rose of Lima, patroness of Peru.

She is interested in promoting friendly relations between the countries of the Americas and is the Peruvian delegate of the People's Mandate Committee. She and Senator Alvarez-Calderon were met on their arrival in the Capital by Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the Mandate Committe, and also were greeted by Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mandate chairman for Latin America, who is the wife of the chief of the Division of International Communications of the State Department, and chairman of the hostesses for the Scientific Congress.

"It is with deep emotion I visit the great North American Nation and bring from my country of legendary traditions warm greetings of sympathy and cordiality," said Senora de Alvarez-Calderon. "I want to express my fervent wishes that the understanding and friendship between Peru and the United States may grow better."

On Pn Americn Dy, April 14, she arranged a radio broadcast as chairman of the committee for peace and arbitration of the nation-council, and delegate of the Mandate Committee. It included a poem she had written on the friendship of the Americas, and also a hymn set to music by Peruvian composers and sung by a large chorus.

Mount Vernon Ladies Receive Watch of Washington's Doctor

Great-Great-Great-Grandson Of Dr. Craik Gives Memento Which Still Keeps Perfect Time

The gold watch used by Dr. James Craik when attending Gen. Washington during his last illness was presented yesterday to the Mount Vernon Ladies Association of the Union at the opening session of its seventy-fourth grand council meeting at the Mansion at Mount Vernon.

The presentation was made by Mrs. Mason Barret, vice regent of Kentucky, for James Shrewsbury Craik, great-great-great-grandson of Dr. Craik, a resident of Louisville, who has made a gift to the Mount Vernon Ladies Association. In an old print accompanying the watch, Dr. Craik is shown holding the watch while he counts the pulse of Washington.

The watch is made by the famous English watchmaker, William Dixon, of London, about 1726, and still keeps perfect time.

Mrs. Horace Mann Towner, of Iowa, the regent, presided at the opening session following which wreaths were placed on the sarcophagi of Gen. and Mrs. Washington by the acting dean of the association, Mrs. Thomas P. Denham, vice regent for Florida, and chairman of the tomb committee, Mrs. DeCourcey Thom, vice regent for Maryland.

Before receiving reports of the regent of the association and the superintendent, Cecil C. Wall, the farewell address of the founder, Miss Anne Pamela Cunningham, was read according to the annual custom. Mrs. Jefferson Randolph Anderson, vice regent for Georgia, read the address.

About 30 members are in residence in the association quarters. They devoted themselves to work during their ten days. The council meets from 9 to 11 each morning and from 2 to 3 in the afternoon, with committee work in the interim and sessions in the evenings if necessary.

Miss Elsa Peterson, Mrs. William Corbin To Be Honored by Vacation Lodge Committee

MISS ELSA PETERSON, new president of the Y. W. C. A., and Mrs. William Lee Corbin, the past president, will be honored at a tea May 23 at Vacation Lodge, by the Vacation Lodge committee. Plans for the affair were discussed Wednesday at a luncheon given for the committee members by Mrs. John H. Walton at her home in Arlington.

Mrs. James Craig Peacock, of Chevy Chase, is chairman of the committee which makes all of the season's plans for the lodge. This summer residence for business girls has been maintained at Cherrydale, Va., by the Washington Y. W. C. A. for 30 years.

Other members of the committee are Mrs. Harold Brooks, Mrs. Harlee Branch, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, Mrs. Luther Johnson, Mrs. J. Gilmer Korner, Mrs. Frank Nesbit, Mrs. Edmund Pendleton, Mrs. C. W. Ramseyer, Mrs. Walton and Mrs. Parker West.

CONDUCTS CONVENTION—Mrs. Morris Cafritz, president of District 8 of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, yesterday presided at the spring board meeting at the Virginia Hotel in Lynchburg, Va. From there she goes today to North Carolina, to address sisterhoods.

Others from here who attended the Lynchburg meeting, were Mrs. Sidney Hechinger, Mrs. Martin Mendelsohn, and Mrs. David Simon, president of the Sisterhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

PLAN SPRING VOTE—The John Eaton P.-T. A., at its meeting this week, decided to have its annual election in the spring instead of fall, coinciding with the practice of other P.-T. A.'s in the District Congress. Officers will be chosen at the last spring meeting.

The association also voted after a long discussion pro and con, in favor of national representation and suffrage for the District.

PLAN FASHION SHOW—The Washington Chapter of the American Institute of Banking will sponsor a fashion show and tea tomorrow at Pierre's from 3:30 to 5. This will be the last affair of the social season under the chairmanship of Margaret A. Fischer.

TO HONOR PRESIDENT—Mrs. Reed W. Hyde, of Summit, N. J., national president of the Women's Auxiliary of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, will be guest of honor Tuesday at the closing luncheon of the Washington group at the Army Navy Country Club. Mrs. Robert H. Ridgway is the local president.

GARDEN TEA—The Junior Women's group of the First Congregational Church will have a garden tea at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Lee C. Adcock, near Fairfax, Va., Sunday from 3 to 7.

There will be a silver offering for the work of the group.

Groups to Hear Mrs. Meyer Talk On Child Welfare

Mrs. Eugene Meyer will address the spring luncheon meeting of the child welfare and legislative committees of the Washington section of the National Council of Jewish Women Monday afternoon, at 12:30, at the Woodmont Country Club. She will discuss "Child Welfare as a Community Problem."

Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, chairman of the citizens' advisory committee on child welfare, will explain the setup of this committee and tell how it was started, and Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, cochairman with Mrs. Lansburgh will discuss "Progress in Child Welfare in the District."

Incoming and outgoing members of the board of the Washington section will be guests of honor at the luncheon at which Mrs. Lillian Detre, chairman of the legislative committee, will preside. Mrs. Leo A. Diamond will introduce the speakers.

Reservations are in charge of Mrs. Julian Straus, and transportation in charge of Mrs. Irwin Geiger.

Hard of Hearing Society's Fete Tomorrow

New headquarters of the Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing will take on a festive appearance tomorrow, when the agency will hold open house from 4 to 6 p. m. for the purpose of inviting friends and interested members of the public to view its new home at 2431 Fourteenth street northwest. Miss Elizabeth Brand is executive secretary.

Among the honor guests expected are the founders of the society, Miss Betty C. Wright, Miss Josephine B. Timberlake, Miss Jennie Hedrick, Miss Mary Suter, Miss Louise Wimsatt; charter members, Miss Mildren Harris, Miss Nan Blackwell, Miss Mallie Trout, Miss Elizabeth Springer, Miss Leila Thompson, and John A. Mrs. H. W. Dorst To Be Feted At Tea Today

Petworth Women's Club To Honor Member Who Is Moving to Detroit

Mrs. Harry W. Dorst, who is leaving soon to live in Detroit, Mich., where her husband has been transferred, will be honored today at a farewell tea to be given by the Petworth Women's Club. The affair will be from 2 to 5, at the home of the president, Mr. Frank Stuart, 36 Hamilton street.

Mrs. Dorst, member of the club only six years, has been one of its most active workers. She served as chairman of hospitality for one year and is now completing her term as chairman of the philanthropic committee, one of the busiest in the club.

The clubhouse chairman, Mrs. Timothy Tincher, who has been custodian of the clubhouse bank for the past season, opened it at a meeting of contributors this week. Each of those present told how she earned the money she had given. The total was $62.

During the summer, as each member does her preserving and canning, she will put aside jelly, preserves and pickles for a sale to be held when the club meets in the fall. Two members plan a rummage sale, and others who have cottages at nearby beaches will give benefit picnics for the clubhouse fund.

Mrs. Henry Grady To Speak Tuesday At Club Meeting

Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, will speak Tuesday at the annual breakfast of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held in connection with its convention Monday and Tuesday at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth street.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president, will preside at the business sessions and the breakfast program, which will include music. Guest artists who have been announced include Helen Robichaux, soprano, a member of the Washington Opera Company and also a radio artist who will be accompanied by Myrtle Alcorn; Mrs. Mabel Woodworth Jensen, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, widely known violinist, and Margaret Miller, trumpet soloist.

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will head the list of honor guests. Others will include: Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of Senator George, of Georgia; Mrs. Josiah Bailey, wife of Senator Bailey, of North Carolina; Mrs. Edward R. Burke, president, Congressional Club; Mrs. David Tucker Brown, president of the Woman's National Democratic Club; Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president, League of Republican Women; Mrs. Richard E. Gasch, president of the National League of American Pen Women; Mrs. Fred Sherman Buschmeyer, past president of the D. C. F. W. C.; Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, director general, Federation Women's Clubs; Mrs. Ellis Logan, Mrs. Howard Hodgkin, Mrs. John Frizzell, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Mrs. Edgar Meritt, Mrs. Harvey H. Wiley and Mrs. Walter W. Husband, chairman of house and headquarters, General Federation of Women's Clubs, and others include Mrs. George C. Thorpe, president, Woman's Safety Committee; Mrs. William Walker Smith, president, Professional Writers League; Mrs. Edward Pow, Mrs. Jane Redfield Vose, Mrs. Paul M. Linebarger, Mrs. Thomas Wadden, Mrs. Strickland Gillilan.

Pi Beta Phi Alumnae Plan Final Meeting

The Washington Alumnae of Pi Beta Phi will have its last meeting of the club year on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. C. C. Trussell, 4900 Western avenue, Chevy Chase.

There will be a program and supper and the installation of new officers, including Mrs. R. H. Pledger, who succeeds Mrs. James Greear, as president.

Plans for the national convention in Pasadena this summer will be discussed. Mrs. Pledger will be the delegate representing the Washington alumnae club.

U. S. Opposes Another Appeal By Doomed Killer

Government counsel yesterday asked the Supreme Court to refuse to hear a further appeal for William (Major) McAfee, colored janitor, who has twice been condemned here for beating a woman to death in 1937.

After winning one new trial, McAfee was sentenced again to die in the electric chair and lost an appeal to the United States Court of Appeals here. Attorneys Robert L. Miller and Joseph A. McMenamin contend that when the crime occurred McAfee was too drunk to be capable of the "deliberation" to make his offense first degree murder.

Solicitor General Francis Biddle and his colleagues who filed the brief yesterday said that they personally would have been reluctant to return a first degree verdict under the circumstances, but argued that since the trial jury had done so commutation was up to the President and not to the courts.

BIMELECH WILL BE PREAKNESS FAVORITE—Not Gallahadion, but the horse he beat will go to the post as the public choice at Pimlico tomorrow. There will be a sufficient number of die-hards among the 40,000 customers to reestablish Bimelech as the betting favorite. The fact that Gallahadion led him to the wire in the Derby only six days ago will only be a mild deterrent.

POVICH

The folks who will be renewing their faith in Bimelech despite his Derby debacle will be betting on "class" even as it sometimes behooves bankers to put more faith in character than collateral. Bimelech's 2-year-old record, his eight consecutive victories, his pre-Derby triumphs and breeding are still powerful attractions for the betting folks.

There isn't any attempt to excuse Bimelech's performance in the Derby. That day, he was beaten by a horse that was a better horse—that day. Not until Gallahadion can repeat that performance can he be accepted as Bimelech's superior. Until the Derby, Gallahadion did not deserve mention in the same inhalation with Bimey. One race does not make or break a race horse.

Of course, not deterrent to Bimelech's backers, either, will be the fact that the Preakness is a sixteenth of a mile shorter than the mile-and-a-quarter Derby. If Bimelech was beaten in the Derby because he disliked the long route, he has a glowing chance to salvage his reputation in the shorter Preakness.

Tomorrow, Jockey Freddie Smith on Bimelech will know who he has to beat. He knows now that the nags he must stay with are Gallahadion and Dit, and the margin for error is thus reduced. All these things must be taken into consideration in the betting. If it comes up mud, of course, the reckonings are out. Gallahadion and Dit have always shown more preference for the off track than the Bradley colt.

In any event, the Preakness is taking on new stature and is beginning to threaten even the Derby as the No. 1 race in America. The proceedings at Louisville last week were in the nature of a windfall for the Preakness. Pimlico's race became the crucial test for Bimelech. Had Bimey won the Derby, the Preakness would have taken on the aspect of a hollow formality for the Bradley horse.

In point of history, the Preakness antedates the Derby by two years. Its background is fully as picturesque. The race was named for a once-despised cart horse which won a Pimlico race in 1870. The race was the original Dixie Handicap, or Dinner Party Stakes. It wasn't by chance that the winner was named Preakness. He was bred in the quiet Preakness hills of New Jersey, located near the property of his owner, Milton H. Sanford.

There is evidence that better horses have won the Preakness than the Derby in the last ten years. There is a long and imposing list of Derby winners who couldn't capture the Preakness. As recently as last year, Johnstown came out of his Derby triumph and finished as an also-ran in the Preakness.

Back in 1934, Cavalcade came out of the Derby hailed as a wonder horse, but he could do no better than second in the Preakness. Whiskery won a Derby, but finished third in the Preakness. Twenty Grand set an all-time record with his speed in the Derby, but he was unequal to a Preakness victory.

As long ago as 1918, the Preakness began to challenge the Derby as an important 3-year-old classic. In that year, the Preakness field was so large that track officials were compelled to split the race into two events. In 1920, Sam Riddle deliberately withheld the great Man o' War from the Derby to race him in the Preakness.

Under the guidance of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, the Preakness has literally zoomed into the national spotlight. Unblushingly lifting a page from the Derby book, Vanderbilt hired high-power press agents to glamorize the Preakness. He initiated pre-race pomp and pageantry and won distinction for Preakness Day as a Maryland holiday. Preakness purses are now on a par with Derby purses and have even exceeded them.

Vanderbilt was in a box seat at Louisville last week when Bimelech finished as a beaten horse. That was a dismal denouement for Kentuckians, but if Vanderbilt was seen to fire his hat in the air and cheer, it was excusable. Because in Bimelech's defeat he saw the making of the 1940 Preakness. It was no longer a foregone conclusion.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 9.—Notes so hot——

They say now that the reason Bimelech got licked in the Derby was that Jockey Fred Smith forgot to obey an order by Trainer Bill Hurley in the colt's Derby trial a few days before. It was a mile trial, and Hurley told Smith to keep the colt going for an additional quarter of a mile, thus giving Bim a workout at the Derby distance. Smith forgot, pulled him up at the finish of the mile—and in the Derby the Bradley colt faded in the final quarter mile of the race. Incidentally, much of Bimelech's training this past winter was a departure in horse-training. He was walked for countless miles over the rolling hills around his barn, to strengthen his legs. Horsemen we've talked to say he can't miss in the Preakness, and that Gallahadion won't be in the money. The only things we believe about racehorses these days are that they have four legs and no consciences.

CONSIDINE

An irate Yankee fan is bombarding Ed Barrow with requests that Johnny Murphy be shipped to Calgary. Seems like only yesterday that John-O was being hailed as the wonder-man of relief pitching, and he probably will be again when the Yanks begin rolling . . . Gene Sarazen believes that the main reason why so many of the game's leading players are nervous wrecks is because of the funereal silence imposed on golf audiences. Silence breeds suspense; noise is escape and relief—Gene says. Sunday he, Jimmy Demaret, Babe Ruth and Gene Tunney will play at Norwalk, Conn., with Fred Waring's band tooting in their ears while they make their shots.

A new kind of racehorse starting gate, recently perfected, opens its retaining gates at the split second when every horse on the starting line breaks an "electric eye" beam; so that the horses, rather than the starter, start the race.

Ogden Nash, the poet who composes cross-handed, is a member of the Maryland Jockey Club and has recently rolled his eye from heaven to earth, and earth to heaven, and come up with this tribute to the Preakness:

The Derby is a handsome race
Of aristocratic sleekness
Where steeds of birth may prove their worth
For running in the Preakness.
When the dogwood blows and the julep flows
The horseman finds his heaven
In Maryland, my Maryland,
On Saturday, May eleven.
If you wish to speak of a race unique
You have never known uniqueness
Till you up and go to Pimlico
The Preakness is my weakness.

Lew Jenkins, who fights Lou Ambers tonight for the lightweight championship, is not the first citizen of Sweetwater, Tex.. The first cit is Sammy Baugh, about whom the village went so daffy that it put his picture (throwing a forward pass) on the town's official stationery. Lou Ambers, who relieves his tension before a fight by singing at the top of his lungs in his dressing rooms, has entered Pic Magazine's amateur singing contest to be held at the World Fair's hall of music beginning Sunday. On his application blank he listed his past singing experiences as "street corners." . . . Bimelech's loss in the Derby must have been a shot of indignation in the arm for 80-year-old Col. Ed Bradley, for the Colonel plans to make the trip from his Kentucky farm to Baltimore to see the Preakness—whereas he couldn't go 30 miles to see the Derby.

For the first time in 100 years of harness racing, Goshen will echo to the clank of the pari-mutuel machines this summer. Trotting is run off in heats—best two out of three—so each heat will constitute a mutuel race, the owners of the ancient historic and good time tracks announce . . . Recommended: Paul Gallico's great Hiram Holliday story in this month's Cosmo, and Arthur Mann's piece on Arthur Fletcher, the man who wouldn't manage the Yankees, in the Sepost.

Doesn't seem possible that just a year ago the Dodgers swooned all the way to seventh place by losing nine, winning two and tying one game on a Western trip. That was the trip where they lost Whit Wyatt, fined Red Evans for inhaling too much beer and got a divorce from Boots Poffenberger . . . The Administration can never say that Ray Blades, Frankie Frisch, Casey Stengel and Leo Durocher have not done their bits to put men back to work. The Dodgers and Cards set a record of using 39 men in a game one day last week and the Pirates and Bees broke it the next day by using 40 . . . Blades has permitted only two of his pitchers to go the full nine innings this year, and yanked two of his relief men after they had pitched only one ball each.

Feller's 3-Hit Pitching Defeats Yankees

15,000 See Champs Lose Another, 4-0

DiMaggio's Scratch Single in Seventh Is First Yank Hit; Pearson Is Loser

By the Associated Press

New York, May 9.—Bob Feller made a gesture toward a second no-hit game today and scared the World Champion Yankees into their sixth successive defeat as the Cleveland Indians finished their Eastern swing with a 4 to 0 victory.

At the finish Feller had given three hits, but for six innings he held the Bombers helpless with his fireball and the 14,790 fans were just beginning to get a throb in their throats when Joe DiMaggio singled off Lou Boudreau's glove in the seventh.

This removed the tension and Joe Gordon singled sharply past first base in the eighth and in the ninth Charley Keller rapped another single to center. Keller, however, was the only Yankee to get as far as second base.

Feller a Best

Feller's fast one was at its sizzling best as he proceeded to fan seven batters and allow only three walks.

His slugging teammates gave him plenty of help with a run in the second and three more in the fifth off Monte Pearson, who was the last man to pitch a no-hit game be-

Their splurge in the fifth came with two out and also started with a walk—to Roy Weatherly. Ben Chapman smacked a ground rule double on the bounce into the left-field stands and Trosky sailed a long fly that struck the rightfield foul pole and landed in the playing field for another double, scoring the runners. Heath walked and Keltner collected his third straight hit, a single to left, scoring Trosky.

This was the twelfth defeat in 18 games for the champions, now in last place, but was only the third to a right-handed pitcher.

Seven Pirate Errors Figure in 17-6 Loss

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 9.—In a travesty on baseball, the Pirates made seven errors and five of their pitchers gave up 15 hits, 10 bases on balls and hit three batsmen today in process of collapsing in their ninth consecutive defeat, 17 to 6, before the New York Giants.

Seven of the New Yorkers' runs were crammed into the first inning off Max Butcher and Dick Lanahan and the rout was on.

Carl Hubbell gave up a run to Pittsburgh on two hits in the first, but thereafter allowed no hits until the seventh and even though the Pirates rallied for five runs in the last two frames, the veteran left-hander lasted till the final out. It was his first victory against two defeats.

Smoky Joe Wood's Sons Oppose in College Game

By International News Service

New Haven, Conn., May 9.—Brotherly love became brotherly rivalry today on Yale's baseball diamond.

Smoky Joe Wood, coach of Yale, was a proud papa not only because his nine beat Colgate, 5-4, but because of the accomplishments of his two athletic sons who played on rival teams.

While limiting Yale to two hits in six innings, young Steve Wood walloped a 375-foot homer and drove across another run with a single. Brother Joe held Colgate hitless and scoreless during the last three frames and reached Steve's delivery for two hits which accounted for two runs.

Dodgers Get 3 in Tenth, Beat Cubs, 4-1

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 9.—Brooklyn's delightful Dodgers burst out with three runs in the tenth inning today to handcuff the Chicago Cubs, 4 to 1, for their twelfth victory in fourteen games this season.

The score was tied at 1-all, and two were out when the storm struck. Dixie Walker doubled, Cookie Lavagetto was purposely passed and then Dolph Camilli rapped a single into rightfield for a run, going to second himself on the throw in. Roy Cullenbine also was walked intentionally, filling the bases, and Peewee Reese shot a single into left to score two more runners.

Hack Doubles, Scores

That was the ball game that had started out as a red hot hurling battle between Tex Carlton, making his first start since his no-hitter, and Lefty French, winner of four games and defeated only once previously.

Carleton's no-hit string was snapped by Stanley Hack, first batter he faced in the first inning. Hack doubled, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on a fly. But after that the Cubs collected only three hits and no runs. Carleton gave way to a pinchhitter in the ninth, and it was Newel Kimball who received credit for the triumph.

French also held the Dodgers to four hits for nine innings, and scoreless until the fourth when Camilli tripled and came home on an infield out.

Besides Camilli, Manager Leo Durocher also dragged down two of

Witchlike Wins Carroll At Pimlico

$32.20 Mutuel Paid By Longshot; Stout Gives Winner Strong Ride; Arden Lass, 2d

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 9.—Beaten a city block in the Pimlico Oaks last week-end, Witchlike, representing the Wheatley Stable, came from off the pace today to win the Carroll Handicap, a $2,500 added sprint involving ten fillies and mares. The crowd shopped around for a favorite and got one in H. Dufford's Torchlight but the mare was shunted into third money as Jouett Shouse's Arden Lass was second.

The finish was a thriller with Arden Lass just missing the No. 1 money by a head margin in a photo verdict. Backers of Witchlike, who could overlook that previous effort, were rewarded with $32.20 for each and every $2 investment. The winning daughter of Diavolo turned in time of 1:14 in joining Lady Maryland and Preeminent as winner of a Carroll Handicap. Witchlike's performance was creditable over a track that was heavy following last night's downpour.

Lady Maryland Scratched

Lady Maryland and Morstep were scratched, leaving ten "gals" to compete in the 6-furlong battle. Redlin and Thorn Apple, a pair of speedy but faint-hearted fillies, were first to show in front and tried to outrun each other going to the turn. Witchlike had broken well and was under mild restraint. Redlin was first of the early leaders to tire. Thorn Apple then took up the front running.

Jockey J. Stout turned Witchlike loose at the head of the stretch and the filly bounded to the front. Arden Lass, hard ridden from the start, came around on the outside to improve her position, while Torchlight skimmed the rail.

Stout Goes to Work

Witchlike had a length and a half lead in midstretch and Stout went to work to save some of it. Arden Lass put on a bold rush on the outside and Torchlight became energetic on the inside. Between the two moves, Witchlike lasted to take the decision.

Long shots were popping most of the afternoon, which began, however, with a favorite victory in the first race, the work of Chester F. Hockley's See See. This filly downed, among others, Happy Lark and Kamport, to start a $209.70 payoff daily double. O. R. Willard's Flag Song, a $32 shot, put the big money in the twin wager by winning the second race.

After Baffler won the steeplechase by a neck from Lone Gallant, the longest price of the afternoon developed in the third race. Charming Mary was a beautiful sight to her scattered backers as she bounded home to pay $130.50. She finished in front of two other long shots, Gracky and War Grand.

Byron Nelson Is 15th Entrant In Round Robin

New York, May 9 (U.P.).—Byron Nelson, National Open golf champion, is the fifteenth and final entrant for the $5,000 Goodall round robin, it was announced today.

NELSON

Nelson and 14 others will compete at the Fresh Meadow Country Club, Flushing, N. Y., May 16-19, in this unique 126-hole medal and match-play tournament.

2 Home Runs Help Leonard Avoid Defeat

Dutch Allows Chicago 10 Hits as Griffs Jump Into 5th-Place Tie With Athletics

By Shirley Povich.

The strangest thing happened at Griffith Stadium yesterday. The Nats not only won a ball game, but they beat a left-handed pitcher. Moreover, the pitcher they licked was their long-time nemesis, Thornton Lee, who used to hold his job in the big leagues by his ability to beat Washington.

When they did find a southpaw they could lick, the Nats poured it on thickly. They belted Lee for most of their 15 hits, a new high for the season by the Nats, and slapped down the White Sox by a score of 8 to 4. With that victory, they moved out of seventh place into a tie with the Athletics for fifth.

It was a stirring sort of triumph by the Nats, who went into the seventh inning trailing by a run and came out of it leading by four. Into that inning the Nats crowded five of their hits in a five-run explosion climaxed by J. Bloodworth's startling home run into the left center bleachers with two of his colleagues on base.

Dutch Leonard took advantage of the sudden batting power of the Nats to record his second victory of the season. He didn't contribute one of his better-pitched games, allowing the White Sox ten hits, but he kept the Nats in the ball game until they could muster some hitting power.

Adding to the uniqueness of the proceedings was the fact that the Nats hit not one home run yesterday, but two. Before Bloodworth delivered the climactic wallop in the seventh, Jimmy Pofahl banged a sixth-inning homer to deep centerfield. Thus the Nats in one game equaled their home run output of 18 previous contests.

Pofahl's homer pruned Lee's lead to 3-2 in the sixth, and then the Nats set about winning the ball game. George Case led off the seventh with a Texas League double to short center and after Buddy Lewis struck out, Gerald Walker tied the score with a single to right. Bonura drew a walk at this point and Cecil Travis moved the Nats into a 4-3 lead with a single to center.

Milan Gets Go-By

Travis' single scored Walker despite Third Base Coach Clyde Milan's furious attempts to hold Walker up at third base. Ignoring Milan, Walker dashed for the plate and made it in a sprawling slide only because Rookie Catcher Turner neglected to tag him after Kreevich's throw beat the runner to the plate.

Anyway, Leonard's slender lead suddenly zoomed into a four-run advantage a moment later. Showing no respect for a stiff wind blowing in his face, Bloodworth belted the next pitch into the bleachers

Lew Jenkins Seeks Ambers' Crown in New York Tonight

15-Round Bout Tonight In Garden

Youthful Knockout Artist Ballyhooed As Real Threat To Lightweight King

By the United Press

New York, May 9.—With fists blazing in two-gun fashion, lean Lew Jenkins—grim, scar-faced Texas "killer"—will try to blast the lightweight crown from Champion Lou Ambers' bobbing head tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden.

This cadaverous young Texan is a dangerous man, with seven straight knockout notches on his shootin' irons after ten consecutive victories—nine in the New York area.

But Champion Ambers, though 26½ years old and a prospective pappy, is one of the smartest, toughest hombres ever to toss leather. Even bullet-bangers like McLarnin, Canzoneri, Armstrong, Montanez, Zivic and Davis were unable to "dry gulch" him during eight years of busy battling.

Hence, nearly 19,000 fans are expected to jam the Garden for this 15-round "Lou-Lew natural" between hunch-shouldered Ambers, the bomb-proof master boxer, and 23-year-old Jenkins, deadliest puncher the 135-pound division has produced in years. Promoter Mike Jacobs expects a gate of $70,000.

Captivated New York

Gaunt Jenkins is a story-book fighter who met with mediocre success in 44 fights among the tank towns and then completely captivated New York in ten short months.

The Twentieth Century Club's ballyhoo campaign for this fight has attempted to gild the glories won by Jenkins, meanwhile attempting to indicate that Champion Ambers is fading rapidly.

Champion Lou has been unimpressive during the training grind at Summit, N. J., but he never was much of a gymnasium performer.

Despite this watch-out-for Jenkins publicity, the general public is still confident that the Herkimer Hurricane will retain his crown. In heavy betting Ambers is the 13-to-5 favorite. Price-maker Eddie Borden, in addition, quotes 2 to 1 against Ambers scoring a knockout and 4 to 1 against Jenkins belting out the champ.

Like a Dream to Lew

Neither ballyhoo nor betting prices worry spindle-shanked Jenkins, who broke camp at Greenwood Lake last night and took light limbering exercises at Stillman's gym today. As son and sole support of the once poverty-stricken Widow Jenkins, of Sweetwater, Tex., Lew has been the underdog as long as he can remember. In fact, it seems like a dream that he should be fighting for the title and earning about $11,000 tomorrow night, win or lose.

When Jenkins and his cute little wife, Katie, first ventured into New York in a dilapidated jalopy, they asked little of life or the big city. All they wanted was enough pork and bean money from preliminaries in the small clubs to enable them to linger a while and take in the World Fair. But the thin man clicked in the big town.

Despite his dynamite, Texas Lew undertakes a difficult task tomorrow night. Ambers is one of the most rugged men in ring history—not a K. O. in 98 fights. He's a fast, crafty, elusive boxer—a continuously moving target. Never before has Jenkins attempted the 15-round distance, and his debut over the title route is being made with a man who maintains a blistering pace in every round.

Early Rally Aids Md. Frosh Beat Roosevelt

Score Five Runs In First Inning In Taking 10-9 Game

Maryland's frosh nine staged an early inning rally against Roosevelt High School at College Park yesterday to chalk up the young Terps' fifth victory by a 10-9 count.

The Terrapin yearlings reeled off four hits in the initial session to account for five tallies. After Kuster and Boothe singled, Bransdorf clouted a triple into centerfield to clear the bases. An error on Hoopengardner's grounder through short sent Bransdorf over and a moment later the Cub third baseman scored on Johnson's single. The Terrapins added two runs in the second and one each in the third, fourth and fifth. Johnson, son of the famous Walter, dumped a homer into centerfield in the second frame.

Roosevelt mixed two walks with a hit in the first inning for two markers. In the third frame the Washington nine chalked up two more scores and threatened in the fifth with three runs on two hits and three Terp errors. Fulton, Terp one-armed left-hander, held the District nine at bay with six hits but four Yearling errors proved costly. The Young Liners got to Vermillion, Roosevelt twirler, for 12 base knocks.

Scalzo, Covelli Drill Today At Turner's

To Conclude Training Here for Title Bout Wednesday Night

Petey Scalzo, newly crowned world featherweight champion, and Frankie Covelli, of Chicago, will pitch camp today at Turner's Arena to conclude training for their Wednesday night 15-round title fight in Griffith Stadium.

Pete Reilly, who has guided four fighters to world championships, will bring in the New York Italian and and an entourage of sparmates and fighters that includes a new heavyweight Reilly thinks has title possibilities.

Covelli and his manager, Izzy Kline, are to arive from Chicago early this morning, and Covelli will hold a public workout at the arena at 12:30 p. m. Scalzo will follow at 1:30.

Claude W. Owen, new chairman of the District Boxing Commission, yesterday called attention to the N. B. A. ruling that the winner of the Wednesday night fight must defend the title in not more than 90 days against one of the top ten contenders on a percentage basis.

This is to insure no "tie ups" and to make such a bout open to any promoter, Owen said.

Treasury Nine Is Trounced By Gas Light

The Washington Gas Light Co. nine yesterday thoroughly trounced the Treasury, burying the losers under an 11-run deluge to win, 11 to 1, on the North Ellipse in a Government League game.

"Cope" Copeland, whose two triplets brought in two of the Gas nine's runs, played a heads-up game at shortstop. Naval Air Station meets Union Printers today in another Government loop game at 5 p. m.

Hoya Golfers In 3 Eastern League Scraps

Oakmont's famous multi-trapped layout held Georgetown's Eastern Intercollegiate Golf Association title hopes as the Hoyas left yesterday for Pittsburgh and three league matches today and Saturday.

Tied with Cornell for the Southern Division lead with 2 victories each, the Hoyas have been established as favorites to meet the Northern sectior winners for the league crown as they already hold a 9-0 practice match victory over the Ithicans.

The Hoyas will be heavy favorites to defeat Penn State in an afternoon match at Oakmont they meet the stronger Pitsburgh team tomorrow morning and Cornell in the afternoon. Penn State has lost two matches while Pitt has broken even against the Nittany Lions and Cornell.

• A strong contender for the league crown for the past four years, Princeton has always proven the stumbling block for the Hoyas but last Saturday's 7-2 victory over the Tigers broke the streak and the powerful Georgetown team appears headed for next week's playoff match for the championship. If they get by this week end, they will play either Harvard or Yale, co-favorites in the northern section.

Two local boys, Bil'y Shea and Buddy Sharkey, both undefeated last week end, made the trip along with Captain Johnny Burke, the exIntercollegiate and District Amateur champion, Joe McBride, Van Herpe and Ray Higgins, regulars, and the alternates, Frank Galvin and Dick Harris. The last two named may see action in one of the three matches.

Cameo Meets Gas Co. Nine at 5 P. M. Today

Cameo Furniture's baseball club meets the Washington Gas Light nine today at 5 p. m. in a warm-up game for tomorrow's journey to Newport News, Va., where they play the Newport News Builders. Players will leave at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow from 214 Twelfth street southwest.

Al Jamison, Lew Worsham Beat Amateurs

Two Pro Matches Scheduled Sunday At Bradley, Quantico

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Two of the city's best amateur golfers attempted to prove they were better than two professionals yesterday at Congressional but they failed, and the result was Pros. Lewis Worsham, of Burning Tree, and Al Jamison, Bradley Hills, 1 up over Middle Atlantic Amateur Champion Roger Peacock and his football playing partner, Charley Malone.

Peacock and Malone looked as though they would make good their boast on the ninth hole when Worsham and Jamison were 2 down, but the pros teamed well on the back nine and Worsham dropped a birdie putt on the seventeenth for a 1 up lead, and they halved the eighteenth.

Although no official scores were kept, Peacock was under par on the out nine to build the lead and Worsham was better than par figures coming back to cut it down. Worsham was approximately 72; Peacock, 4; Jamison, 77, and Malone, 79. The latter, who is touted as the longest hitter in town and is developing into one of the top simon-pures, was a little off his game.

Tee Off at 2 P. M.

Plans were completed yesterday for two professional exhibition matches on Sunday, one at Bradley Hills and another at the Quantico, Va., course.

Jamison will take Wiffy Cox for a partner in the match at Bradley against Leo Walper, the East-West highway driving range pro, and Mel Shorey, of Indian Spring. They will leave the tee at 2 p. m.

At the Officers Club in Quantico, Host Professional Danny Burton and his brother Allan, Army and Navy pro, will take on the combination of George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, and Bob Barnett, Army and Navy, whose defeats as a team have been few and far between. This match will also start at 2 o'clock.

Jamison completed arrangements for the Pro Invitation Tournament Sunday, May 19, at Bradley Hills, where some 15 or 20 golf pros in and around the city will play for a purse posted by Edward G. Adams, lessee of the host club. Play will be 28 holes, with Adams adding $50 to the entry fees.

Team Matches Today

The Manor Club team that is currently leading the first team matches of the Women's District Golf Association with 35½ points out of a possible 36, is expected to increase its lead today at Columbia where Washington furnishes the opposition. The champion Chevy Chase team meets Argyle, Army and Navy faces Woodmont and Congressional and Kenwood are foes in another match.

Either Bethesda or Rockville will drop out of the first-place battle in the schoolboy golf league when the Montgomery County foes meet this afternoon at Washington Golf and Country Club. Wilson's inter-high leaders meet Tech at Columbia while Central faces Western at Manor.

Central Golfers Beat Anacostia For Third Victory

Central High golfers defeated Anacostia, 8½ to ½, yesterday in a postponed schoolboy league match at Capital Club. Murphy took every hole from Brown, to win 10 and 8, while the best ball in the second foursome was also 10 and 8. Anacostia prevented a shutout when Wrenn halved his match with Kennedy. It was Central's third victory in six matches and Anacostia's sixth consecutive defeat.

Sturgess (C.) defeated Hervey, 8 and 7; Parks (C.) defeated Miller, 2 and 1. Best ball, Central, 8 and 6.

Murphy (C.) defeated Brown, 10 and 8; Anderson (C.) defeated Smith, 9 and 7. Best ball, Central, 10 and 8.

Kennedy (C.) and Wrenn (A.), all even; Drury (C.) defeated Almann, 9 and 8. Best ball, Central, 5 and 4.

Virginia Frosh Trounce V. M. I., 30-3, With 21 Hits

Charlottesville, Va., May 9.—Virginia's freshmen baseball team ended its season with a landslide 30-to-3 victory over V. M. I. Alex Cave pitched four innings for the Cavaliers, giving one hit, and was followed by Martin Dies, jr., who finished with a four-hit job. Altogether the Cavaliers hammered out 21 hits. They finished the year's work with nine victories against one defeat.

TOY MANCHESTER TERRIER

Known for centuries as the "black and tan," they have been known in their present form and by their present name since about 1800. That some of the oldest canine blood flows in their veins there can be no doubt, and many of our present day purebreds are the result of crossing and recrossing of this blood. They are always black and tan in color and weigh from 6 to 12 pounds. They are very dainty, scrappy little dogs having absolutely no doggy odor

Brewers Win Over Russells; Errors Help

Wild Throw, Outfield Error Give Heurich Nine 4-3 Victory

A two-run splurge in the seventh broke up a pitchers' duel and won the ball game for Heurich Brewers over Russell Motors yesterday at the Ellipse. The score was 4-3.

Clements had held the Brewers to two hits when the beer nine came up to bat in the seventh and last inning, trailing 3-2. Then the heartbreaking sight of a wild throw to first and an error in the outfield and two Beermen crossing home plate greeted Clements.

Knight knocked an easy grounder to Second Baseman Forney, but the throw to first went wild. Pepco Barry beat out a bunt, and then Posnack hit a long fly to left, which Jenkins promptly dropped to allow both runners to score. Schrivener, who allowed the motors nine but six hits, protected his lead in the last half of the seventh successfully.

Maritime Defeats I.D.R.A. Nine, 5-1

The inability of the I. D. R. A. nine to convert hits into runs led to defeat yesterday at the hands of Maritime, 5-1, on the Ellipse in a Departmental League game.

Both nines obtained five hits, but Maritime was more alert on the bases and piled up the runs. Johnson's three-base hit accounted for two of the Maritime runs.

Swede Angel Tosses Singh On Arena Mat

Winner Tossed Five Times to Customers But Wins Decision

Olaf (the Swedish Angel) Svendson upheld the glory of two preceding wrestling "angels" last night at Turner's Arena with a new routine which hit a new high in histrionics and resulted in the downfall of Nanjo Singh, the "cobra clutch" artist, in 35 minutes.

Nanjo, who claims to be fresh out of the Punjab country in old India, pulled a number of Hindu tricks which drew the ire of the 1,500 faithful followers of groan artistry and earned him a kick in the teeth from an irate spectator.

Singh won in the number of tossouts, throwing the Angel to the customers five times. He was thrown out only three times, but on one of his trips into the ringside a fan took instant dislike to the Hindu and planted a No. 11 hoof in Nanjo's face. Singh returned to the ring bleeding profusely from cuts on the nose and muttering strange sounding imprecations.

He clamped his clutch on the Angel's neck, hung on for five minutes and then was flung to the floor with the Angel on top. Referee Casey Berger counted him out. In the semifinal, Zim Zam Zum defeated Pat Corrigan in 22 minutes. Preliminaries saw Wladyslaw Talun defeat Andy Meixner in 4½ minutes; Benny Rosen beat Angelo Martini in 18 minutes and Kola Kwarini down Juan Olaguivel in 14 minutes.

Jim DeChard Fights Tonight In Amateur Show

Jimmy DeChard, District amateur heavyweight champion, fights Sammy Marks, Western Pennsylvania champion, tonight at Gonzaga Hall in the five-round feature of an all-star amateur boxing show opening at 8:30 p. m.

Building up to a professional fight career under the wing of Frankie Mann, DeChard will be at a disadvantage in weight against the 200-pound Pennsylvanian, but still is favored.

In another heavyweight match, Jim Brady, Georgetown University student, meets Sam Slatko, of Johnstown, Pa.

Redskins No. 1 Draftee to Quit Grid Game in 1940

Matrimony deprived the Redskins of their No. 1, 1940, draftee, but the signed contract of Jimmy German, last year's rookie sensation, was received yesterday to clear the gloom, Jack Espey, general manager, announced.

Eddie Boell, New York University star halfback last year, informed the 'Skins office that he is now out of the professional football picture—the reason, his recent marriage and present intentions of taking up a teaching career. Boell had been placed at the top on the 'Skins draft list.

Receipt of German's contract brought the player total to 23, more than twice as many as usually are signed at this time of year. German is the lad who made his debut against Brooklyn last year and in four minutes had scored a touchdown himself and passed for another. He's presently in the wholesale grocery business in Danville, Ky.

Doyle Enters Friends Net Play Finals

St. Albans Player Defeats Harrison; Meets Smith Monday

Stan Doyle, of St. Alban's, won his way to the finals in the boys' class of the Sidwell Friends Interscholastic Invitation tennis tournament yesterday at Friends School, defeating John Harrison, of the host school, 6—4, 6—2.

Doyle, top-seeded, will meet Cotton Smith, of Friends, in the finals Monday at 3:30 p. m.

Georgetown Prep's fourth-seeded Harold Titus entered the semifinal round in the junior class with a 6—0, 6—4 triumph over C. Norris, of St. John's, and a 3—6, 7—5, 6—3 victory over David Smith, of Western. Titus trailed Smith late in the second set, but pulled out at 7—5, and won the third set with impressive tennis.

Bob Bensinger, top-seeded from the Takoma Park Academy, won, 6—2, 6—1, over seventh-seeded Ben Fisher and will meet Titus at 3:30 today in a semifinal match.

Dick Williams, of Episcopal, second-seeded in the junior class, won, 7—5, 6—1, over Arthur Farrington, of Roosevelt. The latter sprained his ankle when stepping out of his car prior to the match and played ver- well under the handicap.

Williams will meet Eli Gottlieb in the other junior semifinal Sunday at 3 p. m. The finals will follow the boys' finals Monday.

Central Nine Beats Washington-Lee in Field Day Feature

Virginians Win 4 of 5 Track Events

A. A. U. Ruling Bars Hoya Track Stars From Participation; 2,500 Watch Events

In the rarified atmosphere of horse shows and track exhibitions, Central High's baseball team continued to demonstrate its mastery over local and nearby nines by blanking Washington-Lee, 5-0, yesterday in the feature event of a field day in the Central stadium.

Second in importance only to the baseball game was the mile relay between Washington-Lee, Central and Roosevelt, taken by the Little Generals in 3 minutes and 29 seconds, only one second shy of a new stadium mark.

Although no points were officially recorded, the five track events served as an excellent barometer in measuring the capabilities of Washington-Lee and Central, generally conceded to be two of the outstanding teams in this sector.

While major interest was centered on the scholastic shows, many of the 2,500 spectators were somewhat disappointed in the faiuure of Al Blozis and his Georgetown trackmates to put in an appearance. It developed that the A. A. U. refused to sanction the Hoyas' participation.

Little Generals Take 4 Events

The Little Generals won four of the five track events, yielding a triumph only in the 440-yard dash which Central's Al Hayden won in approved style in 53.3 seconds.

Wally Legg, beaten only once in the past three years, was the individual track star, winning the 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, and running anchor man on the winning relay team.

Meanwhile, Central's Riding Club lassies were entertaining the crowd with an exhibtion of horsemanship. Competing in hackney and jumping events, the six girls made a tremendous hit with their versatility and excellent riding under difficult conditions.

Revealing a new satellite in the person of Manuel Avancena who blanked the Little Generals with three hits, Central had little trouble winning from Washington-Lee, scoring three runs in the first inning and concentrating on defense thereafter.

Fisher Hurls Ninth

Avancena, heretofore ineligible, was brilliant in his debut, permitting no Washington-Lee batsman to advance past second base in the eight innings he toiled. Billy Fisher entered the game in the ninth inning and faced only three batters, fanning two.

The Vikings were having their troubles with the pitching of Ed Johnson, acquiring only three hits. Two of them, however, were triples which figured in four Central tallies.

In the first inning, with men on first and second and the count of three balls and no strikes on Steiner, Johnson made the fatal error of throwing a fast ball through the middle and Steiner rapped it to dead center for three bases. He scored a moment later on an infield out.

The Vikings added another run in the second without the benefit of a hit when Kenny Mann walked, stole second and continued home on two errors—by the catcher and second baseman.

Leading School Teams Play Baseball Today

Basement clubs in the interhigh baseball series get a rest today as the first four teams in the standings come to grips in the regular Friday doubleheader.

Central, the defending champion and leader by a half game, goes up against Tech, the fourth place team, and Western and Eastern clash. The games will be at Central and Western, respectively, both starting at 3:30.

Whatever hopes Tech may entertain of upsetting Central will hinge on its improvement in hitting. Getting good pitching from Buddy Webb, the Manual Trainers have accounted for only 21 safeties in their four interhigh starts to date. The Viking have 35 to their credit in three successful outings. Charley Kligman and Billy Fisher will share the mound assignment for Central.

Western's attempt to keep up with Central by whipping Eastern will depend again upon Carmel Nance, its southpaw sensation. Kenny Curles is the most likely starter for the Tide.

Five other games mark the day's scholastic program. A prep school duel will bring together Landon and Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park. Devitt seeks its second triumph this season over Gonzaga. Anacostia entertains a torrid Blair High club, and Washington-Lee continues its rigid schedule with a game at Fredericksburg, (Va.) High.

Peacock's Hit Brings Bosox Victory in 10th

Detroit Loses, 6-5, As Leaders Take Fourth Straight

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 9.—Pinch-hitter Johnny Peacock punched out a single with the bases loaded in the tenth today to give the Red Sox a 6-5 win over Detroit and a clean sweep of the two-game series.

While stretching their victory to four straight, the league-leading sockers permitted the Tigers to come from behind and deadlock the game against starter Denny Galehouse in the seventh.

Thereupon rookie Herb Hash took over and kept the visitors under control until Peacock broke up the game.

The Tigers got to Galehouse for two runs in the first, when Dick Bartell doubled and Earl Averill slapped a homer into right field. They added a third tally in the sixth and tied the score by scoring twice before a putout was made in the seventh.

After Joe Cronin registered the first Boston run in the fourth, Jimmy Foxx tripled with the bases jammed in the fifth and then scored on his manager's fly.

With one out in the tenth, Cronin smashed out his second two-bagger of the game and, after Bobby Doerr and Jim Tabor were passed by Alton Benton, the fourth Detroit flinger, Peacock rolled down the curtain while batting for catcher Gene Desautels.

Until the sixth inning, Lee was getting by, but not very nicely. His pals in the field were saving him all sorts of trouble with brilliant support. In the third inning, with two out and the bases full, Mike Kreevich made a galloping one-hand catch of Zeke Bonura's line drive to avert at least two runs. Joe Kuhel dug two low throws out of the dirt to help Lee out of embarrassment and he also robbed Buddy Lewis of an extra-base hit with a catch of Lewis' smash down the line. Luke Appling didn't hurt Lee when he speared Bloodworth's sixth-inning line drive with a leaping catch. It happened just before Pofahl's homer.

Taft Wright Triples

For three innings it was a 0-0 affair and then singles by Kuhel and Taft Wright and Appling's grounder fetched the Sox a run. The Nats got it back immediately on Travis' double to left and Rick Ferrell's single with two out.

Taft Wright was the moving spirit in a two-run Chicago rally in the fifth. Kennedy singled, went to second on a past ball, to third on Kuhel's infield hit, and scored on Kreevich's force-play grounder. Wright then tripled a run home with a blast to deep right center.

That established the White Sox in a 3-1 lead, but that was before the Nats got the range against Lee.

Rookie Aids As Cardinals Defeat Phils

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 9.—After a wobbly start, the St. Louis Cardinals pulled themselves together behind the relief hurling of Rookie Ernie White, and, aided by Stu Martin's fourth homer in three days, handed the Phillies an 8-to-4 setback for a clean sweep of the two-game series.

Murry Dickson another rookie, allowed the Phils three runs in the first inning. The Redbirds came back, however, with four runs off Walter Higbe and Lloyd Brown, but when the Phils threatened again in the second, White was called in.

White, making his first big league appearance, also did well at the plate getting three hits and a walk for a perfect day at bat. Martin's round-tripper came in the eighth with White on base.

Walters Hurls, Bats Cincinnati To Victory, 4-1

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 9.—Bucky Walters' five-hit ball and good stickwork put the Reds back in the win column today with a 4 to 1 decision over Boston which gave the tall right-hander his fifth victory without defeat.

Striking out five and walking one, Walters yielded his first hit to Max West in the fourth inning and it went for the Bees' lone score, a home run.

Bucky and Shortstop Eddie Joost each had a perfect day at the plate. Walters bunt-singled, drove out a fifth-frame double that scored Joost and walked twice. Joost singled and walked three times.

In the eighth inning, when the Reds loaded the bases for a third time, Lonnie Frey singled Joost home with one of two final runs.

Boston's Joe Sullivan issued three passes and seven hits in the seven frames he worked but twice turned the Reds back scoreless after they had filled the bases. Sullivan gave way to George Barnicle but Dick Coffman finished.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Jimmy Bloodworth and Dutch Leonard shared the chief honors for the Nats in the 8-4 defeat of the White Sox yesterday and to that pair go the largest awards in the Man of the Month contest. We are distributing points as follows:

To Bloodworth, ten points, because his home run with two on base actually clinched the ball game.

To Leonard, ten points, because he went the route and kept the Nats in the ball game with his pitching.

To Gerald Walker, seven points, because he made four hits, stole a base and drove in the tying run in the seventh inning.

To Cecil Travis, four points, because he made three hits, one a double, and because he singled to put the Nats in the lead in the seventh.

To Jimmy Pofahl, three points, because his sixth-inning homer cut the White Sox lead to 3-2.

To George Case, three points, because he made three hits and doubled in the seventh to put the tying run on base.

To Rick Ferrell, two points, because he drove in the Nats' first run with a hit and later doubled. The totals:

Jimmy Bloodworth	23	Zeke Bonura	9
Cecil Travis	16	Rick Ferrell	6
Gerald Walker	15	Jimmy Pofahl	6
George Case	13	Buddy Lewis	4

On Fishing

From one end of the Chesapeake Bay country to the other, hardheads—croakers, call them what you will—are moving in for their summer sojourn, and in numbers that gives us the idea this season is going to be a humdinger.

ACKERMAN

Commercial men have been taking them in their haulseines in oldtime form—40,000 in a single set in the Patuxent at Broom's Island—a day later in Herring Bay another 25,000 pounds—in lesser quantities everywhere.

Yet they are not just right for hook and line, due, of course, to the low temperature, in spite of the fact that good catches have been made in several places.

Ed McConchi with W. L. Souders, W. E. Marshall, Arthur Murray and Doc Domsky brought in the first real catch at Benedict on the Patuxent—23, that would average a little better than two pounds.

In the Honga River on the Eastern Shore, where the first catches of the season are usually made, it was I. S. Thompson this year, fishing with Capt. Rody Langley, of Solomons, who brought in the first catch of grunters. Taken on the ebb and slack of the tide, these fish also averaged slightly better than two pounds and the catch totaled 125. With Thompson were Ed Way, Fred Walker, Bill Akers, Mel Eicherand, J. W. Garrison, of Wellsburg, W. Va.

The warm weather of this week should make any place on the bay worthwhile trying over this week-end, but keep in mind there is no real certainty as yet. The good going will come as soon as they are warm enough to strike, instead of "laying" on the bait as they are doing now.

Our regular reporter on Big Hunting Creek, Bill Dear, chalked up another day this week with but one small brown, barely exceeding the minimum size, to show for his labor (?). The average creel on this water is about three trout, but the size usually more than makes up for it. One tagged fish, 22 inches in length, was taken on Monday.

We have had considerable interest in Paul Townsend's Otter Valley Frederick County trout stream since he acquired it more than a year ago—watched with wonder the return in better fishing from the improvements he lavished upon it. Said many months back it was the finest trout water in this section, and have been backed up in that assertion by many of the greatest trout fishermen in the country, who have fished it this season.

We publicized it—drew the attention of Maryland authorities to it so that other streams might be fashioned after it—asked Glenn Leach of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries to look it over (his interest was immediate and experts are studying and testing it now for planting grasses)—in the hope that others may know trouting need not die out with this generation—that what Paul Townsend can do with stream improvement, the judicious use of the "hides" and "diversions," and "culling" to breed fight in hatchery fish, can be done by others.

This week one of the big film companies started shooting on Otter Valley Run for a trout-fishing short in technicolor. With its release now everyone will be able to see "the finest mountain trout stream in the East." We believe also, it will be a means of attracting trout culturists to study it, which in the final analysis will mean "More and Better Fishing."

Bimelech 7-to-5 Preakness Choice Despite Derby Failure

Shorter Run Will Tell Tale Tomorrow

Pimlico Classic 16th Of Mile Less Than Derby; Bradley Colt Expected to Benefit

By a Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 9.—Despite his failure in the Kentucky Derby, Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech probably will march postward the favorite in Saturday's Golden Jubilee Preakness. The consensus of the press box, which took a beating at Louisville last week on everything but Bimelech's odds, is that the Bradleyite will be a 7-to-5 public choice. If the track is not fast, and it was far from that today, Bimelech may be bit longer in price.

The fact that the Preakness is a sixteenth shorter than the Derby, has kindled the hopes of the Bimelech backers. It was in the final 70 yards of the Derby that Gallahadion turned on the heat that jolted the turf world right down to its thin soles. Form students figure that Gallahadion had all the best of racing luck and that Bimelech did have mild excuses. Should this pair have even breaks, the time points to the Bradley colt being first to the wire.

"Experts" Pick Bim

While a majority of the "experts" are sticking to Bimelech, insisting that he will regain prestige, others are looking the field over for something to take care of the son of Black Toney. Strangely, only a few are taking Gallahadion. They still maintain that the Milky Way Stable's victory was a "fluke." But Trainer Roy Waldron, who saddled Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' colt in the Derby, is confident that "Gallie," as he calls him, can repeat his Louisville victory.

It is the opinion of some that a fresh horse, one that was not in the Derby, will take the measure of both Bimelech and Gallahadion. This school is looking to Mrs. George D. Widener's Your Chance, winner of the Survivor Stakes in his first start as a three-year-old.

Gallie Works Out

The track was heavy this morning and only Gallahadion had turned in a workout. The Transmute colt, under a strong grip, was clocked for a mile in 1:49 3-5 after stepping six furlongs in 1.20 3-5. His time was not impressive but his manner was, the colt running straight and true and asking for his head.

The latest predictions on the follow: Bimelech, Pictor, Dit, Royal Man, Mioland, Gallahadion, probable line-up for the Preakness Andy K and Your Chance. Mioland and Andy K were supplementary entries. Jacomar will not start. The colt injured himself in his stall.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEE SEE, $6.60, $4.90, $3.80; HAPPY LARK, $5.90, $4.10; KAMPORT, $13.10.

SEE SEE worked her way to contention approaching stretch, responded to hard riding and wore down HAPPY LARK to win going away. HAPPY LARK assumed command in opening furlong, opened a good lead, but could not resist winner. KAMPORT came with good energy in closing stages. DIN was forward factor from start, but was tiring at close.

SECOND RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place same. Went to post 2:45. Off 2:46. Winner, O. R. Willard's ch. m. (6), by American Flag—Carola. Trained by J. W. Etheridge. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:00⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG SONG, $32.00, $16.80, $10.70; FLYING ZELMA, $52.80, $20.70; CHALOTAUR, $4.80.

FLAG SONG went to contention with bold rush on backstretch, took command over FLYING ZELMA and CHILLY EBBIE, drew clear and was opening a gap at end. FLYING ZELMA was rushed up to set and press pace with CHILLY EBBIE and held on gamely, but was no match for winner. CHALOTAUR was within striking distance from start, but could not menace leaders. PLAYDEMA, off slowly, had speed in spots. HUSTLE HOME raced on inside throughout and showed dull effort.

Daily Double, SEE SEE and FLAG SONG, Paid $208.70

THIRD RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:14½. Off 3:16. Winner, J. H. C. Forbes' b. g. (8), by Buck's Hussar—Another Duchess. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:56. (15 jumps.)

HAREM HONEY	(Penrod)	144	6	6	3½	6	6	6	6	15.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAFFLER, $6.70, $3.50, $2.60; LONE GALLANT, $4.00, $3.20; PROMOTER, $4.00.

BAFFLER, in thick of contention from start while under light restraint, responded willingly when placed to drive and held on with good courage in final flat run. LONE GALLANT, steadied along for 1½ miles while within striking distance, was blocked approaching fifteenth fence, moved up on flat and hung right at end while under punishment. PROMOTER moved up boldly, disposed of SWIMALONG, but weakened suddenly. BUDOS was rated for mile, came to contention gamely and then stopped. SWIMALONG set good pace while fencing well, but could not stay when placed to drive.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:45. Off 3:46. Winner, Mrs. G. O. Russell's b. f. (4), by Sun Charmer—Lady Carol. Trained by R. L. Gheen. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50⅘.

TOP SHELL	(Hamer)	109½	1	1	3½	7½	8	8	8	151.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHARMING MARY, $130.50, $32.10, $11.10; GRACKY, $22.00, $8.80; WAR GRAND, $5.70.

CHARMING MARY worked way to contention on outside, moved up boldly to get to front in midstretch and won going away under strong handling. GRACKY, within striking distance from start, came around horses to get to leaders, but could not resist winner while closing strong. WAR GRAND set good pace, accompanied by RIOTOUS to stretch and weakened gradually to end. GRANDIFLORA was badly outrun for half while kept in heavy going along rail, and came with bold rush through stretch to be going fastest at end.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:15. Off 4:16½. Winner, Mrs. E. H. Augutus' strawberry ro. f. (3), by Gino—Sun Stream. Trained by J. Radnoy. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:15⅘.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
SCORCH	(Ashcroft)	112	6	2	1½½	1½	1½½	1½	1½	$13.25

MISTASSINI	(Neves)	107	5	7	2½	3½½	6½	7	7	8.55

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCORCH, $28.50, $7.30, $3.90; RAISE UP, $3.20, $2.70; DAMAGED GOODS, $3.30.

SCORCH, sent to front at once, opened a good lead in first furlong and was never seriously threatened, but was kept to drive at close. RAISE UP improved position on inside and came with good energy at end. DAMAGED GOODS was pulled up sharply when in close quarters leaving backstretch and closed gamely. TOY FOOT moved up menacingly in midstretch and tired suddenly.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The Carroll Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:47½. Off 4:50. Winner, Wheatley Stable's ch. f. (3), by Diavolo—Romanesque. Trained by G. Tappen. Net value to winner, $2,780; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100. Time, 1:14.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight
WITCHLIKE	(Stout)	108	4	5	3nk	3½	1½½	1½	$15.10

MY ELSIE	(Duncan)	105	3	10	10	10	10	10	25.10

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WITCHLIKE, $32.20, $13.80, $8.40; ARDEN LASS, $15.10, $7.90; TORCH LIGHT, $3.20.

WITCHLIKE, steadied along close up to far turn, responded gamely when placed to drive and had to be kept to pressure to end to stave off closing bid of ARDEN LASS. The latter, outrun in early stages, came wide for racing room, closed full of run and just missed. TORCH LIGHT, slow to begin, came to inside to improve position and closed with bold rush along rail. GLORIOUS TIME went evenly in prominent position and was held safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:15. Off 5:15½. Winner, Liberty Lane Stable's br. g. (7), by Kai-Sang—O Girl. Trained by W. E. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49⅘.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
ALSANG	(F. Smith)	117	4	6	6	6	6	3½	1½	$4.45

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALSANG, $10.90, $5.10, $3.80; COUNT TETRARCH, $4.30, $3.10; SARANITE, $4.00.

ALSANG, kept in middle of track, lacked speed for half, improved position steadily when placed to pressure and wore down COUNT TETRARCH to be opening gap at end. COUNT TETRARCH, rated while well placed for half, overtook SARANITE inside eighth pole, but had nothing left for winner. SARANITE disposed of CAIDON to take command on backstretch, but weakened suddenly when placed to punishment. LONGFUL had no excuses.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:44½. Off 5:45½. Winner, MacThorn Farm's b. g. (5), by New Guinea—mare by Spring of Mint. Trained by C. P. Winfrey. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50⅘.

HOWARD	(McDonald)	120	1	5	Fell					5.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HEAD HUNTER, $24.00, $7.90, $5.80; SHALAKO, $6.80, $5.30; BLACANT, $8.40.

HEAD HUNTER, steadied in early stages, disposed of PENDENCIERO to take lead approaching half pole, drew out and was shaken up in midstretch while holding SHALAKO safe. The latter came to outside for racing room nearing stretch, moved up, but hung at end. BLACANT went evenly. UNFAILING was taken up when HOWARD fell at first turn and rallied mildly in closing test.

Anti-Trust, SEC Threats Delay Exchange Curb

Rule Prohibits Members From Specialist Trade In Other Markets

By the Associated Press

New York, May 9.—With some out-of-town stock exchange officials talking of antitrust action and complaining to the SEC, the New York Stock Exchange is delaying enforcement of its rule prohibiting members from acting as specialists in its listed securities on other exchanges, it developed today.

Nevertheless, it was said at the exchange that it was firmly intended to enforce the rule over a period ample to give out-of-town marts time to adjust themselves to the new situation. The talk of antitrust action and overtures to the SEC, one source close to the exchange said, were regarded as merely part of a campaign "to put on pressure."

The New York market, some Wall streeters said, is following a sort of "appeasement" program in giving representatives of out-of-town exchanges lots of time to discuss the problem. When it was decided to enforce the rule last February 28, the job was turned over to the committee on member firms.

Other Exchanges Are Heard

The committee has been giving heads of out-of-town exchanges an opportunity to appear before it. Day before yesterday, the heads of the Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Boston exchanges held a private meeting with the committee. A few days previously the head of the San Francisco Exchange visited Wall street and discussed the problem with Stock Exchange people.

Yesterday, John E. Yerxa, the Boston Exchange director, conferred with Chairman Frank of the SEC in Washington.

Brokerage circles here understand that not all of the out-of-town exchanges are agreed that the thing to do is to fight the enforcement of the rule. Represenatives of most of the out-of-town exchanges were said to have held a private meeting in Pittsburgh, April 26, to discuss the matter, and while no official statement was made after the meeting, usually well-informed Wall streeters understand there was considerable disagreement as to what policy to pursue, although possibility of antitrust action was understood to have been discussed.

Specialist Business at Issue

Brokerage circles explained that the rule, which has been on the books of the exchange for many years, only prohibits members of this exchange from acting as specialists for other brokers in outside exchanges in securities which are listed here. The rule does not prohibit New York Exchange members from doing a commission business from customers in the outside markets in securities which are also traded here.

Actually, however, partners in New York member firms are doing a good part of specialist business in some outside markets, it was explained, and if they are prohibited from doing this, these markets must find other specialists with adequate capital to perform that function.

Exchange Lists Additional Issues

Associates Investment Co., 38,500 additional shares of common stock upon official notice of issuance in exchange for capital stock of Morris Finance Co, pursuant to agreement of merger.

Boeing Airplane Co., 360,979 additional shares of capital stock upon official notice of issuance pursuant to an offering to stockholders and/or sale to underwriters.

Eastern Air Lines, Inc., 119,914 additional shares of common stock upon official notice of issuance pursuant to an offering to stockholders and/or sale to underwriters.

Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., 772,910 additional shares of common stock and common stock subscription installment receipts upon official notice of issuance pursuant to an offering to stockholders and/or officers, employes or others.

Total Building Falls Below 1939 in Week

By the Associated Press

New York, May 9.—Private engineering construction awards continued their gains this week, topping their respective 1939 values for the sixth consecutive week, Engineering News-Record reported today.

For the week ended Tuesday, private contracts totaled $17,821,000, a gain of 27 per cent over the corresponding period a year ago. The volume, however, was 14 per cent smaller than the previous week.

Total engineering construction awards suffered again from a lag in public contracts, falling 2 per cent below a year ago and 17 per cent under the previous week. Public construction was 13 and 18 per cent lower, respectively, than last year and last week.

Comparisons follow:

	Latest week.	Year ago.
Total	$51,378,000	$52,390,000

Cotton Extends Gains Closing 6 to 12 Higher

New York, May 9 (AP).—Cotton extended recent gains by six to 12 points today in the face of considerable hedge pressure and spot house liquidation.

Professional operators found an incentive for moderate bullishness in drying up of Bombay selling that depressed prices earlier in the week, and a rising stock market. Trade support also was a factor.

The weather report indicated heavy rains west of the Mississippi and particularly in Texas.

Foreign Markets

London, May 9 (AP).—British government bonds, after early weakness, recovered sharply in the stock exchange today on investment buying. The general market was a shade lower in light dealings following hints of government changes, and divided opinion on the progress of the war under Prime Minister Chamberlain. Tobacco and store shares were a little higher, coppers and base metals steady, and industrials slowly traded, but over shares generally there was price heaviness.

Paris—Business on the bourse was small today, with prices uneven as French investors watched London for new clews to Allied political developments. Rubbers and oils held a firm course, but Scandinavian issues again were weaker. Also tilting lower were electrical, steel and coal mining shares, which had been favored recently. Rentes moved without fixed pattern, but the dollar guaranteed issue was up 140 centimes.

Amsterdam—Stocks tended higher in early dealings on the bourse today, although prices slipped later on and were uneven near the close. Sugar shares, however, were slightly improved, and Royal Dutch scored a small advance.

Liverpool—Cotton futures finished 1 to 2 points higher today in small dealings. Many traders preferred to withhold new commitments pending clarification of the political situation. Bombay interests took the scattered offerings.

Harvester Notes Gains In U. S. Trade

Foreign Business Off 10% in Year, McAllister Reports

By the Associated Press

Hoboken, N. J., May 9.—International Harvester Co.'s domestic business in the first half of the fiscal year ended April 30 was 30 per cent larger than a year ago, but foreign business for the same period was down 10 per cent, Sydney G. McAllister, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting today.

Since last October the company's unfilled orders have increased to a level well above a year ago, and the executive said he expected the current rate of improvement to be maintained.

Harvester, he said, has booked no war orders so far. He added that the company's new tractor is going so well it has been difficult to keep up with orders.

U. S. Rubber Dividend

United States Rubber Co. announced directors had declared a regular quarterly dividend of $2 a share on noncumulative preferred stock. The action was taken about a month ahead of normal schedule. Some financial quarters thought the move had significance in light of the $22,000,000 investment of the company in plantations in Dutch Sumatra and British Malaya. The dividend is payable June 21 to holders of record June 7.

American-Hawaiian Lines

The American-Hawaiian Steamship Co. reported today for the March quarter net profits of $1,130,652, or $2.59 a capital share. The total included $701,011 net profit in excess of book value from sale of four ships. The quarter's net income was $429,641, or 98 cents a share. In the first quarter last year net profit was $77,630, equal to 18 cents a share.

Radio-Keith-Orpheum

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiaries reported 1939 net loss of $228,608 after a $400,000 settlement for lease obligations but before provision for dividends of $297,801 accrued on the 7 per cent preferred stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation. In 1938 a net profit of $18,604 was reported.

White Rock

White Rock Mineral Spring Co. March quarter net profit was $34,114, equal to 5 cents a share of common stock compared with $38,927 or 7 cents a share in the like period last year.

Parker Pen

Parker Pen Co. and subsidiaries reported for the fiscal year ended February 29, 1940, consolidated net profits of $170,373 after charges that included $135,693 provision for unrealized loss from conversion of foreign accounts to dollars. This was equal to 86 cents a share and compared with $359,364, or $1.75 a share in the preceding year.

Niagar Hudson Power

Niagara Hudson Power Corporation and subsidiaries, for the three months ended March 31, reported net income of $2,419,763 after charges, equal after preferred dividend requirements to 19 cents a common share. This compared with revised net income of $2,792,957 or 23 cents a common share in the like 1939 period.

Interstate Stores

Interstate Department Stores, Inc., reported April sales totaled $1,993,863 against $2,050,276 in the same month last year, a decrease of 2.7 per cent. Sales for March, which included Easter, ran 7.2 per cent ahead of March, 1939.

Worthington Pump

Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp. reported for the March quarter net profit of $552,805, equal to $1.52 a share on the common stock, compared with net loss of $214,490 in the first quarter last year. Plants are in New York, New Jersey, Ohio and Massachusetts.

Schick Dry Shaver

April sales of dry shavers by Schick Dry Shaver, Inc., were 360 per cent above those for the corresponding month last year and the company's business for the first four months of 1940 represented an increase of approximately 170 per cent over the similar period of 1939, it was announced by Kenneth C. Gifford, general sales manager.

Brokers' Loans Rise $1,000,000, Board Reports

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $477,000,000. The week ended yesterday and the total represented an increase of $1,000,000 when compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $517,000,000.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended May 8 member bank reserve balances increased $7,000,000. Increases in member bank reserves arose from increases of $64,000,000 in gold stock, $7,000,000 in reserve bank credit and $4,000,000 in Treasury currency, offset in part by increases of $19,000,000 in money in circulation, $16,000,000 in Treasury cash, $22,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $9,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Excess reserves of members banks on May 8 were estimated to be approximately $6,130,000,000, an increase of $20,000,000 for the week."

Emery Opposes Governmental Control in Speech to Bankers

Public and Municipal Financial Questions Are Discussed at Mutual Savings Meeting; N. A. M. Counsel Calls for Private Enterprise

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, May 9.—Preservation of free enterprise, public financial and municipal issue questions today were discussed by delegates to the twentieth conference of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, along with consideration of the real estate outlook.

James A. Emery, general counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers, opposed "a politically planned economy of master Federal authority and subordinated individualism" in addressing the meeting.

John S. Clark, vice president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, considered as a ray of hope in "a world that appears today to be insane," the fact that the individual citizen is now becoming better informed.

Pathway to Recovery

Emery discussed the pathway to recovery while Clark spoke on public financing, trends and consequences in the two major addresses of the second day of the conference. Other speakers included:

Lyle H. Olson, vice president of The American Appraisal Co., New York, on real estate valuations; William Parker Straw, president of the Amoskeag Savings Bank, Manchester, N. H., on how banks could help in building homes; Clarence B. Plantz, officer of the New York Savings Bank, predicting a rapid growth for mutual savings bank life insurance

Emory said, if one group of Americans continue to demand and support private enterprise and free economy, as it has been traditionally understood and developed, and another believes we must now accept a politically planned economy of master Federal authority and subordinated individualism, or a third is imbued with facism, or a fourth is stealthily spreading communism, we cannot be what we were and must continue to be, a coperative commonwealth in thought and action.

Business' Doubts Cited

"American industry is doing and will continue to do its utmost to expand operations, maintain and multiply jobs. But there are doubts and uncertainties which are definite obstacles to the effort."

Clark, discussing the municipal outlook, said "is there need generally for further municipal improvement that might give rise to the issuance of bonds? The answer is very definitely 'Yes.' Highways built in the 20's in many instances are obsolete. Superhighways, traffic separation, new bridges, would add immeasurably to the comfort and convenience and profit of the taxpayers. School buildings 50 to 75 years of age should be replaced in thousands of communities. There is general need for improvement and extension of facilities in almost every community."

Olson said "real estate is slowly recovering from a decade ago, during which losses resulting from real estate investment was one of our major economic tragedies.

Straw, emphasized ways in which a bank may encourage home building, said the average customer knows little of construction and should be assisted in this phase and in planning a home.

Favorable Business News Increases List; Steels and Aircraft Lead Moderate Rise; Bonds Firm, Foreign Issues Show Advance

New York, May 9.—Steels and some of the other shares which have been speculative favorites from the war angle led a moderate rise in the stock market today with turnover at the highest level since May 3.

Foreign bonds generally were steadier while domestic corporate issues were inclined to firm. In the foreign exchange section belgas were lower on fears that Germany's next invasion will have Belgium or Holland as an objective.

Business News Favorable

Business news was favorable to sentiment. Carloadings were better than most had expected, 3.3 per cent higher than for the previous week and 16.3 per cent better than a year ago.

Curtiss-Wright ran far in front as the most active issue. Lockheed, Boeing and Curtiss-Wright A also were included in the 15 most active roster, all at improved quotations.

Some of the oils were traded quite actively, including Pure, Socony-Vacuum and Standard of New Jersey. Vanadium, Bethlehem and U. S. Steel common were the most prominent of the steel shares. American Locomotive preferred ran up 3 points at one time. Commercial Investment Trust, Dome Mines, Interchemical Corporation, Lee Rubber and Outlet preferred made new lows.

On whether there is anything in the immediate future which could produce general and sustained improvement in stock prices, brokers are in agreement that such stimulus could be found in real hope for a Republican victory this fall.

Bonds Remain Firm

Listed bonds were firm all round in a quiet session today. Turnover was $6,830,000, indicating that traders and investors still are taking little real interest. The foreign section advanced. Australians rallied 2 to 4 points and Canadians were fractionally better. Small fractional advances were the rule among United States Treasury obligations. Highest rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were quiet and steady.

Great Northern Business Gains

St. Paul, May 9 (AP).—Business of the Great Northern Railway thus far this year is 10 per cent ahead of the same period in 1939, Frank J. Gavin, president, reported today to the annual meeting of stockholders of the road. He said he anticipated an iron ore movement for 1940 of approximately 14,500,000 tons, compared with 13,250,000 for 1939.

Gavin reported that in the 5 years preceding January 1, 1940, the road made a net saving of $14,304,684 in interest charges by refunding much of its bonded debt but of that $10,064,658 had been eaten up by increases in taxes.

W. L. McKnight, of St. Paul, was elected a director of the road and three others, Shreve M. Arthur, of St. Paul; Vincent Astor, of New York, and Frank F. Henry, of Buffalo, were reelected.

Grains Fail In Attempt At Rally

Good Weather, Heavy Marketings, Increased Selling are Factors

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 9.—Grain prices made a futile attempt to rally today, but backed down in the face of favorable weather, heavy wheat marketings and increased country selling of corn.

The short-lived advance was led by corn following announcement that the Government has extended its export subsidy program to include that commodity. Corn quotations rose a cent or more from early lows to net overnight gains of ⅜@¾ cent, reaching the best levels recorded here since late in 1937, but closed unchanged to ½ lower compared with yesterday.

Profit taking and selling associated with booking of 102,000 bushels to arrive from the country contributed to the late reaction, although shippers sold 100,000 bushels to outside industries. May corn closed at 66½@66⅝ and July at 67⅛.

Wheat was up ¼ to ⅝ cent at one stage, but closed ⅛ to ½ cent lower than yesterday; May, 1.05¼@1.05¾; July, 1.04⅝@1.04½. Oats closed ⅜ to ½ cent lower; rye, ¼ to ½ cent higher; soy beans, ½ to ¾ cent lower and lard unchanged to 3 cents higher.

Rosenberg Honors Staff With Dinner

M. D. Rosenberg, president of the Bank of Commerce & Savings, entertained the officers, directors and members of the operating staff at Congressional Country Club Wednesday night.

Rosenberg, who has been president of the bank since its inception, following dinner, reviewed the progress of the institution.

He called attention to the steady growth in deposits and the earning record of the bank, as well as the expansion of loans in recent months.

The Bank of Commerce & Savings' main office is located at Seventh and E streets northwest and maintains a branch at North Capitol and H streets. The bank was organized in 1907 and in addition to Mr. Rosenberg, Joseph Sanders, A. S. Gatley and Dr. C. A. Weaver are directors who constituted a part of the original board.

Bank Clearings Down in Week, Up From 1939

All Outside Centers Show Gain Except At San Francisco

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, May 9.—Bank clearings in 22 leading cities during the week ended May 8 declined slightly from the preceding week but expanded sharply over the corresponding 1939 week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The latest total of $5,306,190,000 represented a gain of 11.6 per cent over $4,755,463,000 in the 1939 week but was $67,514,000 less than the preceding period.

Except for a 3.6 per cent decrease at San Francisco, all outside centers rose above last year. Prominent were: Detroit up 35.8 per cent; Pittsburgh, 32.7; Baltimore, 22.8 to $76,131,000; Portland, Oreg., 22.7; Buffalo, 22.3; Cleveland, 19.8; Atlanta, 19.3; Cincinnati, 18.8

Richmond volume rose 11.6 per cent to $39,380,000.

Scovill Plans Refunding Issue

New York, May 9.—(AP).—Scovill Manufacturing Co. has advised stockholders of a plan to refund its outstanding 5½ per cent debentures due in 1945 with a new issue of $8,375,000 convertible debentures bearing a lower coupon rate and longer maturity.

Stockholders will have prior rights to subscribe to the new debentures, which will be underwritten by Morgan Stanley & Co. Present plans call for the new issue to be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission on May 22, following a stockholders meeting.

Copper Declines

New York, May 9 (AP).—Engineering and Mining Journal said today that the average price of copper, net, at Atlantic seaboard refineries (about .225 cents under Connecticut Valley) declined during the week ended yesterday to 10.883 cents a pound compared with 11.025 cents the previous week.

Bimelech 7-to-5 Preakness Choice Despite Derby Failure

Shorter Run Will Tell Tale Tomorrow

By a Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 9.—Despite his failure in the Kentucky Derby, Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech probably will march postward the favorite in Saturday's Golden Jubilee Preakness. The consensus of the press box, which took a beating at Louisville last week on everything but Bimelech's odds, is that the Bradleyite will be a 7-to-5 public choice. If the track is not fast, and it was far from that today, Bimelech may be bit longer in price.

The fact that the Preakness is a sixteenth shorter than the Derby, has kindled the hopes of the Bimelech backers. It was in the final 70 yards of the Derby that Gallahadion turned on the heat that jolted the turf world right down to its thin soles. Form students figure that Gallahadion had all the best of racing luck and that Bimelech did have mild excuses. Should this pair have even breaks, the time points to the Bradley colt being first to the wire.

"Experts" Pick Bim

While a majority of the "experts" are sticking to Bimelech, insisting that he will regain prestige, others are looking the field over for something to take care of the son of Black Toney. Strangely, only a few are taking Gallahadion. They still maintain that the Milky Way Stable's victory was a "fluke." But Trainer Roy Waldron, who saddled Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' colt in the Derby, is confident that "Gallie," as he calls him, can repeat his Louisville victory.

It is the opinion of some that a fresh horse, one that was not in the Derby, will take the measure of both Bimelech and Gallahadion. This school is looking to Mrs. George D. Widener's Your Chance, winner of the Survivor Stakes in his first start as a three-year-old.

Gallie Works Out

The track was heavy this morning and only Gallahadion had turned in a workout. The Transmute colt, under a strong grip, was clocked for a mile in 1:49 3-5 after stepping six furlongs in 1.20 3-5. His time was not impressive but his manner was, the colt running straight and true and asking for his head.

The latest predictions on the follow: Bimelech, Pictor, Dit, Royal Man, Mioland, Gallahadion, probable line-up for the Preakness Andy K and Your Chance. Mioland and Andy K were supplementary entries. Jacomar will not start. The colt injured himself in his stall.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG SONG, $32.00, $16.80, $10.70; FLYING ZELMA, $52.80, $20.70; CHALOTAUR, $4.80.

FLAG SONG went to contention with bold rush on backstretch, took command over FLYING ZELMA and CHILLY EBBIE, drew clear and was opening a gap at end. FLYING ZELMA was rushed up to set and press pace with CHILLY EBBIE and held on gamely, but was no match for winner. CHALOTAUR was within striking distance from start, but could not menace leaders. PLAYDEMA, off slowly, had speed in spots. HUSTLE HOME raced on inside throughout and showed dull effort.

Daily Double, SEE SEE and FLAG SONG, Paid $208.70

THIRD RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:14½. Off 3:16. Winner, J. H. C. Forbes' b. g. (8), by Buck's Hussar—Another Duchess. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:56. (15 jumps.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAFFLER, $6.70, $3.50, $2.60; LONE GALLANT, $4.00, $3.20; PROMOTER, $4.00.

BAFFLER, in thick of contention from start while under light restraint, responded willingly when placed to drive and held on with good courage in final flat run. LONE GALLANT, steadied along for 1½ miles while within striking distance, was blocked approaching fifteenth fence, moved up on flat and hung right at end while under punishment. PROMOTER moved up boldly, disposed of SWIMALONG, but weakened suddenly. BUDOS was rated for mile, came to contention gamely and then stopped. SWIMALONG set good pace while fencing well, but could not stay when placed to drive.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:45. Off 3:46. Winner, Mrs. G. O. Russell's b. f. (4), by Sun Charmer—Lady Carol. Trained by R. L. Gheen. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHARMING MARY, $130.80, $32.10, $11.10; GRACKY, $22.00, $8.80; WAR GRAND, $5.70.

CHARMING MARY worked way to contention on outside, moved up boldly to get to front in midstretch and won going away under strong handling. GRACKY, within striking distance from start, came around horses to set to leaders, but could not resist winner while closing strong. WAR GRAND set good pace, accompanied by RIOTOUS to stretch and weakened gradually to end. GRANDIFLORA was badly outrun for half while kept in heavy going along rail, and came with bold rush through stretch to be going fastest at end.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:15. Off 4:16½. Winner, Mrs. E. H. Augutus' strawberry ro. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCORCH, $26.50, $7.30, $3.90; RAISE UP, $3.20, $2.70; DAMAGED GOODS, $3.20.

SCORCH, sent to front at once, opened a good lead in first furlong and was never seriously threatened, but was kept to drive at close. RAISE UP improved position on inside and came with good energy at end. DAMAGED GOODS was pulled up sharply when in close quarters leaving backstretch and closed gamely. TOY FOOT moved up menacingly in midstretch and tired suddenly.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The Carroll Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:47½. Off 4:50. Winner, Wheatley Stable's ch. f. (3), by Diavolo—Romanesque II. Trained by O. Tappen. Net value to winner, $2,760; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100. Time, 1:14.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WITCHLIKE, $32.20, $13.80, $8.40; ARDEN LASS, $15.10, $7.90; TORCH LIGHT, $3.20.

WITCHLIKE, steadied along close up to far turn, responded gamely when placed to drive and had to be kept to pressure to end to stave off closing bid of ARDEN LASS. The latter, outrun in early stages, came wide for racing room, closed full of run and just missed. TORCH LIGHT, slow to begin, came to inside to improve position and closed with bold rush along rail. GLORIOUS TIME went evenly in prominent position and was held safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:15. Off 5:15½. Winner, Liberty Lane Stable's br. g. (7), by Kai-Sang—O Girl. Trained by W. E. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49⅕.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALSANG, $10.90, $5.10, $3.80; COUNT TETRARCH, $4.30, $3.10; SARANITE, $4.00.

ALSANG, kept in middle of track, lacked speed for half, improved position steadily when placed to pressure and wore down COUNT TETRARCH to be opening gap at end. COUNT TETRARCH, rated while well placed for half, overtook SARANITE inside eighth pole, but had nothing left for winner. SARANITE disposed of CAIDON to take command on backstretch, but weakened suddenly when placed to punishment. LONGFUL had no excuses.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:44½. Off 5:45½. Winner, MacThorn Farm's b. g. (8), by New Guinea—mare by Sprig of Mint. Trained by C. P. Winfrey. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HEAD HUNTER, $24.00, $7.90, $5.80; SHALAKO, $6.80, $5.30; BLACANT, $8.40.

HEAD HUNTER, steadied in early stages, disposed of PENDENCIERO to take lead approaching half pole, drew out and was shaken up in midstretch while holding SHALAKO safe. The latter came to outside for racing room nearing stretch, moved up, but hung at end. BLACANT went evenly. UNFAILING was taken up when HOWARD fell at first turn and rallied mildly in closing test.

Anti-Trust, SEC Threats Delay Exchange Curb

By the Associated Press

New York, May 9.—With some out-of-town stock exchange officials talking of antitrust action and complaining to the SEC, the New York Stock Exchange is delaying enforcement of its rule prohibiting members from acting as specialists in its listed securities on other exchanges, it developed today.

Nevertheless, it was said at the exchange that it was firmly intended to enforce the rule over a period ample to give out-of-town marts time to adjust themselves to the new situation. The talk of antitrust action and overtures to the SEC, one source close to the exchange said, were regarded as merely part of a campaign "to put on pressure."

The New York market, some Wall streeters said, is following a sort of "appeasement" program in giving representatives of out-of-town exchanges lots of time to discuss the problem. When it was decided to enforce the rule last February 28, the job was turned over to the committee on member firms.

Other Exchanges Are Heard

The committee has been giving heads of out-of-town exchanges an opportunity to appear before it. Day before yesterday, the heads of the Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Boston exchanges held a private meeting with the committee. A few days previously the head of the San Francisco Exchange visited Wall street and discussed the problem with Stock Exchange people.

Yesterday, John E. Yerxa, the Boston Exchange director, conferred with Chairman Frank of the SEC in Washington.

Brokerage circles here understand that not all of the out-of-town exchanges are agreed that the thing to do is to fight the enforcement of the rule. Represenatives of most of the out-of-town exchanges were said to have held a private meeting in Pittsburgh, April 26, to discuss the matter, and while no official statement was made after the meeting, usually well-informed Wall streeters understand there was considerable disagreement as to what policy to pursue, although possibility of antitrust action was understood to have been discussed.

Specialist Business at Issue

Brokerage circles explained that the rule, which has been on the books of the exchange for many years, only prohibits members of this exchange from acting as specialists for other brokers in outside exchanges in securities which are listed here. The rule does not prohibit New York Exchange members from doing a commission business from customers in the outside markets in securities which are also traded here.

Actually, however, partners in New York member firms are doing a good part of specialist business in some outside markets, it was explained, and if they are prohibited from doing this, these markets must find other specialists with adequate capital to perform that function.

Exchange Lists Additional Issues

Additional issues of companies with shares previously listed on the big board were authorized for listing yesterday by the New York Stock Exchange as follows:

Associates Investment Co., 38,500 additional shares of common stock upon official notice of issuance in exchange for capital stock of Morris Finance Co, pursuant to agreement of merger.

Boeing Airplane Co., 360,979 additional shares of capital stock upon official notice of issuance pursuant to an offering to stockholders and/or sale to underwriters.

Eastern Air Lines, Inc., 119,914 additional shares of common stock upon official notice of issuance pursuant to an offering to stockholders and/or sale to underwriters.

Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., 772,910 additional shares of common stock and common stock subscription installment receipts upon official notice of issuance pursuant to an offering to stockholders and/or officers, employes or others.

United Biscuit Co. of America, $7,000,000 3½% debentures, due April 1, 1955, which are issued and outstanding.

Anchor Hocking Glass Corporation, 1,000 shares of $5 dividend preferred stock upon official notice of issuance in exchange for common stock of the Standard Glass Manufacturing Co.

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, 128,170 shares of 6% (cumulative convertible) preferred stock, $100 par value; 2,753,053 shares of common stock, $1 par value, all of which are issued and outstanding; 1,025,360 additional shares of common stock upon conversion of 6% preferred stock; 2,559,573 additional shares of common stock upon exercise of option warrants; 147 additional shares of common stock upon official notice of issuance pursuant to plan of reorganization.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, May 9 (AP).—Increased hog receipts weakened the market today and prices dropped 10 to 25 cents. Yearlings and light steers were strong to a shade higher and lambs around steady in slow trade. Hog receipts in the open market totaled 13,000 and were 2,000 more than advance estimates. Receipts in the principal Corn Belt market were 74,400, compared with 61,300 yesterday and 60,900 a week ago. The market here topped at $5.90, with late trade mostly 15 to 25 cents down. Best weighty steers topped at $11.35, but nothing strictly choice was available, and the market was largely from $8.75 to $10.50. A few good wooled lambs sold from $10 to $10.25 and good clippers from $9.00 to $9.25.

(U. S. Dept. Agr.)—SALABLE HOGS—Receipts, 13,000; total, 19,000; slow; open 10-20 lower than Wednesday's average; later trade mostly 15-25 lower; most off on 240 lbs. and down; sows 10-20 lower; good and choice, 180-270 lbs., mostly 5.65@5.85; top, 5.90; 270-350 lbs., 5.30@5.70; good, 400-550 lbs. sows, 4.60@5.00, few lighter weights to 5.25 and above.

Total Building Falls Below 1939 in Week

By the Associated Press

New York, May 9.—Private engineering construction awards continued their gains this week, topping their respective 1939 values for the sixth consecutive week, Engineering News-Record reported today.

For the week ended Tuesday, private contracts totaled $17,821,000, a gain of 27 per cent over the corresponding period a year ago. The volume, however, was 14 per cent smaller than the previous week.

Total engineering construction awards suffered again from a lag in public contracts, falling 2 per cent below a year ago and 17 per cent under the previous week. Public construction was 13 and 18 per cent lower, respectively, than last year and last week.

Comparisons follow:

	Latest week.	Year ago.
Total	$51,378,000	$52,390,000
Private	17,821,000	13,988,000

Cotton Extends Gains Closing 6 to 12 Higher

New York, May 9 (AP).—Cotton extended recent gains by six to 12 points today in the face of considerable hedge pressure and spot house liquidation.

Professional operators found an incentive for moderate bullishness in drying up of Bombay selling that depressed prices earlier in the week, and a rising stock market. Trade support also was a factor.

The weather report indicated heavy rains west of the Mississippi and particularly in Texas.

Foreign Markets

London, May 9 (AP).—British government bonds, after early weakness, recovered sharply in the stock exchange today on investment buying. The general market was a shade lower in light dealings following hints of government changes, and divided opinion on the progress of the war under Prime Minister Chamberlain. Tobacco and store shares were a little higher, coppers and base metals steady, and industrials slowly traded, but over shares generally there was price heaviness.

Paris—Business on the bourse was small today, with prices uneven as French investors watched London for new clews to Allied political developments. Rubbers and oils held a firm course, but Scandinavian issues again were weaker. Also tilting lower were electrical, steel and coal mining shares, which had been favored recently. Rentes moved without fixed pattern, but the dollar guaranteed issue was up 140 centimes.

Amsterdam—Stocks tended higher in early dealings on the bourse today, although prices slipped later on and were uneven near the close. Sugar shares, however, were slightly improved, and Royal Dutch scored a small advance.

Liverpool—Cotton futures finished 1 to 2 points higher today in small dealings. Many traders preferred to withhold new commitments pending clarification of the political situation. Bombay interests took the scattered offerings.

Harvester Notes Gains In U. S. Trade

By the Associated Press

Hoboken, N. J., May 9.—International Harvester Co.'s domestic business in the first half of the fiscal year ended April 30 was 30 per cent larger than a year ago, but foreign business for the same period was down 10 per cent, Sydney G. McAllister, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting today.

Since last October the company's unfilled orders have increased to a level well above a year ago, and the executive said he expected the current rate of improvement to be maintained.

Harvester, he said, has booked no war orders so far. He added that the company's new tractor is going so well it has been difficult to keep up with orders.

U. S. Rubber Dividend

United States Rubber Co. announced directors had declared a regular quarterly dividend of $2 a share on noncumulative preferred stock. The action was taken about a month ahead of normal schedule. Some financial quarters thought the move had significance in light of the $22,000,000 investment of the company in plantations in Dutch Sumatra and British Malaya. The dividend is payable June 21 to holders of record June 7.

American-Hawaiian Lines

The American-Hawaiian Steamship Co. reported today for the March quarter net profits of $1,130,652, or $2.59 a capital share. The total included $701,011 net profit in excess of book value from sale of four ships. The quarter's net income was $429,641, or 98 cents a share. In the first quarter last year net profit was $77,630, equal to 18 cents a share.

Radio-Keith-Orpheum

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiaries reported 1939 net loss of $228,608 after a $400,000 settlement for lease obligations but before provision for dividends of $297,801 accrued on the 7 per cent preferred stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation. In 1938 a net profit of $18,604 was reported.

White Rock

White Rock Mineral Spring Co. March quarter net profit was $34,114, equal to 5 cents a share of common stock compared with $38,927 or 7 cents a share in the like period last year.

Parker Pen

Parker Pen Co. and subsidiaries reported for the fiscal year ended February 29, 1940, consolidated net profits of $170,373 after charges that included $135,693 provision for unrealized loss from conversion of foreign accounts to dollars. This was equal to 86 cents a share and compared with $359,364, or $1.75 a share in the preceding year.

Niagar Hudson Power

Niagara Hudson Power Corporation and subsidiaries, for the three months ended March 31, reported net income of $2,419,763 after charges, equal after preferred dividend requirements to 19 cents a common share. This compared with revised net income of $2,792,957 or 23 cents a common share in the like 1939 period.

Interstate Stores

Interstate Department Stores, Inc., reported April sales totaled $1,993,863 against $2,050,276 in the same month last year, a decrease of 2.7 per cent. Sales for March, which included Easter, ran 7.2 per cent ahead of March, 1939.

Worthington Pump

Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp. reported for the March quarter net profit of $552,805, equal to $1.52 a share on the common stock, compared with net loss of $214,490 in the first quarter last year. Plants are in New York, New Jersey, Ohio and Massachusetts.

Schick Dry Shaver

April sales of dry shavers by Schick Dry Shaver, Inc., were 360 per cent above those for the corresponding month last year and the company's business for the first four months of 1940 represented an increase of approximately 170 per cent over the similar period of 1939, it was announced by Kenneth C. Gifford, general sales manager.

Brokers' Loans Rise $1,000,000, Board Reports

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $477,000,000. The week ended yesterday and the total represented an increase of $1,000,000 when compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $517,000,000.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended May 8 member bank reserve balances increased $7,000,000. Increases in member bank reserves arose from increases of $64,000,000 in gold stock, $7,000,000 in reserve bank credit and $4,000,000 in Treasury currency, offset in part by increases of $19,000,000 in money in circulation, $16,000,000 in Treasury cash, $22,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $9,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Excess reserves of members banks on May 8 were estimated to be approximately $6,130,000,000, an increase of $20,000,000 for the week."

Emery Opposes Governmental Control in Speech to Bankers

Public and Municipal Financial Questions Are Discussed at Mutual Savings Meeting; N. A. M. Counsel Calls for Private Enterprise

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, May 9.—Preservation of free enterprise, public financial and municipal issue questions today were discussed by delegates to the twentieth conference of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, along with consideration of the real estate outlook.

James A. Emery, general counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers, opposed "a politically planned economy of master Federal authority and subordinated individualism" in addressing the meeting.

John S. Clark, vice president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, considered as a ray of hope in "a world that appears today to be insane," the fact that the individual citizen is now becoming better informed.

Pathway to Recovery

Emery discussed the pathway to recovery while Clark spoke on public financing, trends and consequences in the two major addresses of the second day of the conference. Other speakers included:

Lyle H. Olson, vice president of The American Appraisal Co., New York, on real estate valuations; William Parker Straw, president of the Amoskeag Savings Bank, Manchester, N. H., on how banks could help in building homes; Clarence B. Plantz, officer of the New York Savings Bank, predicting a rapid growth for mutual savings bank life insurance.

Emory said, if one group of Americans continue to demand and support private enterprise and free economy, as it has been traditionally understood and developed, and another believes we must now accept a politically planned economy of master Federal authority and subordinated individualism, or a third is stealthily spreading communism, we cannot be what we were and must continue to be, a coperative commonwealth in thought and action.

Business' Doubts Cited

"American industry is doing and will continue to do its utmost to expand operations, maintain and multiply jobs. But there are doubts and uncertainties which are definite obstacles to the effort."

Clark, discussing the municipal outlook, said "is there need generally for further municipal improvement that might give rise to the issuance of bonds? The answer is very definitely 'Yes.' Highways built in the 20's in many instances are obsolete. Superhighways, traffic separation, new bridges, would add immeasurably to the comfort and convenience and profit of the taxpayers. School buildings 50 to 75 years of age should be replaced in thousands of communities. There is general need for improvement and extension of facilities in almost every community."

Olson said "real estate is slowly recovering from a decade ago, during which losses resulting from real estate investment was one of our major economic tragedies.

Straw, emphasized ways in which a bank may encourage home building, said the average customer knows little of construction and should be assisted in this phase and in planning a home.

Favorable Business News Increases List; Steels and Aircraft Lead Moderate Rise; Bonds Firm, Foreign Issues Show Advance

New York, May 9.—Steels and some of the other shares which have been speculative favorites from the war angle led a moderate rise in the stock market today with turnover at the highest level since May 3.

Foreign bonds generally were steadier while domestic corporate issues were inclined to firm. In the foreign exchange section belgas were lower on fears that Germany's next invasion will have Belgium or Holland as an objective.

Business News Favorable

Stocks which showed the widest gains included steels, aircrafts, motor, farm equipment, machine tools and some of the shipping shares.

Business news was favorable to sentiment. Carloadings were better than most had expected, 3.3 per cent higher than for the previous week and 16.3 per cent better than a year ago.

Curtiss-Wright ran far in front as the most active issue. Lockheed, Boeing and Curtiss-Wright A also were included in the 15 most active roster, all at improved quotations.

Some of the oils were traded quite actively, including Pure, Socony-Vacuum and Standard of New Jersey. Vanadium, Bethlehem and U. S. Steel common were the most prominent of the steel shares. American Locomotive preferred ran up 3 points at one time. Commercial Investment Trust, Dome Mines, Interchemical Corporation, Lee Rubber and Outlet preferred made new lows.

On whether there is anything in the immediate future which could produce general and sustained improvement in stock prices, brokers are in agreement that such stimulus could be found in real hope for a Republican victory this fall.

Bonds Remain Firm

Listed bonds were firm all round in a quiet session today. Turnover was $6,830,000, indicating that traders and investors still are taking little real interest. The foreign section advanced. Australians rallied 2 to 4 points and Canadians were fractionally better. Small fractional advances were the rule among United States Treasury obligations. Highest rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were quiet and steady.

Southern Railway Orders 75 70-Ton Cars

Atlanta, Ga., May 9.—Robert B. Pegram, vice president at Atlanta, announces today that Southern Railway System has ordered 75 70-ton, all-steel, covered hopper cars for loading bulk cement, to be built by the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing Co., at Bessemer, Ala., to cost in the neighborhood of $275,000.

Bank of France

Paris, May 9 (AP).—Bank of France statement as of May 3 showed (in millions of francs): Gold reserve 84,615, unchanged; balances abroad 66, decrease 2; discounted commercial bills, France, 3,605, decrease 164; negotiable bills bought in France 7,289, decrease 9; advances against securities 3,311, increase 100; 30-day advances against government securities 971, increase 743; temporary advances to state 21,600, increase 700; circulation 158,944, increase 2,639; total credit to current accounts 14,721, decrease 1,132. Ratio of gold to sight liabilities, 48.72 per cent, compared with 49.16 last week. Bank rate 2 per cent.

Great Northern Business Gains

St. Paul, May 9 (AP).—Business of the Great Northern Railway thus far this year is 10 per cent ahead of the same period in 1939, Frank J. Gavin, president, reported today to the annual meeting of stockholders of the road. He said he anticipated an iron ore movement for 1940 of approximately 14,500,000 tons, compared with 13,250,000 for 1939.

Gavin reported that in the 5 years preceding January 1, 1940, the road made a net saving of $14,304,684 in interest charges by refunding much of its bonded debt but of that $10,064,658 had been eaten up by increases in taxes.

W. L. McKnight, of St. Paul, was elected a director of the road and three others, Shreve M. Arthur, of St. Paul; Vincent Astor, of New York, and Frank F. Henry, of Buffalo, were reelected.

Grains Fail In Attempt At Rally

Good Weather, Heavy Marketings, Increased Selling are Factors

By The Associated Press

Chicago, May 9.—Grain prices made a futile attempt to rally today, but backed down in the face of favorable weather, heavy wheat marketings and increased country selling of corn.

The short-lived advance was led by corn following announcement that the Government has extended its export subsidy program to include that commodity. Corn quotations rose a cent or more from early lows to net overnight gains of ¾@¾ cent, reaching the best levels recorded here since late in 1937, but closed unchanged to ½ lower compared with yesterday.

Profit taking and selling associated with booking of 102,000 bushels to arrive from the country contributed to the late reaction, although shippers sold 100,000 bushels to outside industries. May corn closed at 66½@66⅝ and July at 67⅛.

Wheat was up ¼ to ⅝ cent at one stage, but closed ⅛ to ½ cent lower than yesterday; May, 1.05⅝@1.05¾; July, 1.04⅝@1.04½. Oats closed ⅛ to ½ cent lower; rye, ¼ to ½ cent higher; soy beans, ½ to ¾ cent lower and lard unchanged to 3 cents higher.

Rosenberg Honors Staff With Dinner

M. D. Rosenberg, president of the Bank of Commerce & Savings, entertained the officers, directors and members of the operating staff at Congressional Country Club Wednesday night.

Rosenberg, who has been president of the bank since its inception, following dinner, reviewed the progress of the institution.

He called attention to the steady growth in deposits and the earning record of the bank, as well as the expansion of loans in recent months.

The Bank of Commerce & Savings' main office is located at Seventh and E streets northwest and maintains a branch at North Capitol and H streets. The bank was organized in 1907 and in addition to Mr. Rosenberg, Joseph Sanders, A. S. Gatley and Dr. C. A. Weaver are directors who constituted a part of the original board.

Bank Clearings Down in Week, Up From 1939

All Outside Centers Show Gain Except At San Francisco

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, May 9.—Bank clearings in 22 leading cities during the week ended May 8 declined slightly from the preceding week but expanded sharply over the corresponding 1939 week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The latest total of $5,306,190,000 represented a gain of 11.6 per cent over $4,755,463,000 in the 1939 week but was $67,514,000 less than the preceding period.

New York turnover amounted to $3,120,714,000, an 8 per cent gain over $2,889,581,000 a year ago.

Check clearances at outside cities rose 17.1 per cent to $2,185,476,000 from $1,865,882,000 in the like 1939 week.

Except for a 3.6 per cent decrease at San Francisco, all outside centers rose above last year. Prominent were: Detroit up 35.8 per cent; Pittsburgh, 32.7; Baltimore, 22.8 to $76,131,000; Portland, Oreg., 22.7; Buffalo, 22.3; Cleveland, 19.8; Atlanta, 19.3; Cincinnati, 18.8

Richmond volume rose 11.6 per cent to $39,380,000.

Scovill Plans Refunding Issue

New York, May 9.—(AP).—Scovill Manufacturing Co. has advised stockholders of a plan to refund its outstanding 5½ per cent debentures due in 1945 with a new issue of $8,375,000 convertible debentures bearing a lower coupon rate and longer maturity.

Stockholders will have prior rights to subscribe to the new debentures, which will be underwritten by Morgan Stanley & Co. Present plans call for the new issue to be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission on May 22, following a stockholders meeting.

Copper Declines

New York, May 9 (AP).—Engineering and Mining Journal said today that the average price of copper, net, at Atlantic seaboard refineries (about .225 cents under Connecticut Valley) declined during the week ended yesterday to 10.883 cents a pound compared with 11.025 cents the previous week.

IT'S Straw Hat Time
IN WASHINGTON

Today's straws win in a breeze! Their tropical weaves are comfortably cool. Their flaring brims and smartly shaped crowns are pleasingly smart. Colorful bands and pugarees add further stylish note to this soft, sensible hat. Visit any of the stores whose advertisement you find in The Washington Post for a complete selection. You're sure to find the style, in the weave and color which flatters you most.

1 Meal— 5 Cents

MARY K. GORMAN, secretary of the first National Women's Conference on Unemployment, sits down to the "nickel" meal, the same menu to be served Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at the conference banquet in Washington next week. The meal is intended as a sample of those being served by millions of women on relief budgets. This one: Small cup of beef stew, two potatoes, square of oleomargarine, cup of coffee with canned cream and stewed prune

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

ADVERTISEMENT

Listen! with Slocum

Lee Vickers, one of the bright young men on the WJSV announcing staff, is currently conducting an interesting experiment in the wee hours of the morning. Lee is attempting to find out just how far our brand new 50,000-watt transmitter throws the voice of WJSV.

He has been conducting this experiment just a few days, and even at this early point it looks like we really get around over here. Lee runs a record show, called "Your Favorite Bands" and it is heard from 1:00 to 2:00 a. m.

He invites listeners from other parts of the country to phone, wire, or write for their favorite songs. He has had innumerable answers, but some of the more interesting phone calls have come from Halifax, Novia Scotia; West Palm Beach and Miami Beach, Florida; three towns in Maine; Schnectady and Syracuse in New York as well as the famous brickyard on the Hudson; Atlanta, Georgia; Providence, Rhode Island; San Antonio, Texas; Detroit, Michigan; Akron, Ohio; and Chicago.

Mind you, WJSV gets into many other distant towns, but people in these cities named above had sufficient interest in Lee's experiment to finance telephone calls to WJSV. There wouldn't be much point to anybody in this area phoning, but the Vickers promenade from 1:00 to 2:00 presents some excellent late dance music.

A multiple blessed event—100 baby pheasants from an incubator—is awaited by Al Pearce of Columbia's "Al Pearce and His Gang." Al breeds several varieties of wild fowl, chickens and turkeys . . . An avid baseball fan and a director of the Hollywood Baseball Club, Cecil B. DeMille, producer of Columbia's "Lux Radio Theater," has arranged for a telegraph company to keep him informed of the team's progress by phone when radio or movie duties keep him from the ball park.

Orphans in Love

by Marion White

Peter's hand trembled with excitement as he took the book from Ellen. Half aloud, he read the brief descriptive sketch of Jonathan Tucker

SYNOPSIS

Ellen Carlan has loved Peter Storm since the days both were children together at St. Joseph's Orphanage. Peter refuses to declare his love for Ellen, fearing they would be improverished on his small salary should they marry while he is studying law. While picnicking near the orphanage, a storm causes them to take refuge in the old Tucker house, a deserted old mansion forbidden to them when they were children. In a picture on the wall they see a face so similar to Peter's that Ellen mistakes it for Peter's picture.

Chapter 4

"OF COURSE," Ellen stated with conviction. "Else why would they have his picture in the most prominent place in the house?"

"It might be anybody. Or nobody. They might just have picked it up in some art gallery." He stopped pacing about; he sat down in one of the wing-backed chairs and gave himself up to a critical scrutiny of the man above.

Soft little clouds of dust puffed out from the chair as he dropped into it; they swirled about for a moment and then settled inconspicuously on his light suit.

Ellen walked silently about the room, gathering composure from its reassuring dignity. Strange, she no longer felt like a trespasser.

Some unaccountable force of perception told her that the house welcomed them; she accepted the fact without trying to understand it.

Remembers Words

Peter's words on the hillside, a short time ago, occurred to her. Suppose I were born to a house like this. Well, then I'd belong. I'd have a place in the world.

She realized now what little difference it would make. Peter need merely change clothes with the old fellow above the fireplace and he would belong.

Was it only the actual possession which could make him content?

Her eyes lingered hungrily upon each new and treasured detail they discovered—a gilded lamp, hand-painted with deep red roses . . . a Chinese lacquered screen, the brilliance of its colorings dimmed yet not lost beneath the surface coating of dust . . . a pair of carved jade book ends on a massive mahogany desk . . .

She leaned over, blew the dust from the bindings of the books and glanced at unfamiliar titles. She would have passed on, had not the gold letters on the very last volume held her attention. "Notable New Yorkers," they proclaimed. Her mind repeated the words. Notable New Yorkers.

Would the Tucker family be included in such a collection? And if they were, would the book tell the story of their strange disappearance?

She picked it up quickly, wiped the outer dust with her glove and thumbed the pages. There were photographs, innumerable photographs, of men who had played their part in the development of a great city.

Brief paragraphs outlined their triumphs and achievements. Venerable dignitaries of men these were, bewhiskered like their own mysterious friend above the fireplace. Men of an older New York which had all but been forgotten. Railroad men, bankers, clergymen.

Physicians and Surgeons. Ellen read the captions eagerly. Old familiar names were there, names still to be found on every cross-street of Manhattan. But not Tucker.

"Peter! I've found him! The same one, Peter, look! The very same."

He jumped from the chair, roused from his reverie. His hand trembled with excitement as he took the book from her outstretched hand. Half aloud he read the brief descriptive sketch of the man.

"Jonathan Tucker was born in 1765 on a farm north of the city limits in the section later known as Riverview.

"When still a young lad, he won distinction as a dispatch carrier for the Colonial Army. Gen. Washington, in paying tribute to his ability, said: 'I have met many brave men in these past years, and many brave boys as well. But young Jonathan Tucker stands out in my mind.

" 'I have entrusted him with missions that would have struck terror in any adult heart. He has never failed me. I have observed him under the gravest circumstances. I have seen him run the gantlet of enemy fire with a courage that was unflinching and invincible.

" 'Whatever his personal fears, he braved every danger with a stout, resolute heart. The future of our American colonies will rest secure in the hands of such young men.' "

He Reads On

"Following the war," he read on, "Jonathan Tucker took to the sea. Several voyages around the world netted him a tidy fortune, and he returned to establish the shipping house later known as Tucker & Sons. He died in 1844, in the home he had built on the site of his birthplace."

His eyes danced. "This must be the very place, Ellen. This must be the house." He glanced up at the portrait once more, shook his head slowly. "What a man, Ellen! What a man he must have been!" A long, deep breath escaped him, tribute to the memory.
